CHAPTER I.

IN THE NAME OF THE COMPASSIONATE AND MERCIFUL GOD.

PRAISE be ascribed to God the lord of worlds; and the blessing of God be upon our Lord Mohammed, and upon all his posterity and companions. But to proceed: The poor, and needy of the forgiveness of his bountiful lord, Mohammed Ibn Fat,h Allah El Bailūnī states, that the following is what he extracted from the epitome of the Kātib Mohammed Ibn Jazzi El Kelbī (upon whom be the mercy of God), from the travels of the theologian Abu Abd Allah Mohammed Ibn Abd Allah El Lūnī of Tanjiers known by the surname of Ibn Battūta:† and, that he did not extract any thing except what was strange and unknown, or, known by report, but not believed on account of its rarity, and the frequent carelessness of historians in delivering down what has been reported, but what he himself considered as true, in consequence of the fidelity of the Traveller, and because he had written what he believed to be credible from histories of various nations and countries; and, because that which has been reported by faithful witnesses, generally receives credit and excites inquiry. Some of his statements, indeed, are opposed to the statements of others; as, for instance, his accounts of what he saw of the aromatic roots of Hindustan, which differ from those given by the physicians: and yet his accounts are probably the true ones.

* El Lūnī. We have in the geographical work entitled كتاب مر prv the following account of two places, to one of which this patronymic is undoubtedly to be referred. لونه بالغْهُ وَالنَّا، مثنا ناحية بالأندلس من قريش ولونه نبتة من البربر. Lawātā is a district of Karsh in Spain. It is also the name of a tribe of the Berbers. According to the same work جزْر Jazza is a place in Khorāsān موضع بالخراسان, to which the patronymic Jazzi is probably to be referred.

† Mr. Burckhardt writes this name Ibn Batouta, adopting the French pronunciation of ou I suppose. I have thought it more conformable with our orthography and pronunciation to write B

The Sheikh Ibn Batūta, the author of these travels, left his native city, "Tanjiers," for the purpose of performing the pilgrimage in the 725th year

Batūta. "There are two abridgments of these travels," says Mr. Burckhardt, "one by Ibn Djezy el Kelby (ابن دخلي الكليبي), the other by Ibn Fathallah el Beylouny (ابن فتح الله البيلوني); the latter I possess." He tells us in the same page that he possessed two copies of this abridgment; but the fact is, there are three among his books bequeathed to the University of Cambridge, all of which present the same text: the few variations found have evidently originated in the mistakes of the transcribers. Mr. Burckhardt writes Djezy, giving Dj for the Arabic ج. I have adopted Pocock's method of giving our j for this letter, with which it exactly corresponds. In this word جي some of the MSS. have جي, which I have no doubt is the true orthography. From the extracts printed in Germany by Professor Kosogartea and Mr. Apetz, it is quite certain that Mr. Seetzen's copy, which they probably used, is nothing more than an abridgment of the great work of Ibn Batūta; and although it presents some varieties with our copies, it is most likely a copy of the same abridgment. I may remark here, once for all, that, as the proper names of places are extremely erroneous in Mr. Burckhardt's abstract (Travels in Nubia, Appendix III), I shall not in future notice them; but shall give such words in this work as correctly as I can from the documents in my hands.

* The Arabian geographers divide Northern Africa into three parts, as given by Abulfeda in the following extract:

"And the north, the part of the west which is known as the Maghrib, is divided into three main regions: the first, the Kingdom of the Magnet, is on the western coast; the second, the region of the Middle Sea, is on the eastern coast; and the third, the region of the Sahara, is on the desert. The regions of the west consist of three divisions, the most western of which is..."
of the Hejirn (A.D. 1324-5). I shall mention here only the names of some of the districts through which he passed, although this may contribute but little towards impressing the reader with the greatness of his courage, his religious confidence, or his indefatigable perseverance, in overcoming the difficulties of passing deserts and of crossing mountains.

The first city, therefore, at which he arrived, was 'Tilimsān*; the next 'Mil-yāna; the next 'El Jazāer (Algiers): the next 'Bijāya; the next 'Kosantina† known by "the Extreme West." This part extends from the shores of the ocean to Tilimsān, considered in an eastward or westward direction: and again, from Subta to Morocco and thence to Sijilmāsa with the parts adjacent, considered from north to south. The second division is known by "the Middle West," and it extends from the east of Wahrān, which is one day's journey from Tilimsān eastward, to the boundaries of the kingdom of Bijāya. The third and eastern division is termed Africa, and this extends from Basca to the boundaries of Egypt. Abulfeda places Algiers in Bijāya, and states the longitude and latitude to be respectively 90° 50', 33° 30', reckoning the longitude eastward from the جزائر خليدات, i.e. from Ferro, the most westward of the Canary Islands 17° 52' west of Greenwich. The تُسْتِنْسِيْنَة of our traveller is by him written Kosantina, but the n has probably been omitted by the copist. He makes the longitude and latitude, according to the Atwāl, 28° 30', 31 30'; Ibn Said 24 40', 33° 22' respectively.

* In the تُلسَنَان بَعْضُهُمْ مُحَمَّلَة وبعضهم يقول تَلِمسان بَعْضُهُم عِرْضُ اللَّه بَعْضُهُم مُحَمَّلَة وبعضهم يقول تَلِمسان بَعْضُهُم عِرْضُ اللَّه بَعْضُهُم مُحَمَّلَة وبعضهم يقول تَلِمسان بَعْضُهُم عِرْضُ اللَّه بَعْضُهُم مُحَمَّلَة وبعضهم يقول تَلِمسان B & c. i.e. Tilimsān: some pronounce it Tinimsān with an n instead of the l: they are two walled and neighbouring cities in the west, between which there is the distance of a stone's throw: the one is ancient, the other modern.—The word is probably a dual. I notice this, because I find M. de Sacy writing it Telnisān.

† We have قَسْتَيْنِيْنَة, in the مَدِيْنَة خُبَّات السَّفَن, with this account of the place, مَدِيْنَة خُبَّات السَّفَن وَقَلَّة يَقَال لِها قَسْتَيْنِيْنَة لَهَا، هي قَلَّة كَبِيرَة عَالِيَة جَدَّا يَصِبَا الْعُرَاضَة بِهَا، وَهَيْنَا حُرَّة رَيْمَة جَرِيَّة أَحَدَهَا مِدِيْنَة خُبَّات السَّفَن, i.e. "A city and tower, the latter of which is termed Kosantina el Hawā. It is an extremely large and high tower, so that the birds cannot get to it without considerable effort. It is situated in the boundaries of Africa which limit the western parts, upon three large rivers navigated by ships." This place is also styled by El Harawi, in his book of pilgrimages, قَسْتَيْنِيْنَة الْهُوَر Costantina El Hawa, in which he says was a most wonderful bridge having only one arch, and that with a span of 150 paces: the only building like it was another in Khūsístān. مَدِيْنَة قَسْتَيْنِيْنَة بِهَا انْتَقَرَة مِن غَيْبَاء العَمَارَات الَّذِيْنَ اَلْقَطَّرَهْ
BARBARY.

the next Būna; the next 'Tūnīs; the next *Sawsa; the next Safākus.

التق علي باب ارجان ما يلي خوزستان التي تنسب الي الديلمي طيب الحياج ليس في بلد الأسلام مثلما طبق واحد ما بين العمردين مقدار ماية وخمسين خاتمة. In this place is a bridge, to which there is no equal in the countries of Islamism for its wonderful construction: it consists of one arch of 150 paces in extent between two piers, if we except that at the gates of Arjān upon the borders of Khūzistān, which is referred to El Dailami the physician of El Hejāj.

Of this other wonderful bridge we find some account in the work of Mr. Ulenbroek, taken from Ibn Haukal (p. 44), as follows: وَأَمَّا إِنَّهُ فَارِس دُلْدُب مَيْةٌ طَيِّبَةٍ تَخْرِيجُ مِنْ حَدِيدٍ أَصِهَانٍ وَجَبَالِها
فَنَظَّرُ بِنَاحِيَةِ السِّرْسُ بعد معرما بنواحي البرج وانصابها في نهر مس وهو النهر فيزج في نواحي
أصهان الي نواحي السرس وقِيَّمها عند قريه تْدِعي مِسْلا يَزْلَ مَا يَقَلُ على ناحيتها جاريا
باب إِرِجَانْ تَحْتَ قَطْرِةٍ لَّذا وَقَتْرْةٍ بَيْنَ فَارِس وَخَوْزِيْسَان تَلْيَةُ النَّطْرَةَ عندنِي اجْل مِنْ قَطْرِةٍ طَيِّبَةٍ مِنْ مَعْلُومٍ بَعْضِهَا فَارِس، فَنُقِيَتْ دِمانْدُ مَرْسَمَ وَلَمْ يَقِفْ في النَّطْرَةَ عَنْدَ هُدِيْن which he thus translates: "ad fluviis Persidis quod attinet, habet bonas aquas orientes in conffinis Ispahanæ ejusque montibus, et apparentes in regione Al Sardan postquam transierunt tractum Al Bordj. Sese exonerant in fluvium Masen, qui itidem e tractu Ispahanæ versus illum Sardani procedit. Conjunguntur prope vicum Masen dictum; neque desinit aqua fluere uberiis quam incolarum necessitates postulant, usque ad postam al Radjan sub ponte Tsakan; qui pons inter Persidem et Khouzistanum extantis pacos sibi pares habet, ita ut, me quidem judic, opere prestantior sit ponte Conduæ et ex laudatissimis Persæ rebus. Rigat pagum et urbem, deinde incidit in mare prope conffinis Schinia.” It may be remarked here, that the place termed by El Harawi, is given by Mr. Ulenbroek إِرِجَانْ. The former, however, is the reading given in the Calcutta edition of the Kāmoos, thus إِرِجَانْ دِ بنَفارْس i.e. El Arjān, a district in Fārā.
Abulfeda gives إِرِجَانْ, but says that it is also written إِرِجَانْ غ. Instead of إِرِجَانْ شَينِيزِر،
Abulfeda gives إِرِجَانْ | مِيسِينَزِر (See also pp. 31, 88 in Mr. Ulenbroek’s Translations).

* In Abulfeda،

تُوْنِس مدينة كِبْراً مُسهِدة بعَرِيقِية غَلِيْل السَّاحِل البَرَّ، عَمْرَت من انقاذ
فَرَطْجُهَا وَهُوَ الْمَيّض كان أَمَّا تُوْنِس تُرْبِيس قَبِيل حُسُتَّب بَعْضِهَا أَحَدَه وَعْشُورُ النَّفْفَنِ دِراع
وَهُوَ الْتَلْيَةُ مِنْ بَلْدَةَ الْأَفْرِيقِية وَشَرِيمْهُ من أَبَر وَمَصَانِعَ يَجْمَعُهَا مَعَاء السَّاحِل وَالْمِيْدِا تُوْنِس is a large modern city in Africa, situated upon the sea-shore. It was built from the ruins of Carthage which is two miles from it. Its walls are said to enclose twenty-one thousand cubits. It is now a village of Africa. They drink from wells and canals supplied by rain water. The port is towards its eastern part. Upon the authority of the geographical work entitled the Mostatarik (المشتري) Carthage, says Abulfeda، بلدة من أعمال افْرِيقيَة
قرب تونس بِرن من النَّافِر قَلِيل وَفْرَطْجُهَا إِنَّا مدينة بالأندلس من أعمال تُمْهرَ غَلِيْلها البَرَّ. It is a town in the districts of Africa near Tūnis، but now in ruins: there are in it many marks of ancient splendour. He also says، that this is the name of a city in Spain in the district of Tadmir، which was overflowed by the sea and destroyed.
Ibn Jazzi El Kelbi states, that on this place the following verses were written by "Ibn Habib El Tenükhi."

-May showers enrich thy happy soil, Fair land, where fanes and towers arise:
On thee let sainted pilgrims pour
  The richest blessings of the skies.
The wave that round thy bosom plays,
  Conscious of its endeared retreat,
When the rude tempest rocks thy domes,
  In sighs resigns its happy seat.
Yet urged another glance to steal
  Of thy loved form so good so fair,
Flies to avoid the painful view
  Of rival lovers basking thence.

And, on the other hand, "Abu Abd Allah Mohammed Ibn Abi Temim† has said:

As the Arabic text of this work is not likely soon to be printed, I shall occasionally give, in notes, such portions as I may think necessary, either for the purpose of promoting farther inquiry, or to present the reader with such specimens of Arabian poetry as may occur. The original lines of the above verses are as follows:

\[
\begin{align*} \text{سفيا لرز سفانتس} & \\ \text{تزررو أهلا شهلا} & \\ \text{كاننا وبيصرجر} & \\ \text{مبتيرد زيارة فنسانان رأي الزناد، ولي} \end{align*}
\]

This verse is a species of that termed the السبب or expanded. See Clarke’s Arabic Prosody, p. 51. The measure will be found at page 60, as follows, مستعمل ناعم تنعمن، and may be measured by its varieties. Tenükh is the name of a tribe in Bahrein, from which this poet probably took his origin. I have not been able to find any particulars respecting him.

† The following are the original lines:

قد عادين الجهرةنا في جوانها
فكلما ان يدنوا لها هيرا

The verse is of the species termed the السبب, expanded, and may be measured by مستعمل فعال، with its varieties. See Clarke’s Prosody, p. 52.

The author is probably Abu Abd Allah محمد بن أبي علي التميمي المازري الفقيه لماكي المحدث

EGYPT.

See the swelling angry tide,
Rage and beat against her side:
But, only ask a moment's stay,—
It hisses, foams, and rolls away.

The next city was that of 'Kabīs; the next 'Tarābulus (Tripoli). Ibn Batūta has stated, that he then passed on to 'Mesiāta and 'Mesurāta, and 'Kasūra Surt (or Palaces of Surt). We then passed, says he, the 'low grounds' (which may also mean the 'Forest), and proceeded to the palace of 'Barsīs the devotee, to the 'Kubbat El Islām, and to the city of 'Alexandria, where we saw one of its most learned men, the judge 'Fakhir Oddin El Riki, whose grandfather is said to have been an inhabitant of 'Rika. This man was exceedingly assiduous in acquiring learning: he travelled to 'Hejāz, and thence to Alexandria, where he arrived in the evening of the day. He was rather poor, and would not enter the city until he had witnessed some favour.

قابس. تارابلس. مسليان. مسرين. قصر سرت. الغابة. قصر برسيس.
قسطرد. نصر الدين الريقي. ريقة. آذب.

* In the we have, مراصد الاطلاع. تابع مدينة بين طرابلس وسقات ثم المهدية على ساحل جبل المغرب من أعمال إفريقية وها رمز الشر في كل مكان بينها وبين البحر فإنه يميل. Kabīs is a city situated between Tripoli and Safākus near El Mehdiyat, upon the shore of the western sea. In it is a station for ships from all parts: it is three miles distant from the sea.—El Harawi writes this name as above; and, in mentioning this place, stops to give an account of Erna as it was in his day, i.e. early in the thirteenth century. He says وجزيرة استقليه جبل النار مطل على البحر شاهد في اليوان يرى في الزهر الدخان طالع من في الليالي فحذ الإبل للحائت رجل من علماء البلاد اسمه رَبّان حبيانا على شكل السمن جماعي اللين يثير من وسط هذه النار يعود إليها ناقل هو المستمِّد ومنها رايت الأشجار سنة مقدمة مثل جبل النار العلم يقع من هذا الجبل الي ناحية البحر وقيل برغانه جبل معلن جبل أحجار يعاب بساده ثلاث أواقي بدرهم يبينون به الثواب. “In the island of Sicily there is a fiery mountain, which hangs over the sea. It is very high in the air, and during the daytime smoke is seen arising out of it, and in the night fire. One of the learned men of the country told me, that he saw an animal like a quail of a leaden colour fly out of the middle of this fire and again return to it. This he said was a salamadar (salamander). For my part, I saw nothing but black perforated stones, like the stone of the pes columbinus, falling from this mountain on the part near the sea. They say, that there is a similar mountain in Fargāna which burns stones, the ashes of which are sold three ounces for the dirhem, and with this they whiten their clothes.” From this it should seem, that salamadar is a corruption of sambal, an Arabic compound signifying quail-like. able omen. He sat, accordingly, near the gate, until all the persons had gone in, and it was nearly time for closing the gate. The keeper of the gate was irritated at his delay, and said to him ironically, enter Mr. Judge. He replied, yes, judge! if that be God's will. After this he entered one of the colleges, and attended to reading, following the example of others who had attained to eminence, until his name and reputation for modesty and religion reached the ears of the king of Egypt. About this time the judge of Alexandria died. The number of learned men in Alexandria who expected this appointment was large: but of these, the sheikh was one who entertained no expectations of it. The Sultan, however, sent it to him; and he was admitted to the office, which he filled with great integrity and moderation; and hence obtained great fame.

CHAPTER II.

One of the greatest saints in Alexandria, at this time, was the learned and pious Imām, Borhān Odīd El Aaraj, a man who had the power of working miracles.* I one day went in to him, when he said, I perceive that you are fond of travelling into various countries. I said yes; although I had at that time no intention of travelling into very distant parts. He replied, you must visit my brother Fārid Odīd in India, and my brother Rokn Odīd Ibn Zakaryā in Sindia, and also my brother Borhān Odīd in China: and, when you see them, present my compliments to them. I was astonished at what he said, and determined with myself to visit those countries: nor did I give up my purpose till I had met all the three mentioned by him, and presented his compliments to them.

* It is generally believed among the Mohammedans, that every saint has it in his power to perform miracles without laying claim to the office of a prophet. This kind of miracle they term karāmāt (كَرَامَة), benevolent action. See my Controversial Tracts on Christianity and Mohammedanism, p. 2, 352, &c.
Another singular man was the "Sheikh Yākūt, the Abyssinian, disciple of the Sheikh 'Abu Abbās El Mursī. This Abu Abbās was the disciple of the servant of God, 'Abu El Hasan El Shādali, &c. author of the "Hizb El Bahr,† famous for his piety and miracles. I was told by the Sheikh Yākūt, from his preceptor Abu El Abbās El Mursī, that the Sheikh Abu El Hasan El Shādali performed the pilgrimage annually, making his way through Upper Egypt, and passing over to Mecca, in the month of Rejeb, and so remaining there till the conclusion of the pilgrimage: that he visited the holy tomb, and returned by the "great passage to his city. On one of these occasions, and which happened to be the last, he said to his servant, Get together an axe, a casket, and some spice, and whatever is necessary for the interment of a dead body. The servant replied: and why, Sir, should I do this? He rejoined, you shall see Homaitara. Now Homaitara is situated in Upper Egypt; it is a stage in the great desert of Aidhāb, in which there is a well of very pernicious and poisonous water. When he had got to Homaitara the Sheikh bathed himself, and had performed two of

* The title of Wali (ولي) seems to be applied to none but such as have attained to the very last degree of mystic excellence. Jāmi tells us in the first chapter of the Žanāh Namā that the appropriation of this title belongs to those only, who have arrived at the last stage of mysticism, and may be said to be annihilated in the divine essence.

† In a bibliographical work entitled the "Index Geographicus in vitam Saladini" by Schultens under the word AIDABUM, and Burckhardt's Travels in Nubia, Appendix III. p. 519.
the prostrations of his prayers, when he died: he was then buried there. Ibn Batūta states that he visited the tomb, and saw upon it an inscription tracing his pedigree up to Hosain the son of Ali.

I heard, continues the Traveller, in Alexandria, by the 'Sheikh El Sāliḥ El Aābid* El Munfik, of the character of Abu Abd Allah El Murshidi, and that he was one of the great interpreting saints† secluded in the Minyat of Ibn Murshed: and that he had there a cell, but was without either servant or companion. Here he was daily visited by emirs, viziers, and crowds of other people, whose principal object it was to eat with him. He accordingly gave them food, such as they severally wished to have, of victuals, fruit, or sweetmeats: a circumstance which has seldom taken place in any days but his. To him also do the learned come for patents of office, or dismissal. These were his constant and well-known practices. The Sultan of Egypt too, El Malik El Nāsir, often visited him in his cell.

'I then left Alexandria (says the Traveller) with the intention of visiting this Sheikh (may God bless him), and got to the village of "Tarūja, then to the city of "Damānhūr the metropolis of the Delta; then to "Fawwāh not far from which is the cell of the Sheikh Abu Abd Allah El Murshidi. I went to it and entered, when the Sheikh arose and embraced me. He then brought out victuals and ate with me. After this I slept upon the roof of

---

* This word designates an order of the religious, whose business, according to Jāmi in the Ṣaḥīḥ al-Ṭabā'ī is to attend constantly on the service of God, particularly on works of supererogation with a view to their final reward, while a complete Sūfī follows truth, purely from the love of it; his words are: اما عبادان طالب انهم كه يروية يظافون العبادات وندون نوازل مواضيع وتلمذون معاذاً أرباب ثواب أخريين، وإن الشفاط المؤنث بوجود جده ولبي مؤاعر معرة وسراً أرور، خلقت عما خربناه، حتى بوسعنه برأي ثواب أخرين

† These seem to be nothing more than perpetuators of the ancient practices of divining mentioned so often in the Hebrew Bible. The influence these impostors still possess in the East is very great, as may be collected from the text in this place. It may not be uninteresting to the student of the Hebrew to find, that we have here the very word which is used to designate these pretenders in the Bible, namely, מַכָּשֵׁף or discoverer, revealer. A curious note on the methods employed by diviners of this sort will be found extracted from Ibn Khaldūn, in the second volume of M. de Sacy's Chrêstomathie Arabe, pp. 296-301. See also my Controversial Tracts on Christianity and Mohammedanism, p. 212.
his cell, and saw in a dream the same night, myself placed on the wings of a great bird, which fled away with me towards the temple at Mecca. He then urged towards Yemen; then towards the east: he then took his course to the south. After this he went far away into the east, and alighted with me safely in the regions of darkness (or arctic regions), where he left me.

I was astonished at this vision, and said to myself, no doubt the Sheikh will interpret it for me, for he is said to do things of this sort. When the morning had arrived, and I was about to perform my devotions, the Sheikh made me officiate; after this, his usual visitors, consisting of emirs, viziers, and others, made their calls upon him, and took their leave, after each had received a small cake from him.

When the prayer at noon was over he called me, I then told him my dream, and he interpreted it for me. He said, you will perform the pilgrimage, and visit the tomb of the Prophet; you will then traverse the countries of Yemen, 'Irak, 'Turkey, and 'India, and will remain in these some time. In India you will meet with my brother 'Dilshād, who will save you from a calamity, into which you will happen to fall. He then provided me with some dried cakes and some dirhems, and I bade him farewell. Since I left him, I experienced nothing but good fortune in my travels; but never met with a person like him, except my Lord 'El Wali Mohammed El Mowwalla, in India.

I next came to the city of 'El Nahrāriat, then to 'El Mohalla El Kobra (or the great station), from this I went to 'El Barlas, then to 'Damietta, in which is the cell of the Sheikh 'Jamāl Oddin El Sāwi, leader of the sect called 'Karenders. These are they who shave their chins and eyebrows.

---

* This, it should seem, is a sect of Sūfis, who pay little regard to any thing, but persuading themselves that they stand well with the Almighty, as may be seen in an interesting note from Makrizi by M. De Sacy (Chrest. Arab., tom. i. p. 263, edit. 2). In one instance, however, the learned Frenchman has mistaken his author, which it is important to rectify. After stating that they fast and pray but little, Makrizi proceeds, 'أَمْوَلِيْتَا بِتَحَاَبَّ شَيْءٍ مِنَ الْذَّاتِ المِلَََّلَا' which I translate thus: "they care nothing about the enjoyment of lawful pleasures:" but which stands thus in M. de Sacy: "ils ne font point de difficulté d'user des plaisirs licites:" by which I suppose he means, they make no scruple in indulging in lawful pleasures. In the extract from
EGYPT.

'It is said, that the reason which induced the Sheikh to shave off his beard and eyebrows was the following. He was a well made and handsome man; one of the women of Sāwah consequently fell in love with him; after this she was constantly sending to the Sheikh, presenting herself to him in the street, and otherwise soliciting his society: this he completely resisted. When she was tired of this, she suborned an old woman to stop him on his way to the mosque, with a sealed letter in her hand. When the Sheikh passed by her she said, Good Sir, can you read? Yes, he replied. She said, this letter has been sent to me by my son; I wish you would read it for me. He answered, I will. But when she had opened the letter she said, Good Sir, my son has a wife who is in yonder house; could I beg the favour of your reading the letter at the door, so that she may hear? To this he also assented; but, when he had got through the first door, the old woman closed it, and out came the woman with her slaves, and hung about him. They then took him into an inner apartment, and the mistress began to take liberties with him. When the Sheikh saw that there was no escaping, he said, I will do what you like: shew me a sleeping room. This she did; he then took in with him some water and a razor which he had, and shaved

Makrizi, moreover, two sects of these are noticed; the last of which, termed ملائمتى, pay very great regard to their actions and carriage in society.

The account given of these sects in the King of Oude's Persian Dictionary, entitled the Seven Seas, is as follows: The term Kalender (or Karender), signifies a being, perfectly relieved from the forms and objects of earthly usages, which do not confer happiness; and who is so far advanced in spiritual acquirements, as to be entirely freed from the restraints of custom or address. Having freed both body and soul from every person and thing, the Kalender seeks nothing but the beauty and glory of the Deity; and this he believes he obtains. But, such an one, feeling the least inclination to any thing existing, is termed a profligate, not a Kalender. The difference between a Kalender, a Melāmēt, and a Sūfī, consists in this: the Kalender labours to be freed and removed from all forms and observances. The Melāmēt, on the other hand, conceals his devotions from others, as he does every thing else tending to virtue; while he conceals nothing that is bad and vicious. The Sūfī is that person, who allows his feelings to be affected by no created being, and has no liking or dislike to them. The degree of the Sūfī is the highest; for perfectly separated and simplified as they are from worldly concerns, they nevertheless obey their spiritual senior, and walk in the footsteps of him and of the prophet. See also d'Herbelot, Bib. Or., under the word Calendar, and d'Ohason's Tabl. Emp. Ott., tom. ii. p. 315, as cited by M. de Sacy. off his beard and both his eyebrows. He then presented himself to the woman, who, detesting both his person and his deed, ordered him to be driven out of the house. Thus, by divine providence, was his chastity preserved. This appearance he retained ever after; and every one who embraced his opinions also submitted to the shaving off of his beard and both his eyebrows. *

It is also said of the Sheikh Jamāl Oddin, that after he had gone to Damietta, he constantly attended the burial-grounds of that place. There was at that time in Damietta a judge, known by the surname of Ibn Omait, who, attending one day at the funeral of one of the nobles, saw the Sheikh in the burial-ground, and said to him, you are a beastly old fellow. He replied, And you are a foolish judge, who can pass with your beast among the tombs, and know at the same time, that the respect due to a dead man, is just as great as that due to a living one. The judge replied, worse than this is your shaving off your beard.† The Sheikh said, mark me: he then rubbed a little alkhol on his eye-brows, and lifting up his head, presented a great black beard, which very much astonished the judge and those with him, so that the judge descended from his mule. ‡ The Sheikh applied the alkhol the second time, and, lifting up his head, exhibited a beautiful white beard. He then applied the alkhol the third time; and, when he lifted up his head, his face was beardless as before. The judge then kissed his hand, became his disciple, and building a handsome cell for him, became his companion for the rest of his life. After a while the Sheikh died, and was buried in the cell; and when the judge died, he was buried, as it had been expressed in his will, in the door-way of the cell, so that every one who should visit the tomb of the Sheikh, would have to pass over his grave:

* A very different account of the origin of this practice is given in a note from Makrizi, by
M. de Sacy (Chrest. Arabe, tom. i. p. 264, 2d edit.), in which it is said, that it must have originated about four hundred years before Makrizi's time; but, as Ibn Batūta lived more than one hundred years before Makrizi, it is probable that his account is the true one. Makrizi, besides, cites no author in support of his opinion, and probably says only what he might have heard.

† From this, as well as from what is related above about this woman, it may be seen how exceedingly reproachful it is considered in the East to shave off the beard. Compare Leviticus, xix. 27; xxii. 5. 2 Sam., x. 5. 1 Chron., xii. 5.

‡ Rebecca, we find, alighted from her camel (Gen. xxiv. 64), in order to pay respect to her future husband Isaac, just as the Judge here did to the Sheikh.
I then proceeded from this place to the city of "Fāriskūr, then to "Ashmūn El Rommān, then to the city of "Samānūd, then to "Misr (Cairo), the principal city of its district. The Nile, which runs through this country, excels all other rivers in the sweetness of its taste, the extent of its progress, and the greatness of the benefits it confers. It is one of the five great rivers of the world, which are, itself, the Euphrates, the Tigris, the Sihūn, the 'Jaihūn (or Gihon). Five other rivers too may be compared with them, namely, the river of "Sindia, which is called the "Panj āb (or five waters); the river of India, which is called the "Gung (or Ganges), to which the Indians perform their pilgrimages, and into which they throw the ashes of their dead when burnt: they say it descends from Paradise; also the river "Jūn (or Jumna): the river "Bhālt (Volga) in the desert of "Kifjāk, and the river "Sarv in Tartary, upon the bank of which is the city of "Khān Bālik; and which flows from that place to "El Khansā, and thence to the city of "Zaitūn in China, of which we shall give accounts in their proper places. The course of the Nile, moreover, is in a direction from the south to the north, contrary to that of all other rivers.

When I entered Egypt the reigning prince was "El Malik El Nāsir Mohammed Ibn El Malik El Mansūr Kālāwūn. The learned men then in Egypt were, "Shams Oddin El Isphāhānī, the first man in the world in metaphysics; "Rokn Oddin Ibn El Karīa, one of the leaders in the same

* That the water of the Nile was commonly drunk as early as the times of Moses, we are informed in the book of Exodus, chap. vii. See also Diodorus Siculus, lib. i. p. 49, edit. Wesseling. The Arabs, too, generally term this river the sweet sea (البحر الاصفر), in order to distinguish it from the Mediterranean, which they term the salt sea (البحر الالب). See M. de Sacy's Chrêstomathie Arabe, tom. ii. p. 15.
† Pekin, as will be shewn hereafter.
§ See D'Herbelot, under Schamseddin. science:* and the Sheikh ¹Athir Oddin Abu Haiān of Granada, the greatest grammarian.†

CHAPTER III.

The traveller continues: I then left Cairo, with the intention to go on the pilgrimage by way of *Upper Egypt, and came to the *Der El Tin (or monastery of clay). From this place I went to *Baush, then to *Dišā, then to *Bibā, then to *Bahnaṣā, then to the *Minyat of Ibn Khasīb,‡ which was formerly attached to the government of Cairo. It is said, that one of the Calífs of the house of Abbas was displeased with the people of Egypt, and took it into his head to place over them one of the meanest of his slaves, by way of punishment, and that he might afford an example to others. At this time Khasīb was the lowest slave in the palace, and his business was to get the baths warmed. He was accordingly appointed to the government, with the hope that he would sufficiently punish them by his tyranny, as it is usual with those who have not been brought up for such a station. But when Khasīb was established in Egypt, his conduct was exemplary in the extreme; and, for this, his fame was spread far and wide: the consequence was, he was visited by the relations of the Calíf, and other persons attached to the court, and these he loaded with presents. Upon one of these occasions the Calíf missed some of his relations, and upon

* Annales Muslemici, tom. v. p. 300-1.
† See D’Herbelot, under Abou-Haian.
‡ This place is noticed in an extract given in M. de Sacy’s Chrestomathie Arabe, tom. ii, pp. 3 and 5 of the French translation; as also in the Annales Muslemici, vol. iii. p. 750, where, as well as in the Appendix to M. de Sacy’s Rééations d’Egypte, by Abd el Latīf, the first of these words is written Monis or Minyat. It could have been wished that M. de Sacy had, in his Chrestomathie, given his reasons for changing his orthography.
inquiry found, that one of them had absented himself. After a time this man presented himself to the Calif, who interrogated him as to his absence. The man replied, that he had been paying a visit to Khasib in Egypt: he then told him of the gifts he had received, which were indeed of great value. This enraged the Calif so that he ordered the eyes of Khasib to be put out, that he should be expelled from Egypt, and cast out into one of the streets of Bagdad. When the order for his apprehension arrived, it was served upon him by an artifice, at some distance from his palace. He had with him, however, a large ruby, which he had hidden by sewing it up in his shirt during the night. His eyes were then put out, and he was thrown out in a street of Bagdad. Upon this occasion a poet happened to pass by, who said, O Khasib, it was my intention to visit thee in Egypt, in order to recite thy praises: but thy coming hither is the more suitable to me. Will you then allow me to recite my poem? How, said Khasib, shall I hear it? You know what circumstances I am in. The poet replied, my only wish is that you should hear it: but as to reward—may God reward you, as you have others! Khasib then said, go on with your verse. The poet proceeded:

Thy bounties like the swelling Nile,*
Made the plains of Egypt smile, &c.

When he had got to the end of the poem Khasib said, open this seam. He did so. Khasib then said, Take this ruby. The poet refused; but being

* The words of the original are:

انت خصيبة وهذه مصر
فندنا فكاك كما جهر

Thou art khasib (or plentiful year, for the word has this meaning), and this Egypt increases and abounds with plenty, like the Nile. The point of this distich seems to consist in the play upon the word khasib, which could not be transfused into the English translation, unless by some such circumlocution as the following:

Stores of the richest bounty! This thy name, Spreads like the Nile, at once its blessings and thy fame, &c.

I notice this merely to shew how difficult it is to preserve the spirit of this kind of poetry in a translation. The thirty-ninth story of the first book of Saadi's Gulistan (Persian Rose-garden) is founded on the history of this man. In some of the editions the name is erroneously pointed خصيبة for خاصب. Khasib for Khasib.

The line above cited is of the species البسيط, and of the measure مستعمل فعل نعلان, with its varieties. See Clarke's Prosody, p. 60.
adjured to do so, he complied; he then went to the street of the jewellers, and offered it for sale. He was told that such a stone could belong to none but the Calif. The account of it was accordingly carried to him, who ordered the poet to be brought into the presence. When he came there, he was interrogated on the subject, and his answers developed the whole matter.
The Calif was then sorry for what he had done to Khasib, and ordered that he should be brought before him. When he came, the Calif gave him some splendid presents, and ordered that he should have whatever he might wish. Khasib requested to have this Minyet given to him, which was done; and he resided there till the time of his death. After this his descendants held it, until the family became extinct.—I then proceeded to the city of Manlawi, then to Manfalût, then to Esoyût, then to Ekhmim, and then to Hawwa. Here I visited the Sheikh, Sayyud 'Abu Mohamed Obaid Allah El Hasanî, who was one of the great saints. When he asked me what my object was, I told him, that it was my wish to perform the pilgrimage by way of Judda. He replied, you will not succeed in this, upon this occasion; you had better return, therefore: for, the first pilgrimage you will perform, will be by the plain of Syria. When I left him, I made no effort to follow his advice, but proceeded on my way till I arrived at Aidhâb, and found that I could not go on. I then returned to Cairo, and after that to Syria (or Damascus); and the way I took, in my first pilgrimage, was just as the Sherif had told me, by the plain of Syria.

From Hawwa, therefore, I proceeded to Kanâ, then to Kaus, then to the city of El Aksar, then to Armanat, then to Esmâ, then to Edfû, then to Ajarna El Fil, then to the village of El Atwâni, in company with a tribe of Arabs known by the name of Dugaim. Our course was through a desert, in which there were no buildings, for a distance of fifteen days.
One of the stages at which we halted was Homaitara, the place in which the grave of El Wali Abu'l Hasan El Shâdhelî is situated. After this we came to the city of 'Aidhāb, the inhabitants of which are the 'Bejāh,* who are blacks. Among these people the daughter never succeeds to property.

---

* On these people see Hamaker's Liber de expugnatione Memphis et Alexandriae, pp. 57, 58. Burckhardt's Travels in Nubia, pp. 192-226. In this part of Mr. Hamaker's work a notice is given of the Berbers; and, as he seems to have mistaken its import, I may be excused in transcribing and translating it.

والبربرة أخرى لهم أرض في بحر الجيوب بين بلاد المصرية وبلاد النجيف بعلهم لهم عربة وهم السودان رهバッグ الذين يجتمعون مهر سنوهم لندوى ذكر الرجل وبسروين وهم بالرحاش (بالروحش) إشبه منهم بالأنسيج. The Berbers are another people whose country is situated upon the southern seas, between the districts of the Abyssinians and those of the Zinj; they are called Berbera. They are blacks, and are the people who make the dower for wives (this) that they (the men, not the women, as Mr. Hamaker proposes, by inserting the reading يططط) shall cut off the virilia of a man (perhaps an enemy), and also steal. They are more like beasts than men. Mr. Hamaker seems to have forgotten, that in the East, the person who marries a wife must provide the dower, just as gentlemen in this country make the jointure. Something like this seems formerly to have prevailed in Palestine; see 1 Sam., xviii. 25, 27; 2 Sam., iii. 14; and if these Berbers are actually of the same stock with those on the north of Africa, which Mr. Hamaker thinks to be the case, it is not improbable that this custom was brought with them from Palestine, as it is very probable these people are a part of those formerly expelled that country by Joshua. No one, perhaps, has taken so much pains to examine this question as Ibn Khaldūn has done; and his opinion decidedly is, that the Berbers are derived from Palestine, and descendants of Canaan. He also affirms that they are brothers to the Abyssinians, Copts, and Nubians; his words are: إنا نسيم بين البربرة خلاف بين نسبهم انهم من ولد شان وله نسيم إنا شان فنقال أبو حمود رهバッグ حزم في كتاب الجيوب قال بينهم ووجاناب رهバッグ.... (end of line). As to their genealogy (i.e., the Zenāţa tribe) among the Berbers, there is no discrepancy among the genealogists, that they are of the posterity of Shānā; and to him is their origin referred. As to this Shānā, Abu Mohammed Ibn Hasan has said, in the book called the Jamhurat (or collection), some have affirmed that this person is Jānā, son of Yahya, son of Bīdayn, son of Canaan, son of Ham, which is the truest statement. Of these are the tribe of Zenāţa and others, as we have already said; but they are the brothers of the Berbers because they all trace their descent up to Canaan the son of Ham. But, as to his (a certain writer) entering the pedigree of Goliath in that of the Berbers, since he is of
At this time, two-thirds of the revenue of Aidhāb went to the king of the Bejāh, whose name was 'El Hadrabi, the remaining third to the king of Egypt. The cause of our not proceeding thence to Judda, was a war that had broken out in these parts between the 'Bejāh and "Barnau people. I accordingly returned with the Arabs to "Kaws in Upper Egypt, and descended by the Nile to Cairo, where I lodged one night, and then set out for Syria. This happened in the month "Shaabān in the year twenty-six (A. H. 726—A. D. 1326).

CHAPTER IV.

After this I arrived at *Balbis, then at *El Salihīa. From this place I entered the sands (Desert), in which are the stages *El Sawāda, *El Wārid,

* This word is pronounced either Balbis or Bilbis; it is, according to the ten farsangs from Fustat in Cairo, on the road to Syria.
Katia, 'El Matilab, 'El Aarish,† 'El Kharūba, and 'Rafaj. At each of these there is an inn, which they call 'El khān. Here the travellers put up with their beasts; here are also watering camels, as well as shops, so that a traveller may purchase whatever he may want either for himself or his beast.

I next arrived at 'Gaza, and from thence proceeded to the city of 'El Khalil Ibrahim (Abraham the friend). In the mosque of this place is the holy cave, and in this are the tombs of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, with those of their wives. This cave I visited. As to the truth of these being the graves of those persons, the following is an extract made by me, from the work of Ali Ibn Jaafar El Rażī, entitled El Musīr Lilkulūb, on the true position of the graves of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob;* and which rests on a tradition from 'Abu Horaira, who has said, It was related by the prophet, that when he was on his night journey to Jerusalem, Gabriel took him by the grave of Abraham and said, descend and perform two prostrations, for here is the tomb of Abraham thy father. He then took him by Bethlehem.

*See an interesting note on this place in Hamaker's Liber de expugnatione Memphidis, &c., pp. 48, 49. The following from Makrizi I cannot forbear copying and translating: D ذكر مدينة بلبيس وسميته في النورية ارض جاشان (جاشان) التي ولده يسفي فانزل إلى ارض جاشان (جاشان) وهي بلبيس إلى الطاقة من أجل مواسمه تال ابن سعيد وألفا يصل حكمه الى الارض، وهي اخر حد مصر والها ينتهي المديغة بعدة الحيمة ويسير الناس يأتيين بلفلولا بعدها إلى العيش وهي أول الشام وقيل هي آخر مصر. Bablis is called, in the law of Moses, Jāshān (Goshen), and is the place to which Jacob went down after he had presented himself to his son Joseph. So he went down to the country of Jāshān (Goshen), which is Bablis, to the pasturage on account of their cattle. Ibn Said, who was governor of this place, has said, that its territory extends to El Wāridat, which is the extreme limit of Egypt. To this place is the common silver coinage current: but beyond it, and to El Arta, which is the first place of Syria, but as some say, the last of Egypt, are the fulūs (i. e. a sort of small copper coin) in circulation.

†On this place, which is the Rhinocorura or Rhinocolura of the ancients, see Hamaker's Liber de expugnatione Memphidis et Alexandrinis, p. 15.

The name of the author with the whole title runs thus: كتاب علي بن جعفر الزاهي الذي سماء المسفر للغزوب عن سمعة تمر برم واعتك وجهوب.
and said, perform two prostrations, for here was born thy brother Jesus. He then went on with him to El Sakhrat, and so on, as recorded in the tradition.

In the city of El Khalil was the aged saint and Imam, *Borhān Oddin El Jaabari, him I asked respecting the truth of the grave of Abraham being there. He answered, Every learned man I have met with has considered it as the fact, that these three graves are the graves of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and that the three graves opposite to them are those of their wives; nor does any one, continued he, think of contradicting accounts so generally received from the ancients, but the heretics.

CHAPTER V.

I then passed on to Jerusalem, and on the road visited the tomb of Jonas, and Bethlehem the birth-place of Jesus. But, as to the mosque of Jerusalem, it is said, that there is not a greater upon the face of the earth: and in sacredness, and privileges conferred, this place is the third. From Jerusalem I paid a visit to Askelon, which was in ruins. In this place was the meshhed, famous for the head of Hosain,† before it was removed to Egypt: Without Askelon is "the valley of bees," said to be that mentioned in the Koran. I next proceeded to *El Ramleh, then to *Naples,‡ then to *Eglon. From this place I set out for the maritime parts of Syria, passing by the route of Bawūd between two mountains, and called *El Ghawr. Here was the tomb of the guardian saint of this people, *Abu Obeidat Aāmir Ibn El Jarāh, which I visited: and then passed by a village

* This word, which is often seen in maps, means a place of attestation, i.e. the assembly of persons to give attestation to some fact, and should be pronounced meshhed.
† This was one of the sons of Ali, who fell in the battle of Karbela.
‡ The principal town of the Samaritans. called El Kosair, in which was the tomb of *Moṣḥ Ibn Jabali, which I also visited.

From this place I proceeded to 'Acca: in this is the tomb of *Sāliḥ the prophet, which I visited. After this I arrived at the city of 'Tyre, which is a place wonderfully strong,' being surrounded on three sides by the sea. Its harbour is one of those which have been much celebrated.

I next visited "Sidon, and from this place went into the parts of "Tiberias, which was my wish to see. The whole was, however, in ruins, but the magnitude of it was sufficient to shew that it had been a large place. The place is wonderfully hot, as are also its waters.* The lake is well

* The baths, &c. of Tiberias are thus described by El Harawi: حضَّام طَرْيَةَ الَّذِي يَقُالُ أنَّهَا مِن عِيْامِ الدُّنِيَّة لِيْسَتْ هذَهُ الَّتِي عَلَى بَابِ طَرْيَةٍ عَلَى جَانِبِ هُضَابِّهَا فَانَمَ مَلِكَ هذَا كَبِيرًا أَيْنَ الدُّنِيَّة وأِنَّهَا مِن عِيْامِ الدُّنِيَّة فَهُوَ وُجُوزٌ مِن أَعْمَالِ طَرْيَةٍ شُرِّقَتْ قَبِيلَ لَا صَبْحًا مِن سَاحَةِ وَلَام وَهِيْلٌ جُرْجَجُهَا مَرَاضِي مِن صَدِرَةٍ فَكَانَ جُرْجَجُهَا مِن أَنْتَيْ عَشْرَةٌ مَصْرَعًا وَكَلِبٌ مُصْرَعُهَا يُرَطَّبُ مِنّهَا إِنَّهُ اَسْتَغْلَبَ مِنْهَا صَاحِبٌ ذَلِكَ المَرْضِ بِشَرَايْعُهُ الَّذِي تَعَالَى وَالْمَا أَشْدَرَهُ حَرَازَةٌ رَأْسَيْنَ ما يُكَوِّنُ وَإِذَّذِبٌ وَأَطِيبٌ رَأْجَعَهَا وَهَذَا الْمَرْضُ يَقُدُّهُ إِخْتَابَ الْإِمَارَاتِ وَالْبَعْرَاتِ وَالرَّكْنِياتِ وَالرَّجْلِ مَيْلُوْنَ يَضَخِّسُهُ إِنِّي نَصْبُ مُهْيَقُهُ بِمَعْمَالٍ كَبِيرٍ حَسُنٍ يَعْضُجُ النَّاَسُ فِيهِ وَصُنْعُهُ ظَاهِرٌ وَما رَاءِيْنَ مَا يُثَابُهُ الْأَثْرُمَا الَّذِي فِي هَذِهِ خُصُومِ القُطُرَتِيَّةٍ &c. i.e.

"The baths of Tiberias, which are said to be one of the wonders of the world, are not those which are near the gates of Tiberias and upon the side of the lake, for many like these are to be seen elsewhere; but those which are described as wonders are in a place to the east of the city called El Hosainija, and situated in a valley. It is evidently an ancient structure, and is said to have been built by Solomon. It consists of a pile of building, from the front of which issues water. It came formerly from twelve places, each of which was appropriated to the cure of some disease, so that when any one thus afflicted washed himself, he recovered by divine permission. This water is excessively hot, and is very pure and sweet, both to the taste and smell. To this place come many afflicted persons, maimed, aged, or those affected with bad smells, and wash themselves in it. Its fountains run into a large and handsome place, and in this the people bathe. The advantages it affords are evident; nor have we ever seen any thing like it except the Thermes (baths) which are in the confines of Constantinople." We are told a little farther on, that on the road from Tiberias to Acca is Kafer Manda, and that this is said to be Midian; and that the writer also visited Midian, which is to the east of Sinai; the words are: وَأَيْضاً مِن مَّدِينَةٍ طُرِيَّةٍ يَقُالُ عَلَى مَدِينَةٍ عِدَّةً يَقُولُ لِهَا كِرْمَانْةٌ قَبِيلَ اَنْهَا مَدِينَةٍ وَاللَّهُ أَعْلِمْ وَقَدْ زَيَتْنَا مَدِينَةٍ شَرَّى طُرِيَّةٍ &c. That a Midian was formerly found in both these parts appears from the Hebrew bible; but whether they were connected, or if they were, bow, I believe no one can tell.
known: its length is six parasangs; its width three. In the town is a mosque, known by "the mosque of the prophets:" and in this is the tomb of 'Shoaib (Jethro) which I visited. I also visited the well of Joseph, which is famous in these parts.

I next arrived at 'Bairût which is on the sea-shore, and then set out to visit the tomb of 'Abu Yaakûb Yûsuf, who is supposed to have been one of the kings of the west. It is situated in a place called 'Kark Nûh, and upon it is a cell endowed by the sultan 'Salâh Oddîn Ibn Ayûb.* It is said, that this Abu Yaakûb lived by weaving mats: it is also said, that he was hired to keep some orchards in Damascus, for the sultan 'Nûr Oddîn the martyr, the preceptor of Salâh Oddîn. After he had been some time in this situation, Nûr Oddîn happened to come into the orchard, and to ask the keeper for a pomegranate. He brought several, one after another, each of which, however, had the appearance of being sour. It was said to him, have you been all this while in the orchard, and do not yet know a sweet pomegranate from a sour one? He replied, I was hired to keep the orchard, not to eat the pomegranates. By this the sultan knew who he was, and sent for him accordingly: for he had had a dream, in which he thought he met Abu Yaakûb, and derived some advantage from him. When he was come, he believed he knew his countenance too, and said, are not you Abu Yaakûb? He replied, I am. The sultan then rose and embraced him, and made him sit by his side. After this Abu Yaakûb took the sultan to his house, and entertained him out of his honest earnings: and with him the sultan remained some days. After this Abu Yaakûb escaped, and could no where be found. The weather was at that time exceedingly cold, and Abu Yaakûb had betaken himself to a village, where he was honourably entertained by one of the villagers. This man had a daughter whom he wished to dispose of in marriage, and on this account represented to Abu Yaakûb the difficulty he experienced in affording him support. Upon this he was ordered to bring together all the copper furniture he had provided for her dower, and moreover, to borrow as much as he could from his neighbours.

* This was Saladin, who distinguished himself so much during the Crusades.
The villager accordingly got together a considerable quantity of this metal. Abu Yaakûb then dug a pit and put the whole into it. Upon this he made a fire which fused the metal, he then took out some elixir which he had with him, and putting it upon the metal, the whole became pure gold. When the next morning had arrived, Abu Yaakûb wrote a letter to his host for Nûr Oddin the martyr, telling him to take out of this gold as much as would make a handsome portion for the young woman; also to give as much as would be sufficient to her father, and to expend the remainder in pious uses. He then made his escape by night. With this gold Nûr Oddin built the infirmary which is in Damascus.

I next arrived at *Tarabulás (Tripoli) in Syria, which is a large city, and may be compared with Damascus. From this place I went to the fortress of the Kurds, then to *Emessa, and visited the tomb of Khâlid Ibn El Wafîd, which is in its environs. I next arrived at the city of Hamâh.†—The epitomator Ibn Jazzî El Kelbi says that the following verses were composed on this place by *Abu’l Hasan Ibn Said of Granada.

† May heaven from the seat of fair Hamah divide
The breath, thought, or glance, which may make her repine;
Wreak its vengeance on him who would part from her side,
For the smiles of the fair or the juice of the vine.
But when through her streets rolls triumphant along Rebellion’s foul tide, all in current so fair;
Then who shall refrain from the glass and the song,
When the banquet is spread and so plentiful there?
Yet, when the full goblet goes round, let me view
Her breasts flow with sweets for her children within:
Mark the tear of the mother—then say O how true,
How vile, yet how lovely’s the city of Sin!

† The Hamath of Scripture.

وقفت عليها السماع والفكر والطرّان َبِها وَإِلَى الكأس والبلوى والتُّقُفا
احكيه عصياناً واشربه صرفاً والدَّوِّر

حمي الله من شقي حماة منازرا
ولموتي أن أمعي الصور التي
لما كان فيها الهُجَّاع فكيف لا

* حماة - حمص - خالد بن الوليد - حماد - أبو أحمد بن معين الغزالي.
The following too has been composed on the same place:

* (Heroes of Hamah’s happier days,
Yours my theme, my tribute, praise:
Of you, the recollections sweet
Hang on my heart, and still we meet.
And should forgetfulness despoil
The flowret reared with so much pain,
A sinner’s tears shall drench the soil,
And then ’twill sweetly bloom again.)

The *Aāsi (sinner or rebel) is a river of Hamah. I next went to the city of *Maarrat El Nāomān, the place from which the patronymic of *Abu El Alā El Maarī† is derived. It was named Maarrat El Nāomān because *El Nāomān Ibn Bashir the Ansār and companion of the Prophet, lost a son there, when he held the government of Emessa. Before this time it was called *Dhāt El Kusūr (i.e. *ended with palaces). It is also said, that it is so * عاصي. معرة النعمان. عابعلا العزي. النعمان بن بشير. ذات القصير.

---

واشدوا لي نتلت (ه) الرايعر شدوها وتشربها من غفر
تتم معرهها ونفها العظمة (ه)

(a) With the *رواعر or mills, they draw up water out of wells in order to supply gardens, &c. The word also means a vein pouring out blood; and hence the allusion in the text is not unlike Shakspeare’s “life-rendering pelican.” For some account of the author of these lines, see M. de Sacy’s Chrestomathie Arabe, 2d ed., tom. i. p. 240-3.

(5) This verse is of the species termed *طول. The measure with the usual varieties will be

See Clarke’s Prosody, p. 35, &c.

* The text is as follows:

ياء ساءة سكنا حماة وحركم
ماحلت عن ثقتي وعس اخلاصي
الطرف بعدم أذا ذكر الفت

Where the play is in these, as in the preceding lines, on the name of the river Aāst (عاصي), which signifies sinner or rebel.

† This was a very celebrated poet and commentator, named generally Abu’l Alā El Tenūkhi, and surnamed El Maarrī. Tenūkhi is, according to Jurhart, the name of a tribe in Yemen, and this Soyūtī places in Bahrein. The author of the Kāmūs and Pococke say generally, that it is the name of a tribe. See Pococke’s Sec. Hist. Arab. p. 42-141. Chrestom. Arabe, tom. iii. p. 89.
called from a mountain named Nöömän, which overhangs it. Without this place is the tomb of Omar Ibn Abd El Azîz, commander of the faithful. After this I arrived at Sarmin, then at Haleb (Aleppo). Its citadel is large and strong; and within it is a meshed, in which Abraham is said to have performed his devotions. On this place El Khâlidi, the poet of Saif El Doulat Ibn Hamdân, has said:

Land of my heart, extended wide,
Rich in beauty, great in pride:
Around whose head to brave the storm,
The rolling clouds a chaplet form.
Here 'tis the empyreal fires glow,
And dissipate the gloom below.

* In the book of intimations respecting the knowledge of the places of pilgrimage, by Ali Ibn Abu Bekr El Harawi, who travelled during the times of the Crusades, and fell into the hands of the king of England, are the following notices of this place: وتباطئها وما من فئات سائر السماوات في قطعة من رأس حسب بن زكريا عليه السلام ظهرت سنة خمس وثلاثين واربعية In its (i.e. of Aleppo) citadel is the station of Abraham the friend (of God), and in it is also a chest in which there is a piece of the head of John the son of Zachariah. It was observed in the year 435, i.e. A.D. 1043. A little lower down we have an account of a custom, which will in some degree illustrate the homage, if not the idolatrous worship, formerly addressed to the pillars called in the Hebrew bible ملاكت. The first account we have of these is in Gen. xxviii. 18, where we are told that Jacob set one of them up and poured oil on the top of it. Here, says the traveller, جبر المكاباب اليهود على طريق ينذر له ويبش عليه مَا الورد والطيب والمسلمين فيه اعتاد والنصراني ويقال العتيقة جرب بعض الأنبياء والملائكة إلهاً واتَّهَسَاه. Without the gate of the Jews there is a stone upon the road: to this vows are made, and upon it they pour rose-water and perfumes; both Mohammedans and Christians have faith in the practice. It is said that the grave of some prophet is under it; but God knows best. This work I shall occasionally cite. See a very interesting note on this subject in the Specimen Hist. Arab. by Pococke, ed. 1806, p. 102-3, where, l. 15, read وسمى الرجل et appelabatur Saturnus, not quo appelabatur vir iste. This very learned writer, having been betrayed into the very mistake which he corrects at the foot of the page in De Dieu, Edrisi mentions a similar custom as prevailing in the islands of the Indian sea, sect. vii. clii. i. His words are مدنية نرونها وهي الخرير الكفر ... لذى لا يعتقدون شياً وأنهم يأخذون الزخارف التي غلبتهمها بذور السمك ويجدون لها. The city Barwah is the last of those belonging to the infidels who believe in nothing, but who take stones which they set up on their ends, pour the oil of fish upon them, and then worship them.
SYRIA.

About thy breast in harmless blaze,
The lightning too for ever plays;
And like the unveiling beauty's glance,
Spreads round its charms 'tastonish and entrance.*

The following lines are by "Jamāl Oddin Ali Ibn Abu Mansūb:
† Thy milky towers in proud array,
Stop in its course the galaxy:
When see, the children at thy side
Rise and sip the ambrosial tide:
See too thy flocks the glories share,
And crop the gems† that glitter there.

Jamal ad-Dīn Abī 'Abī Muḥammad

* The text is as follows, of the measure ٌطَرِيل. See Clarke's Prosody, pp. 35, 36, &c.

† The verses are these, the measure of which is البسيط. See Clarke, p. 59, &c.
I then left Aleppo for 'Tizin, and soon after came to 'Antioch, before which is the river 'El Aāsī. In this place is the tomb of 'Habib El Najār, which I visited. After this I arrived at the fortress of 'Bugarās, next at that of 'El Kosair, then at that of 'El Shaghar. I next came to the city of Sahyūn, then to the fortress of 'El Kadmūs, then to that of 'El Aalikat, next to that of 'El Manikat, next to that of 'Masyūf, then to that of 'El Kahf. These fortresses all belong to a people called the 'Ismā'ilīah; they are also called the 'Fidāwia. No person can go among them except one of their own body.* These people act as arrows for El Malik El Nāṣir; and by their means he comes at such of his enemies as are far removed from him, as in Irāk and other places. They have their various offices; and, when the Sultan wishes to despatch one of them to waylay any enemy, he bargains with him for the price of his blood. If then the man succeeds and comes safely back, he gets the reward; but if he fails it is then given to his heirs. These men have poisoned knives, and with these they strike the persons they are sent to kill.

From the fortresses of the Fidāwia I went to the city of 'Jabala, where I visited the tomb of the Sheikh 'El Wali El Sālih Ibrahim Ibn Adham,† who had not succeeded to the kingdom from the father's, but from the mother's side. The father was originally one of the pious wandering Fakirs: his story of giving up the throne is generally known. I then proceeded to 'Laodicea, the king of which is said to seize by violence every ship within his power. I then proceeded to the fortress of 'El Markab, then to the mountain 'El Akraa, then to 'Mount Libanus, which is the most fruitful mountain in the world: and on which are various fruits, fountains of water, and leafy shades. Nor is it destitute of those who have retired from the

---

* On this sect, which are sometimes termed Assassins, see the Dabistan, usually ascribed to Mohammed Mohsin Fāni, Calcutta edition, p. 'E M. de Sacy's Chrest. Arabe, tom. i. pp. 89, tom. ii. pp. 92, 93; Journal Asiatique, numbers for May and June 1894, and De Guignes' Histoire générale des Huns, tome i. p. 341. † See the فتوحات الأندلس a little from the beginning. world and devoted themselves to God, numbers of whom I myself saw. From this place I proceeded to 'Baalbek, and thence to "Damascus, in the month of Ramazān," and in the year twenty-six (i.e. A.H. 726, A.D. 1326). It has been said by the Epitomactor, Ibn Jazzi El Kelbi, that "Sharf Oddin Ibn Anin wrote the following lines on this place:"

Damascus ! though the slanderer fill Worlds with thy blame, I love thee still.
Spot, where alone the traveller meets Balmy winds and pearly streets:
Where tearful streamlets weave† their chains,
Yet joy and freedom bless the plains:
Where too the gales with lusty love
Fan into bloom the fainting grove.‘

The following was written on the same place by the eminent judge, "Abd El Rahim El Baisani.†

---

* An extract from the works of this author will be found in the Annales Moslemici, vol. iv. p. 268, and some account of his life at p. 416, of the same volume. The lines mentioned by Ibn Batūta are the following:

وان يم رأس أو ما عدل عبرانافس الشمال شمل
وح نسيم الريش وهو عليل

† The orientals, instead of saying that a stream is rippling, say that it links or forms chains; hence the comparison of the chaining of the rivers with the freedom of the plains.

† Some notice is taken of this writer in M. de Sacy's Chrestomathie Arabe, tome i. pp. 238, 505. The original verse is as follows, and is of the species البسيط. See Clarke's Prosody, pp. 52, 53, &c.

يا برق هل لكت في احتمال خيبة
بكر دمشک بتران اقلم عريغ
مغني نازر بالغة وتريرة
واجري جيرون زيري واختصص
حيث alumno ترعي مخلول الملا

El Harawi says of this place. دمکش هي ذات العماد التي لم تخلص منها في البلاد وقيل

Damascus abounds with high buildings, such as have not elsewhere been constructed. It was built by Dimashik, son of Kabi, son of Malik, son of Shem, son of Noah: it is also said that Lightning! with thy pouring rain,
How dost thou befriend the plain?
Why, 'ere the morning's dawn arise,
Spread'st terror through Damascus' skies?
Is't that thy flames may bid her glow,
Or gild her flowrets opening blow?
Or, that her plains refreshed be seen,
Filled with fruits, and clothed in green?
Yes, 'tis that blessings round may spring,
And verdure make the vallies sing.

The mosque of Damascus, termed 'El Amawi, is too well known to need description here. Of its learned men, professors, and theologians, of the sect of Hanbal, 'Taki Oddin Ibn Timia may be mentioned as one in great repute for his lectures, if we except a few of his peculiarities. The people of Damascus, however, think very highly of him. In many instances he has preached things to which the theologians have objected; and, hence an information was laid against him to 'El Malik El Naisir, who sent for him to Egypt, and there imprisoned him. When in prison he published a commentary on the Koran in forty volumes, entitled 'El Bahr El Muhit.* After this he was liberated; but, going again to Damascus, he returned to his old practices of preaching heterodoxy. I happened one Friday to be present when he was addressing a congregation from the pulpit, and this was one of his assertions: God came down, said he, to the heaven of this Zohak built it, and also that it was the residence of Noah. There is a passage in the book of Genesis (chap. xv. v. 2) in which our authorized version has "This Eliezer of Damascus," and which I believe to be erroneous. The original stands thus: אליעזר בר מצרי יראש אליעזר as the version gives it. My opinion is, that this is the proper name of Abraham's servant and nothing more: Damascus might, indeed, have been built by him, but of this we have no knowledge. A little farther on we are told, that there is a column in the mosque near the little gate, to which pilgrimages and vows are made: this is probably one of the ancient מערבי of which we so often read in the Hebrew bible. His words are these وعامد... عند الباب الصغير في مسجد يزاريذره.

* This is probably the work noticed by D'Herbelot under the title Bakar al Mohit, although the name does not agree with that given here. Neither of them, however, has given the full name, and this will perhaps account for the discrepancy.
world, just as I now go down: and upon this he descended one of the steps of the pulpit. A theologian of the sect of Ibn Mālik, happening to be present, contradicted this; for which he was beaten by the congregation. The opponent, however, lodged an information with El Malik El Nāsir, who again cited the Sheikh, and put him in prison, where he continued till his death.† He was afterwards buried at Damascus.

Without the gate called 'El Jābiat are the tombs of "Om Habiba wife of the prophet, of her brother "Moāwia, of "Balāl the Moainiz of the prophet, and of "Awis El Karanî. The grave of the last, however, is said to be in a burying-ground between the city and Syria, in which there is no building. It is also said to be in "Siphin with that of Ali. It is said by Ibn Jazzi El Kelbi the epitomator, that the latter is the truer opinion. Ibn Batūta proceeds: without Damascus on the way of the pilgrimage, is the "mosque of the foot," which is held in great estimation, and in which there is a stone having upon it the print of the foot of Moses.† In this mosque they offer up their prayers in times of distress. I myself was present at this mosque in the year 746 (A.D. 1345), when the people were assembled for the purpose of prayer against the plague: which ceased on that very day. The number that died daily in Damascus had been two thousand: but, the whole daily number, at the time I was present, amounted

* According to Ibn El Athir, in his abridgment of patronymics from El Samaāni, entitled كتاب الاليب لابن الثير الجزيري, this patronymic (i.e. كرن in karani), is derived from one Karan of the tribe of Morād; he was the son of Rīdān, son of Nāhīa, son of Morād. This Awis was son of Aämmer of this family; he was a great saint, and is said to have been killed among the infancy of Ali at Sifīn; others say he died at Mecca, others at Damascus. The passage is this.

† There can be no doubt, I think, that these marks of the foot, whether we find them at Damascus, in Ceylon, among the Burmese, at Mecca, or wherever else, are nothing more than remains of Buddhism. The best relique of this superstition to be seen in Europe is, perhaps, the mark of the foot of Buddha placed in the hall of the British Museum by Captain Marray.

‡ The passage, which I suspect is erroneous, stands thus: ثم انتهي بحضرت في كل يوم الى اربعة: وعشرين الفا The words daily, are perhaps adscititious.
to twenty-four thousand. After prayers, however, the plague entirely ceased. On the north of Damascus is the mountain 'Kāsāyūn, in which is the cave where Abraham was born. From this (cave) he saw the sun, moon, and stars.* There is also a village in 'Irāk called 'Būra, between 'El Hilla and Bagdad, which is said to be the birth place of Abraham. This is the truer notion. On the farther part of the Kāsāyūn is the 'mount of flight and assistance,† the asylum of Jesus.

CHAPTER VI.

When things were ready, the Syrian pilgrims proceeded on their pilgrimage, and I myself with them, with the same intention. This turned out well; for, thank God, I duly performed the pilgrimage; and, then proceeded with the pilgrims of Irāk to the tomb of the prophet at Medina. After three (days) we descended into the valley of El Arūs.‡ We then entered the territory of Nejd, and proceeded on in it till we came to El Kādisia§ the place in which the remarkable event happened, by which the fire-worship of Persia was extinguished, and the interest of Islamism advanced. This was, at that time, a great city, but it is now only a small village. We next proceeded to the city of Meshhed Ali, where the grave of Ali is thought to be. It is a handsome place and well peopled; all

* Alluding to a passage in the Koran.

† It is doubtful whether we ought to read 'Dāt al-fārār or 'Dāt al-farrār, as the MSS. have both readings: if the latter, then residence must be substituted in the translation for flight.

‡ The name of a fortress in Yemen, according to the Kāmoos: but this can hardly be the place mentioned here.

§ A village near Kūfa where Saad, one of the generals of Omar, obtained a decisive victory over the Persians. See the Annales Muslemici, vol. i. p. 231.
the inhabitants, however, are of the Râfiza (or Shiâh) sect. There is no governor here, except a sort of tribune. The inhabitants consist chiefly of rich and brave merchants. About the gardens are plastered walls adorned with paintings, and within them are carpets, couches, and lamps of gold and silver. Within the city is a large treasury kept by the tribune, which arises from the votive offerings brought from different parts: for when any one happens to be ill, or to suffer under any infirmity, he will make a vow, and thence receive relief. The garden is also famous for its miracles; and hence it is believed that the grave of Ali is there. Of these miracles, the "night of revival" is one: for, on the 17th day of the month Rejeb, cripples come from the different parts of Fârs, Room, Khorâsân, Irâk, and other places, assemble in companies from twenty

---

* Mr. Wolfe, the missionary, when last in this country, reported that the ليلة المعيا or "night of revival," among the Yezidi sect, is a night on which they worship the devil. I should doubt whether Mr. Wolfe did not misunderstand the accounts he might have heard of this matter. In the Book of Pilgrimages, by Ali Ibn Abuker of Herât, we have a similar account given of a place in the lietuenancy of Aleppo, his words are: براق قريه من اعمالها بها معبد يقصده الزهري والرزي من الاماكن ويبيتون به فاما أن يصر المريض من يقول له دزن للك في الشي الثقافي أو يصر من يصح بهيه عليه يقوم وقد ير باب الله تعالى كما ذكر هنا وله الموضع. Borâk is one of the villages of its lietuenancy, in which there is a sacred place visited by the aged and infirm of various places, and in it they lodge. Now, if such person should see (in his dream) some one saying to him, such or such a thing is thy remedy; or if he should see him rubbing his hand over him, he will then be well, as the people of that place report. And further on where the city of Balat (مدينة بلاط) is noticed, we are told, that this Author saw a man who had been lame many years, but had been recovered merely by bathing, according to the injunctions of Ali which he had received in a dream. His words are ورايت لهذا الموضع آية عظيمة وقال انه كان بالموصل رجل طويل يمشي على اطلق من الأصابع ونحو رجله خلقه كأنما خرج به في أثر ما لشراء الناس وهو معروف بالموصل ناري على ابي طالب رقي الله عنه في المقام وذكر أنه قال له اسمه علي مسجد وادي عمر بن عثمان لائز فيث نفيت آية فعمله على هذا الموضع فأغفل من المأز الذي يزوره وعاد الي المويل ماسيا على قدمه وسمو عبد على رحله في العياء والله اعلم. That such miracles (if such they may be called) can be performed, without any extraordinary effort being exerted, has long been known. A strong persuasion of the mind has always proved wonderfully efficacious: and to this the Mohammedan, as well as the Roman Catholic, hierarchy owes perhaps more than half its authority.
to thirty in number. They are placed over the grave soon after sun-set. People then, some praying, others reciting the koran, and others prostrating themselves, wait expecting their recovery and rising, when, about night, they all get up sound and well. This is a matter well known among them: I heard it from creditable persons, but was not present at one of these nights. I saw, however, several such afflicted persons, who had not yet received, but were looking forwards for, the advantages of this "night of revival."

I next arrived at "Baara, and proceeded on with the Badawin Arabs of "Khafaja, for there is no travelling in these parts, except with them. We next came to "Khawarnak, the ancient residence of "El Nöomän Ibn Mond-hor, whose progenitors were kings of the tribe "Beni Mä El Samä, (sons of heavenly seed). There are still traces of his palace to be seen. It is situated in a spacious plain, and upon a river derived from the Euphrates. We left this place, and came next to the city of "Wäsit. It is surrounded by an extensive tract of country, and abounds with gardens and plantations. Its inhabitants are the best of all Iräk. From this place I set out to visit the tomb of El Wäli El Aärif, my Lord Ahmed of "Repheät, which is

---

* Some notices of this person and his palace will be found in the Historia imperii vetustissimi Joctistantures in Ambia Felice, by A. Schultena, p. 129. And in his Monumenta vetustiora Arabie, pp. 11, 39, 47.

† The following is an abstract of the account given of this devotee in the Nafrät El Ins, by Jami: the miraculous intercourse, &c. these ascribed to him, I have not thought it worth while to copy out. شيخ سيدي أحمد بن علي (أبو) أسس الزعيم تدنس الله تعالى... ذو الفقارات البارية، وإله السلامة خranking) الله مغتنص على بديع العواء، وقبيله للاحياين وناظر الأعجاب، ولكن إحسانه نقين (ففيهم) الجيد وراثي يدخل بعضهم الديرن وفلم يعب للأيام نذأ ما عرفه الشيخ (والإسماع لاحبا إحسانه نعوذ بالله من الطيفين ونأول أبام تزركار). موسي كاهن أسست عليه السلام... سنة أم عبد بدته... وتوفي رمي الله عهده (عنده) يوم الخمسين الثاني والعشرين من جمادي الأول سنة ١٢٢٠ وسبعين وخمسين. The Sheikh my lord Ahmed Ibn Abu El Hasan El Raphäi, may God sanctify (a word wanting). His rank as a saint and confessor was high. By him God performed many miracles, and converted to him many persons of distinction. He also did many wonders. Of his disciples, some are good, others bad. Some of them will enter fires, and play with serpents. This is what the Sheikh the head of saints taught them. God protect us from Satan. He was one of the sons of the great Imam Mūsä Kārim, upon whom be peace. He resided at Om Obeida, and died on the Thursday the 22d of the first Jumâda, in the year (of the Hejira) 578, A. D. 1182.

F
situated in a village called "Om Obaida, at the distance of a day from Wāsīt. At this place I arrived, and found that the grandson of the Sheikh, upon whom the dignity of Sheikh had also devolved, had come thither before me for the same purpose. He was also named Sheikh Ahmed, and held the dignity of his grandfather, which he exercised in the cell formerly occupied by him. In the afternoon, and after the reading of the koran, the religious attached to the cell got together a great quantity of wood, to which they set fire: they then walked into it, some eating it, others rolling in it, and others trampling upon it, till they had entirely extinguished it. Such is the sect called *El Re-phāa, and this the custom by which they are particularized. Some of them too will take great serpents in their teeth and bite the head off. It happened that, when I was in a certain part of India, there came to me a company of the religious of the Hydaria sect, having in their hands and about their necks iron chains. Their leader was a black of a filthy colour. They requested me to solicit the governor of the place to bring them some wood to which they may set fire, and then sing and walk into it. I did so, and he brought them ten bundles; they then set fire to it, and commencing their song, went into it: nor did they cease dancing and rolling about in it until they had extinguished it. The leader then asked me for a shirt. I gave him a very fine one, which he put on, and then proceeded to roll about in the fire, and to strike it with his sleeves, until he had put it out. He then brought me the shirt, upon which the fire had not made the least impression. At this I very much wondered.

After visiting this Sheikh I proceeded to Basra, a place much abounding with palms. The inhabitants are so friendly to strangers that a traveller has nothing to fear among them. We have here the mosque of Ali, in which prayers are said every Friday: it is then closed till the next. This was formerly in the middle of the town; but is situated two miles† from its

---

* When we come to Khorāsān in this work, some account of the leader and practices of this sect will be given.

† As the term mile (ميل) will occasionally occur in this work, we shall here determine its extent. According to the Succardān of Ibn Hajīla, a mile is = 1,000 bāās, a bāā = 4 cubits; a cubit = 24 digits; a digit = 6 barley-corns placed side by side; and a barleycorn = 6 hairs taken out of the tail of a mule. A Parasang = 3 miles; a barīd = 4 parasangs present population. In this is the koran which Othmân had sent (for the use of the inhabitants), and in which he was reading when he was killed. The marks of his blood are still visible in the words نَفْسِيَّنَكُمُ اللّهُ، &c. I then went on board a "Sambïk (Turkish "Senbûki) which is a small boat, and proceeded to 'El Oballa,* which was once a large city, but is now only a village;

* Abulfeda says of this place the ablêh aţâlâl. He says that, according to the Atwâl the longitude is 74° 8' lat. 30° 55' and according to the Kanûn long. 74° 8' lat 31° 55'. He then describes it, قالت اسحاق فعلى مدينه صغرى حصونها عابرة ونهر الاصلاب البحيرة وحذاء الدجلة التي ينجب من هنا النهر عائلاً عليها وينتهي عمودها اليلاج وعبانان ولعل النهر أربعة فرامة بين البحيرة والأصلاب واللي حانني هذا الثور قصر ورسومات مصلحة كأنها قنان وحادت مدمر نيب على كتبه وقد مدت على كتبه واحد لجودي وجميعين تلته الناحية ملعونة بعضها الي لباس حنّي إذا جاءهم ما سيئ تراجع العلماء في كل شيء يدخل في تخليل وينطاقه من غير تكلف فانا جزرا لم حصلت حتى فها الباقين والجاثين. Ibn Hawkal states, that Oballa is a small, strong, and well peopled city. Its river, the Oballah, after issuing from the Tigris which is over against the city, makes its way to it, and thence to Basra. The channel of this river reaches to the sea, and to Abbadân. The length of its course to Basra is four parasangs, upon the banks of which are palaces and gardens, so close to each other, that they appear to form one garden passing on in a direct line: its palms also spread out in like manner in an extended line. All the gardens too of these parts are so situated one by another, that when the tide of the sea comes out towards them, it passes into all the channels until it comes to their palms, and into their valleys without the least difficulty: and, when it ebbs, it rolls back, leaving the gardens and palm-plantations. The channels here mentioned are, according to Dr. Russell, Nat. Hist. Aleppo, generally so contrived as to bring the water into the gardens, and then, out of these still smaller channels are cut, which carry the water into the several parterres and divisions of the gardens. The Psalmist seems to have had these channels in view when he speaks of the " tree planted by the rivers of waters," better, the divisions of the waters, the original being which, with its gardens about it, is about ten miles from Basra. I then sailed from El Óballa in an arm of the Persian gulf, and arrived the next morning at *Abbâdân, which is a village situated in a salt marsh. It was my intention to have gone to Bagdad; but a person at Basra advised me to go on to the country of *El Lâr, then to 'Irâk El Ajâm,† then to Arabian Irâk; and I did so. I then proceeded from Abbâdân by sea; and after four days, arrived at the city of *Mâgûn (or Mâgûl, of the quantity Fâ-ûl, with the g pronounced hard). This is a small town on the Persian gulf. I passed from this by land, during a journey of three days, through which exactly corresponds with Dr. Russell's description.—See also Asseman's Biblioth. Orient., tom. iii., P. 2, p. dcvii, and D'Herbelot under Obollâh.

* According to El Harawi this is an island in the sea, in which there is a meshed dedicated to the prophet. It also has Ali's well, and a meshed sacred to El Khísâr, and other establishments: the plout of which are much visited from other parts. His words are: عبادان جزيرة في البحر بها مسجد النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم وبها برفوعة رضي الله عنه، ومتحف أثري على السلام وله بركة مباركة وهي موضوع شريف يزار من أثاق به العباد والزائرين.

Abâlûsádây says this place is in the longitude 74° 30', lat. 32° 20' according to the Atwâl; but others give 75° 55', and 75° 30' longitude. He then thus describes it after Ibn Said. قال

واعبان علي بغفران وهو يدور بها نافذة منها في البراقان الفلج وتعصب دجله مهد في جنوب عبادان وشروته وقال غيره عبادان علي مصب دجله في بغفران من الجانب الشرقي منها إلى الساحل الي مهرعبان نحو ربع مراحل وعبادان عن البحر مرحله ونصف ثلث وجبوب عبادان وشروته الخشابة وهي علائم في البحر للراكب تttiهي إليها ولا يتجاوزها خيرا من الجزرية تلقي

The he has said that Abbâdân is on the sea of Fârâ, which encircles it, leaving only a small part of land (or isthmus). On the south-east of this place the Tígris joins the sea. Others have said, that Abbâdân is upon the mouth of the Tígris towards its east, and on the sea of Fârâ. From it to the shores of Mehrûbân is about four stages. From Basra it is a stage and a half. It has been said too, that on the south and east of Abbâdân are the Khushbâb, i.e. marks placed in the sea for the purpose of limiting the approach of vessels, and beyond which they never pass, lest upon the ebbling of the tide they should strike upon the ground. Khushbâb خنشاب Castell tells us, are moderately sized ropes: if so, they are here so placed as to mark the places to which ships may safely come. See also Asseman's Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii., P. 2, p. dcvii; Sir Wm. Ouseley's Oriental Geography, p. 11, &c.; and D'Herbelot sub voce Abadan.

† The geography of these parts has been well illustrated by Ulebroek in his Irân Persien descriptie, &c. Lugduni Batavorum, 1688. See pp. 4 and 5. Asseman's Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii., P. 2, p. dcvlv.
PERSIA.

a plain inhabited by Kurds, and came to the city of 'Rāmin,* a beautiful place abounding with fruit and rivers. I then proceeded on through a plain, in which were villages of the Kurds, and in three days arrived at the city of "Tostar,† which is at the extremity of this plain. On the first of the mountains there is a large and beautiful city, abounding with fruits and rivers, surrounded by a river, known by the name of "El Azrak the blue. This river is wonderfully clear, and is cold in the summer season.

CHAPTER VII.

'I then travelled for three days over high mountains, and found in every stage, in these countries, a cell with food for the accommodation of travellers. I then came to the city of *Idhaj,† which belongs to the *Sultan Atābek Afrāsīāb.§ With these people the word Atabek means any one governing a district. The country is called *El Lūr.‖ It abounds with high mountains and has roads cut in the rocks. The extent in length is seventeen days journey; in breadth ten. Its king sends presents to the king of Irāk, and sometimes comes to see him. In every one of the stations in this country, there are cells provided for the religious, enquirers, and travellers: and,

* This is perhaps the ِ Romon or ِ Rūmūn, Beth Raman, of Asseman. See Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii., P. 2, p. dclxxii, which he writes in Arabic ِ رامن: or perhaps the ِ رامن of Mr. Ulenbroek, see p. 65, Arab. text.
‡ See Ulenbroek Iracē Pers. descriptio, p. 25, Arab. text.
§ This is probably the "Mudafferdeddin Afrasiāb, fils de Rokneddin," of De Guignes, who was the last of the dynasty of the Atabek of Lāristān; according to him he died A. H. 740, A.D. 1339, a little after the time our traveller must have visited these parts.
‖ See Mr. Ulenbroek's "Iracē descriptio," pp. 4 and 5, and Arab. text.
for every one who arrives, there are bread, flesh, and sweetmeats: I travelled for ten days in this country over high mountains, with ten other religious, one of whom was a priest, another a moazin (a person who calls the people to prayers), and two professed readers of the koran. The Sultan sent me a present, containing money for travelling expenses, both for myself and my companions. Having finished the districts belonging to this king on the tenth day, we entered those of Isphahān, and arrived at the city of 'Ushtorkān: after this at 'Fairūzān,* the name of which had been 'Tashnā Fīrūz: and then at Isphahān, one of the cities of Irāk El Ajām. This is a large and handsome city: I remained in it some days. I then set out for "Shirāz, between which and Isphahān there are twenty stations, with the intention of visiting the Sheikh Majd Oddīn, at that place. In my journey, I passed by the towns of "Kalil and "Yezd Khās, the latter of which is small, and arrived at Shirāz. It is an extensive, and well built city, though inferior to Damascus, in the beauty of its streets, gardens, and waters. The inhabitants are people of integrity, religion, and virtue, particularly the women. For my own part, I had no other object than that of visiting the Sheikh Majd Oddīn, the paragon of saints and worker of miracles. I came accordingly to the college called "El Majidia, which had been founded by him. He was then judge of the city; but, on account of his age, the duties of the office were discharged by his brother's sons.† I waited on him. When he came out, he shewed me great kindness, and, embracing

* According to the مرادites, this is a village of Isphahān, and is a most beautiful and healthy place: the words are ـشینی هزار ـ هزار ـ کیل ـ ـ ـ.

† This man is mentioned in the Khulāsāt El Akhbār, by Khondemir, as having great influence at this time at Shirāz, so much so, that he succeeded in bringing about an accommodation between the Emir Jūbānī, and the partizans of the Emir Mohammed Mozaffar. His words are these اخر المربوط علاقة جمجد الدين اسماعيل بن يحيى كه از حمله أکابر زوده وفضلاته (فضلا) بـ بـ هوـ ـ. With the mediation of the Kāzī Majd Oddīn Isqālīn Ibn Yaḥya, who was one of the great saints and men of eminence, an agreement took place; and the Emir Pār Hāsān Jūbānī entered the city in the greatest splendour and delight. This is related as taking place in the year of the Hejira 740.
me, asked me about different places: to which I gave suitable answers. I was then taken into his college. The Sheikh is much honoured by the Emirs of these parts, insomuch, that when they enter his company, they take hold of both their ears, a ceremony of respect paid only to the king. They, therefore, pay him the respect due to their king. The reason of this is, that when the king of Irāk, *Mohammed Khudā Banda, received Islamism, he had a favourite of the Rāfīza (followers of Ali), named Jamāl Ibn Mutahhar, who induced him to join the Shīah sect, which he willingly did. The king then wrote to Bagdad, Shīrāz, and other places, inviting them to be of this sect. The people of Bagdad and Shīrāz, however, refused to do so, and continued to be of the sect of the Sonnee. He then commanded the judges of these districts to be brought to him: and the first who arrived was this of Shīrāz. The king ordered him to be thrown to some great dogs which he had, and which were kept with chains about their necks, for the purpose of tearing to pieces any one, with whom the Sultan should happen to be angry. When, therefore, the Kāzī Majd Oddin was thrown to the dogs, they came, and looking upon him, began to wag their tails, making no onset upon him, nor, in any way molesting him. This was told to the Sultan *Khudā Banda, who came running to him in a great fright. He then kissed his hands, and stripping off all his own robes put them upon the Sheikh. He then took him by the hand, and led him to his mansion. This, therefore, became the source of great dignity to the Sheikh, his children, and to all belonging to him: which is the case with every one, upon whom the Sultan puts all his robes. The king then gave up the Shīah sect, and became a Sonnee, and to the Sheikh he gave a hundred villages in the district of Shīrāz. Thus both the king and his courtiers bestowed the greatest honours upon the Sheikh and upon his successors. I also visited this Sheikh after my return from India, in the year 748 of the Hejira (A.D. 1347); and, for this purpose, I travelled a distance of five and thirty days. I once saw the Sultan of Shīrāz' Abu *Is-hāk holding his ears before him, by way of respect. The Sultan of

* See on this place Asseman’s Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii. P. ii. p. decxxv—vi. will give sums equal to this many times in the same day, particularly to those who come from the parts of Khorassan. He once said to one of his courtiers, Go into the treasury and bring as much gold as you can carry at once. The courtier filled thirteen purses with gold; and, tying them on his shoulders, attempted to go out, but fell through the weight of the purses. The king then commanded him to take and weigh it, which he did, and found it to be thirteen maunds of Dehli, the maund of Dehli being equal to five and twenty ratls of Egypt. On another occasion, he placed one of his Emirs, namely, Sharf Ul Mulk Emir Bakht of Khorassan, in a pair of scales, putting gold in the opposite part, till the gold preponderated. He then gave him the gold and said, give alms out of this for your own salvation. He also appointed to the theologian and collector of traditions, Abd El Aziz El Ardabili, for his daily expenses, the sum of one hundred dinars of silver: five and twenty of which are equal to the golden dinar. Upon one occasion the above mentioned Sheikh entered into the presence of the king, who rose; and, having kissed his feet, poured upon his head with his own hand a vessel full of gold, and said, both the gold and the vessel, which is gold, are thine.

The most famous meshhed of Shiraz is that of Ahmed Ibn Mūsa, the brother of 'El Rizā, which is indeed held in the highest estimation. In this is the tomb of the Imām El Kotb El Wali Abū Abd Allah Ibn Khafīf.

El Nahr, Arabia, and Turkey, to Hindustan. نظمًا وكبار ونحوران وكشي شکستان بامید
عوافط ومرام اور از خراسان وعراق وماروا النهر وعستان وترکستان بهندستان می آمدند وزیاده از آن این تصور کرد بهندند نوارشها مییافتند، &c. and received more than they had imagined they should. I cite this merely to show the minute accuracy of our traveller.

* This saint is frequently mentioned in the نقویات الانس by Jāmi as one of the first authorities in judging of matters peculiar to the Sūfīs; and is occasionally styled both Wali and Kotb, as here by Ibn Batūta.

In vol. i. p. 546, of the Transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society, I have made some allusion to this Sheikh, supposing it probable that his grave may be that of the person mentioned in an inscription there translated. The traveller, however, here says that his tomb is in Shirāz:
and, if that be the fact, there is an end to the probability; but we shall find, when we get to Ceylon, that there is a belief of his grave being in that country. We have no account, however, will give sums equal to this many times in the same day, particularly to those who come from the parts of Khorásân. He once said to one of his courtiers, Go into the treasury and bring as much gold as you can carry at once. The courtier filled thirteen purses with gold; and, tying them on his shoulders, attempted to go out, but fell through the weight of the purses. The king then commanded him to take and weigh it, which he did, and found it to be thirteen maunds of Dehli, the maund of Dehli being equal to five and twenty ratls of Egypt. On another occasion, he placed one of his Emirs, namely, Sharif Ul Mulk Emir Bakht of Khorásân, in a pair of scales, putting gold in the opposite part, till the gold preponderated. He then gave him the gold and said, give alms out of this for your own salvation. He also appointed to the theologian and collector of traditions, 'Abd El Aziz El Ardabili, for his daily expenses, the sum of one hundred dinars of silver: five and twenty of which are equal to the golden dinar. Upon one occasion the above mentioned Sheikh entered into the presence of the king, who rose; and, having kissed his feet, poured upon his head with his own hand a vessel full of gold, and said, both the gold and the vessel, which is gold, are thine.

The most famous meshhed of Shirāz is that of Ahmed Ibn Mūsa, the brother of 'El Rizā, which is indeed held in the highest estimation. In this is the tomb of the Imām 'El Kötib El Wali Abū Abd Allah Ibn Khafīf.

El Nahr, Arabia, and Turkey, to Hindustan. عظمًا وكثير هندوران وكشي شكستان باميد مواجهه وماراثي أو از خراسان وعراق ومأوا النهر و việnن ويركستان ونبرستان مي آمديد وزياده آيا آنچه تصور کرد، ولدي نوازشها می ایافتند، &c. and received more than they had imagined they should. I cite this merely to show the minute accuracy of our traveller.

* This saint is frequently mentioned in theinverse of انس by Jámi as one of the first authorities in judging of matters peculiar to the Sūfis; and is occasionally styled both Wali and Kötib, as here by Ibn Batūta.

In vol. i. p. 546, of the Transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society, I have made some allusion to this Sheikh, supposing it probable that his grave may be that of the person mentioned in an inscription there translated. The traveller, however, here says that his tomb is in Shirāz: and, if that be the fact, there is an end to the probability; but we shall find, when we get to Ceylon, that there is a belief of his grave being in that country. We have no account, however, who is the great exemplar of all the region of Fârs. This Abu Abd Allah is the person, who made known the way from India to the mountain of Serendib, and who wandered about the mountains in the island of 'Ceylon. Of his miracles, his entering Ceylon, and wandering over its mountains in company with about thirty fakeers is one: for when these persons were all suffering from extreme hunger, and had consulted the Sheikh on the necessity of slaughtering and eating an elephant,* he positively refused and forbade the act. They, nevertheless, impelled as they were by hunger, transgressed his commands, and killed a small elephant, which they ate. The Sheikh, however, refused to partake. When they had all gone to sleep, the elephants came in a body, and smelling one of them, put him to death. They then came to the Sheikh, and smelled him, but did him no injury. One of them, however, wrapt his trunk about him, and lifting him on his back, carried him off to some houses. When the people saw him, they were much astonished. The elephant then put him down and walked off. The infidels were much delighted with the Sheikh, treated him very kindly, and took him to their king. The king gave credit to his story, and treated him with the greatest kindness and respect. When I

* The elephant is unclean with the Mohammedans, so Saadi. entered Ceylon I found them still infidels, although they had given great credit to the Sheikh. They also very much honour the Mohammedan Fakeers, taking them to their houses and feeding them, contrary to the practice of the infidels of India; for they neither eat with a Mohammedan, nor suffer him to come near them.

I then left Shiráz intending to make "Kázerún, situated at the distance of two days' journey, in order to visit the tomb of the Sheikh "Abu Is-hák El Kázeruní.* This Sheikh is held in esteem both in India and China: and even the sailors, when labouring under adverse winds, make great vows to him, which they pay to the servants of his cell, as soon as they get safely to shore. I accordingly visited the tomb of the Sheikh.

I then left Kázerun and went to the city 'El Zaidain (the city of the two Zaids). It was so called, because 'Zaid Ibn Thäbet and 'Zaid Ibn Arkam,t two of the companions of the prophet, were buried there. I then went to 'El Huwaizá,‡ a small town inhabited by Persians, between which and Basra is the distance of four days: but from Küfa, that of five. From this place I went to Küfa through a desert, in which water was only to be found at one of its stages. This is one of the mother cities of Irák: but, it is now very much in ruins. In the mosque is the oratory,

---

* This is, no doubt, the Abou-Ishak Alkarzouni of D’Herbelot; vide sub voce; and if he be right, this word ought to be written الكارزوني. under Carzuni, however, he writes Czaruni and Cazeruní. It is said in the

† This name is given in the

† This is said to be the Damietta of the Persians. Something not unlike kasab (or fine Egyptian cloth), is made there from cotton. It abounds with palaces, gardens, and palms, extending its palaces far to the right hand and the left (north and south), and is at the distance of three days from Shiráz. The words are: کازرون... مدينة بفارس بين البحر وشیرازیقال في دمياط الإنتاج يعمل بها من الكتان على شبه القصب وهي كلا تصور وواسطات وغيل ممدة عن شرق وشمال وبينها وبين شیراز ثلاثة آیام.

‡ Annales Muslemici, tom. i. p. 119.
in which Ali was killed by the vile Ibn Moljim. In the back part of the mosque, is the place in which Noah is said to have grown warm from the oven in the time of the 'deluge.'

* This is one of the absurd and silly legends, of which the Orientals are so fond: but, as a knowledge of mankind consists in knowing the follies, as well as the wisdom, practised in the world, I may be excused, perhaps, if I give Mirkhedn's edition of it.

...
CHAPTER VIII.

I next arrived at the city of "El Hilla," which runs far along by the side of the Euphrates. Its inhabitants are all followers of the twelve Imāms. We have here a mosque, over the gate of which is an extended veil of silk. They call it the Mosque of the last "Imām." It is said, that Mohammed Ibn El Hasan El Askari entered this mosque, and became concealed in it. This person is, according to them, the Imām Mehdi (or leader), who has long been expected. It is a practice with them to come daily, armed to

* Ann. Mosl. tom. iii. p. 716. This is very near the site of ancient Babylon. El Harawi tells us that the Jews make pilgrimages to the graves of Ezekiel and Joseph, which they believe to be here. See Mr. Rich's Notice of the Ruins of Babylon; Les Mines de l'Oriente, tom. iii.

† The following is the creed of the Shiah on this subject, as given by the author of the Dabestān:

نزد امامه مقرر امس ك امام محمد بن عسکر زنه است واژ نظر لان و آنزا تغییر بیت صغری و یگیت کربه و نگیش کربه که مدیر آن هفتاد و به سالست در دهمان مقدس عباسی درسته ست و مایلین برد و یگیت کربه در عهد رانی این مقدس عباسی بر فرق در درمان ابن دومیس آسنست که در صغری مفری و یکه میان امام و ماقبل امام و نستنة بیدند و در کربه آن مدیر مقطع کربه و کبیر اول عثمان ابن سید الخمری بود و بعد بر حکم امام زمان به پرش از جغراب مغریش شد و بر تریب به نجاء سال کرد بعد از ابوبکر القاسم حسین ابن روح ابن ابو سحر نویخی وارد بر خود پسر ابو العسکری این محمد الخمری و یکه کرمان دوم اخیر و کربه چون بیمار شده سرال کردند که بعد از توکی ناگه نمقده که خواهد بود از توکی مشتملی متوجه و یکه پرور آور و آن یکه.

It is established among the Imāms (followers of the Imāms), that the Imām Mohammed Ibn Askari is still alive, but that he is invisible. This they term the less, and greater concealment. The less concealment lasted seventy-three years, and happened in the times of Muizamid of the house of Abbās, in the year 896 (A.H.). The greater concealment happened in the time of Rāzī, the son of Mukttadīr, of the house of Abbās. The difference between these two concealments is this: that in the less, a book and ministers were mediatorial between the Imām and the pious of the people: but in the greater, all communication was cut off. The first Wakeel was Othman Ibn Saïd El Omari; and, after him, by command of the Imām of his time, it was transferred to his son Abu Jaafar Mohammed, who executed the office about fifty years. After him Abu El Kāsim Hosain Ibn Rūh Ibn Abi Bahr Nawbakhti, who afterwards left it by will to Abu El Hasan Ali Ibn Mohammed El Samarī; and he was the last the number of a hundred, to the door of this mosque, bringing with them a beast saddled and bridled, a great number of persons also with drums and trumpets, and to say, Come forth, Lord of the age, for tyranny and base-ness now abounds: this then is the time for thy egress, that, by thy means, God may divide between truth and falsehood. They wait till night, and then return to their homes. I next came to "Karbelah, and there visited the meshhed of the Imām El Hosain, the son of Ali.∗ This is one of the greatest meshheds. The inhabitants are of the sect of the twelve Imāms.

∗ Karbelah.

of the Wakeels. When he was sick the Shahīya asked him, who should hold this sacred office after him; upon which he drew out an instrument forbidding a will, which is this:

"In the name of the compassionate and merciful God. O Ali, son of Mohammed of Samaria, may God increase the reward of thy brethren by thee: but thou art a dead man: between me and thee are (only) six days. Arrange thy matters, therefore, and turn towards no one for supplying thy place after thy death: for now has happened the complete concealment: nor shall there be a revelation, except by the permission of God, whose memorial be reverence, till after the duration of the age, and hearts shall be hardened, and the earth shall be filled with violence. But there shall come out of my people one who shall lay claim to a testimony. He, however, who shall lay claim to this before the outgoing of El Sofyāni and the abut, that man is the antichrist, the corrupter. There is no power or virtue except in the great God." He died in the middle of the month Shaa'bān, An. Hej. 928. See my Persian Controversies, p. 433. I have been the more particular in explaining this passage, in order to shew the great similarity there is, between the Shahīya and our own Millenarians in this respect. The Shahīya expect the Mehdi to appear, when Mohammed and Jesus are also to descend from heaven, and this is to happen at the end of an age or dispensation, when the world shall be filled with oppression and sin. Upon this occasion, they further tell us, there is to be a general resurrection of the wicked, and then a horrible slaughter is to ensue: and after this the earthly Paradise is to commence. It is my intention hereafter to shew, that the Mohammedans have retained this from the early heretics, as well as many other things peculiar to one or other of their sects.

∗ At this place Hosain was killed. Annales Moslem. tom i. pp. 389-391; and D'Herbelot under Kerbela.
I next arrived at Bagdad, which, notwithstanding the injuries it has sustained, is still one of the largest of cities. Its inhabitants are mostly of the sect of Hanbal. In this place is the grave of 'Abu Hanifa, over which is a cell, and a mosque. Not far off is the grave of the Imam Ahmed Ibn Hanbal: as also that of 'El Shibali,† of 'Sari El Sakti,† of 'Bashar El Hafi,§ of 'Daud El Tai,¶ and of Abu Kasm El 'Jonaid,¶ all of them Imams of the Sufis. When I entered Bagdad, the Sultan of the two Iraks and Khorasan was 'Abu Sa'id Bahadur Khan, son of Mohammed Khudâ

* Two of the leaders of the four principal sects of the Mohammdans, see D'Herbelot, sub vocibus, i.e. Abou-Hanifâ, and Hanbal.

† Jami calls him 'Abdul Salam Ibn Al Shaly and tells us, that he was contemporary with Jonaid. In his history, which occurs in the last quarter of the Nuzhat El Inâs we have some very strange miracles recorded of him, which, however, are not worth copying out.

‡ This saint, according to the Nuzhat El Inâs, where his history will be found a little from the beginning, was the preceptor of Jonaid, and the rest of the enlightened of Bagdad. His full name was 'Abdul El Malfas El Sufi: his surname is El Almousin (Kesâb). He was contemporary with the following.

§ The full name of this saint, according to the Nuzhat El Inâs a little from the beginning, where his history will be found, is 'Abdul Naser (Kesâb) Ibn El Harith Ibn Abd El Rahmen El Almousin and the surname is El Almousin. He was contemporary with Jonaid, and died A. H. 227—A. D. 841.

¶ See the Annales Musulm. tom. ii. p. 41. In the Itinerary of El Harawi, the graves of these worthies are placed in the part of Bagdad termed Shunita, and they receive the titles of Awdâ, Abd El Huda, and the pious persons, and martyrs. In the parts we are told, that it is the burying ground situated on the west side of Bagdad, and that several of the above-mentioned saints are buried there: and that there is a mosque and inn for the Sufis in this ground.

¶‡ This, according to Jami, is a saint of the second class: his surname was Abul Kasm (Kesâb), his title Kawarit, Zajâj, and Khasîs. He was one of those three who flourished, A. H. 296-9 (A. D. 890-11) who in intellectual powers are without a fourth.
Banda, * which last was one of those Tartar kings who embraced Islamism, and with his brother Kázân, † ruled in these parts. When this Abu Saíd died, he left no issue, and the consequence was, his Emîrs, each claimed and exercised the rule in those parts in which he had been placed. ‡ When Abu Saíd left Bagdad for his own country, I travelled for ten days with him, and saw the wonderful arrangement of their march, and their numerous army. I then went with one of his Emîrs to Tebriz, which is a large and beautiful city. § In this I lodged one night; but, when an order came from the Sultan commanding the Emîr Alâ Oddin's presence in the camp, he set out the next day, and took me with him. The Sultan, however, became acquainted with my being there, and sent for me accordingly. I presented myself to him, and was honoured with a dress and other large presents. The Emîr Alâ Oddin told him, that it was my intention to go on the pilgrimage; he accordingly ordered such conveyances and provisions for me as would be necessary for the undertaking. He also wrote to the same effect to the Emîr of Bagdad. I then returned to Bagdad, and claimed the royal bounty from the Emîr. But, as the time for the pilgrimage was distant, I set out for Mosul and Diarбeker. I then went from Bagdad to the city of Sämarrâ, which was in ruins. There had been a "meshhed

---

† See D'Herbelot, art. Gazan, and Annales Muslemici, tom. v. p. 190.

‖ Abulfedas says, سریر رای هي ساساری تالیئ ملک لدÎد تلیئ سریر رای مدینه بالعراق فوق بغداد هي مسکوه فغدابها الناس قالوا سریر رای با العصم وخریت عن قريب من عمارتها قال في الینیه ومدینة سریر رای الي عکبرا اثنا عشر فرسخا قال وح هي على شاقی دجله الشرق وهو بدل جميع الهوا والترهات قال وليس فيها عامر اليوم ری in it, dedicated to the last Imām by the Rāfīza, as in "El Hilla. I then proceeded to "Tekrit," a large city; then, after many stages, to Mosul. This is an ancient and strong place. Its citadel "El Hadba is splendid. From this I went to the island of 'Ibn Omar,† where I arrived after two days. This is a large city surrounded by a valley, and has thence been called the "Island. The greatest part of it is now in ruins. The inhabitants are well informed, and are kind to strangers. From this place I went to "Nisibin,‡ where I arrived after a journey of two days. This is an ancient city; but is now mostly in ruins. It abounds in water and gardens, and is surrounded by a river as with a 'bracelet. Rose-water incomparable in scent is made here.

I then went to the city of "Sinjār,§ a place abounding with fountains.

---

‡ For an account of this place under the Christians, see Asseman's Bibliothe. Orient., tom. iii. P. ii, pp. decxvii-viii. El Harawi tells us, that there is a jujube tree here, about which strange things are said, and also a Greek inscription which will cure pains in the back, &c. eujadem farine. See also D'Herbelot under Nasibin.

§ El Harawi says of this place:

مدينه مسجد فيها مسجد علي بن أبي طالب رضي الله عنه على الجبل وها تل قنبر. وقيل أن الله جعلها قرب سفينة نجع علي الخليل فتلمها نسمت

H
and rivers, much like Damascus. The inhabitants are Kurds, a generous and warlike people. At this place I saw the Sheikh 'El Sālih El Wali El Aabid Abd Alla El Kurdi, the theologian: I met him with a party on the highest part of the mountain. They say, that he does not break his fast of forty days, except with a crust of barley-bread. Many miracles are ascribed to him. I then went to the city of Dārā;† then to Mārdin‡ in which there is a very celebrated and strong citadel. The Sultan of Mārdin, at the time I entered it, was El Melik El Sālih the son of yEl Melik El Mansūr.§ This is a very generous prince, and much praised by the poets, on whom he bestows splendid gifts.

I now returned through Mosul to Bagdad, and there found the conveyances ready for the pilgrimage. With these I proceeded, and arrived

* الشج الصالح الولي العادل عبد الله الكردي. = داراً. " ماردين.

† الملك الصالح ابن الملك المتصور

§ ساحراً أنه جار عليها وأصحابه انه باشا بنجارة ابن ملك بن الذعر فنصب اليه وذلك نصب

الي أميد بن السعيد لأنه باشا وحضرها نصب الي الرها ابن الابن ابن ملك (بني) الذعر المها عمراً والله اعلم.

"In the city of Sinjār is a mosque of Ali the son of Abu Tālib. This is upon the mountain, and within it is the hill of Kambar. It is said that the ark of Noah struck upon an eminence (tooth سن) of the mountain, and thence received a fracture: the place was hence called Sinjār, because he resided (جار جارا) upon it. But the truth is, the city was built by Sinjār, son of Malik, son of El Dhaar, and to him the name relates. In like manner Amid is named after Amid son of El Somaid, because he built it; and Roha (Edessa) received its name from Roha the daughter of Bolaid, son of Malik, (son) of El Dhaar, because it was built by him." I have deemed it important to make this extract to shew among other things, that according to the Orientals, places take their names from persons, and not the contrary, as some, with the great Bochart at their head, have supposed. See Asseman, Biblioth. Orient., tom. iii. P. II. p. decclxxix, and Mr. Ewald's Mesopotamia of El Wakedi, p. xv. Annal. Muslem., tom. iii. p. 702. D'Herbelot, art. Sangiar.

* This fasting, which however continues only during the day, is one of the qualifications of a saint in the East.

† Here, according to El Harawi, are ruins to be seen; which may be referred to the times of Darius. See Mr. Ewald's "Libri Wakedii de Mesopotamiae expugnate: Historia," p. xiv.

‡ See Asseman's Biblioth. Orient., tom. iii. P. II. p. decclxii.

§ It will be in vain to look into De Guignes for this and several other princes mentioned in these travels. The truth seems to be, Mr. De Guignes had not documents before him by any means so ample as he felt necessary for his purpose: to supply these clasms is a consummation devoutly to be wished.
at Mecca in the same year; and remained there during another. In the second year arrived the caravan from Irāk, with a great quantity of alms for the support of those who were staying at Mecca and Medina.

CHAPTER IX.

At this time, that is, in the year 729 (A.D. 1328), prayer was made, during the sermon, for the King of Irāk 'Abu Saʿīd, and after that for "El Melik El Nāsir. I remained there during the third year also, and then left Mecca* with the intention of visiting Yemen. I arrived accordingly at

* The following account of the temple of Mecca, by El Harawi, as to its state both before and after its being destroyed and rebuilt by the Koreish, is well worthy the attention of the reader.}

"From the western side one and thirty cubits, and from the pillar in which the black stone is found, to that which is opposite to it on the south, were two and twenty cubits, and from the northern opposite part, twenty cubits. Its circumference was one hundred and five cubits, and thus it remained, until destroyed and rebuilt by the Koreish in the times of the prophet. They also made it smaller than it was at first, so that there remained six cubits and a half in its capacity (internal length and breadth I suppose). Its height they increased by nine cubits, so that it became eighteen cubits. Its building consisted of a layer of wood and another of stone; so Judda. From this place I went with a company of merchants who were going to Yemen; but, as the wind changed upon us, we put into the island of Sawakin, the Sultan of which was El Sharif Zaid Ibn Abu Nomma, son of the Emir of Mecca. Sawakin fell to him on the part of the Bejaj, who were nearly related to him, and from whom he had an army attending upon him. From Sawakin I set out for Yemen with the merchants, and came to Halij, a large and handsomely built city. The inhabitants are aboriginal Arabs, governed by the Sultan Aimir Ibn Dhuwaib of the tribe Beni Kenana. He is one of the most elegant, generous, and poetical geniuses (of his time); he took me with him and entertained me very hospitably for some days. From this place I travelled with the merchants to that there were fifteen courses of wood, and sixteen of stone. Within it were six columns, as also images of the angels, the prophets, the tree, and of Abraham the friend, with the divining arrows in his hand; there was also an image of Jesus and another of his mother Mary. But in the year of victory the prophet ordered them all to be destroyed. There were also in it, the horns of the ram which Abraham sacrificed (in lieu of his son). They were hung up within the temple, and thus they remained to the times of Ibn El Zobair, and then they were burnt. That this temple was at first the residence of some of the patriarchs seems to me extremely probable, and as it was at first larger than it is now, it might then have been quite sufficient for all the purposes of a shepherd. If, indeed, it contained an image of Abraham, the ram’s horns, &c. as here mentioned, a curious proof is afforded to the truth of the original history; and if there was an image of our Lord and his mother, it should seem that the Christians of Arabia had adopted images before the times of Mohammed, for from them the pagans must have taken them.

* We are told by Abulfeda (Ann. Muslem., tom. v. p. 289-3, i. e. A. D. 1318) that Abul Ghaith Ibn Abu Nami (as Reiseke writes it) accompanied him to Mecca, in order to be put in possession of the government of that place in lieu of his brother. The appointment took place; and it is probable that the person here mentioned was son to the same governor, who must have held Mecca when our traveller visited it.

† See Ouseley’s Oriental Geography, p. 13.

‡ Abulfeda puts this place, according to the Atwil, in long. 66° 20’, lat. 15° 50’; according to the Kanun, long. 66° 50’. He then says, وَرَكَبَ الْمَرْتَّبَهُ مِنْ تَهْمَههُ يَلِي صَنَاً فَانَّهُ يُبِيرُ مِنْ الْمَرْتَّبَهُ مَسْتَمِعَتْ مِرْأَةً وَبَلَدَةً نَاحِيةً مُدِينَةً حَلِيّ. Halt is one of the parts of Yemen: El Edrisi says, that any one who wishes to pass the desert from Tahama to Senna, let him go about six stages from Sirraine, and in those parts (he will find) the city of Halt.
the town of 'Sarja, a small place inhabited by merchants of Yemen, a liberal and hospitable people. From this place I went to the city of Zabad,* where I arrived in two days. This is one of the primary cities of Yemen; it is large and handsome, and abounding with every commodity. The inhabitants are generous, well-informed, and religious. In its environs the village of Ghassāna † is the grave of El Wali El Sālih Ahmed ‡ Ibn El Ojail El Yemeni. The doctors of Zabad told me of one of his miracles, which was this: The doctors and great people of the Zaidia † sect once came to his cell. The Sheikh sat without the cell, and received and returned their salutations. At length a question arose on the subject of predestination; the Zaidia affirming, that there was no such thing, and that every man was the author of his own actions. The Sheikh replied: If the matter be as you say it is, get up from the place where you are now sitting. They all endeavoured to rise, but not one of them could do so. The Sheikh left them in this situation, and went into his cell. They accordingly remained in this state, subject to the burning rays of the sun and lamenting their sad condition, till after sunset, when some of the Sheikh's companions going in to him told him, that the people had repented and turned from their corrupt creed. He then came out to them; and, taking them by the hand, joined them in their conversion to the truth, and dereliction of error. They arose and entered the cell, where he hospitably entertained them, and sent them home. I went to the village in order to visit the grave of the Sheikh, which I did, and met his son "El Khāshia Ismāil, who entertained me very hospitably. I then went to "Jabala,§ which is a small

* See D'Herbelot under Zebid.
† This, according to the Marāṣid El Itiṣa (مراعاة الإطلاع) is the name of several lakes in Arabia, on one of which the Beni Māzīn resided; of another at the obstruction of Māsrab in Yemen, which is said to be near Jahfā, and perhaps of another in Yemen, between .... and Zabid, غسان اسم ماء نزل عليه بنو مازين بن الأزر بن الغور قبل ماء سد مآرب باليمن وقيل هو ماء ... قرب من الجبلة وقيل ماء باليمن بين ... وزبيد. † See D'Herbelot art. Zeidiah, and Annales Muslem., tom. iii. p. 734.
‡ This place, according to Abulfeda, is named Jubla (جبله), and is said after Abu Akūl to be in long. 65° 8', lat. 19° 55' (73° not as in our copy, which is manifestly wrong). It is town; and from that to the city of "Tiazz," the residence of the King of Yemen. This is one of the most beautiful and extensive cities of Yemen. The Sultan of this place was El Malik El Mojähid Nūr Oddên Ali, son of the Sultan El Mawayyid Dāūd, son of "Rasūl," (sent or commissioned). The grandfather of these sultans was called Rasūl,† because one of the Califs of the house of Abbās had sent or commissioned him as the Emir of Yemen, after which his descendants kept possession of his government. I was introduced to the king with the Kāzi of the place. Their situated between Aden and Senaâ, in the mountains. It stands upon two rivers, and hence has been called the city of the two rivers. It is modern, and was built by the Sulaibî when they had power in Yemen. Some respectable travellers have stated that Jubla is less than a day from Tiazz in an eastern direction, inclining a little to the north. The passage israjbeh bêbî ʿudn

Wazna in the gardens of the valley and that of the city, is a beautiful place, consisting of the gardens of the city, which are celebrated for their beauty, and of the gardens of the valley, which are equally beautiful. The gardens of the city are planted with various kinds of trees and shrubs, while those of the valley are more open, and are shaded with a variety of tall trees. The gardens are well-watered, and the climate is healthy. The inhabitants are well-to-do, and the produce of the land is abundant. They have a great variety of fruits, including dates, pomegranates, oranges, and lemons, which they cultivate with great skill. The gardens are surrounded by walls, and are entered through gates, which are ornamented with beautiful carvings.

* Abulfeda pronounces this word Tiazz (تیاز), and gives the longitude and latitude after the different authors as follows: long. 64° 30', lat. 13° 8'. Ibn Said, long. 70° 8', lat. 14° 50'. Analogy, long. 65° 30', lat. 18° 40', and says, that it was in his times the residence of the kings of Yemen, was a fortress situated on the mountains overhanging the coasts and the country of Zabdt. Beyond Tiazz is a pleasure ground called Sahlah, to which water has been brought from the mountains by the king of Yemen; and in this he has erected some spacious and strong edifices in the middle of a garden. وتعزّ في زماننا هذا هي مقرّ ملّيت اليمن هي حصى في الجبال مطل علی النهايّ وترزّ زبد توزّ توزّ توزّ يقول له مهله قد ساق بالين ماحب اليمن الماء من الجبال التي فرّتها وبنى فيها أبنية عظيمة في غاية العرص في وسط بستان.

† We are told in the Annales Muslemici, tom. v. p 348-9 that the father of this prince died at Tiazz (تیاز) which Reiske writes Teez) A.D. 1321; and, that on this occasion, his son, Ali received the title of El Malik El Mojähid Saif El Islâm, and succeeded to his throne: but, as he was very young and inexperienced, he was near losing it with his life more than once (p. 357, 361, &c.) He nevertheless continued in power, and was, no doubt, king of Yemen when our traveller was there.

‡ A title of this sort seems to have originated the Prester John of Abyssinia, of which the missionary accounts said so much. A Tartar king seems also to have assumed this title, which in Persian was translated Ferishta Jan, John the Angel, probably, because he had received Christianity. Hence the European Prester John: but, how this became ascribed to the King of Abyssinia it is not easy to say, unless he had assumed the title mentioned here by our traveller which belonged to the king of Yemen. See Asseman's Biblioth. Orient. tom. ii. P. II, p. 404.
custom in saluting their king is this: any person coming before him, first places his fore-finger on the ground, and then, putting it on his head, says, "May God perpetuate thy power." I was received very courteously, and then invited to a banquet.

After this I travelled to the city of Senaa,* the capital of Yemen. It is a large and well-built city. From this place I went to the city of 'Aden,† which is situated on the sea-shore. This is a large city, but without either seed, water, or tree. They have, however, reservoirs, in which they collect the rain-water for drinking. Some rich merchants reside here: and vessels from India occasionally arrive here. The inhabitants are modest and religious. I then went from Aden by sea, and after four days came to the city of Zaila.‡ This is a city of the Berbers, a people of Soudan, of the Shafia sect. Their country is a desert of two months’ extent. The first part is termed Zaila, the last Makdashu.§ The greatest part of the inha-

* See Asseman. Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii. P. II., p. decdxxv, and D’Herbelot, under the word Sanaa.

† For an account of this place, see the geographical Index appended to the life of Saladin, by Schultens, sub voce Adenum, Asseman, Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii. P. II. p. decvii, and D’Herbelot, sub voce Aden.

‡ On this place see Rinck’s Tract, containing extracts from Makrizi and Abulfeda on Abyssinia, Lugd. Batav. 1790, p. 9, Arab. text, and p. 10 Lat. trans. Also p. 12, Arab. text from Abulfeda; also Eichhorn’s Africa, p. 31, which I thus translate: Ibn Said has said, that Zaila is a well-known city of the Abyssinians. Its inhabitants are Moslems. It is situated upon a canal which comes from the sea, and is low: its heat is excessive. Its waters are sweet, and are got from wells. The people have no gardens, and know nothing of fruits. Zaila is said in the Kanun to be a port of Abyssinia not far from Yemen; and to be a place of scarcity. It is situated between the equinoctial line and the first climate. Those who have seen it have stated, that it is a small city nearly the size of Aidhab. It is situated upon the shore, and is governed by Sheikhs. Merchants frequent the place, who are treated with hospitality and traded with. See also D’Herbelot, art. Habisch.

§ Abulfeda, as given by Rinck and Eichhorn (Afr. p. 38) pronounces this word Mahdishu, and says, that it is situated on the Indian sea; that its inhabitants are Moslems. It has a large river like the Nile of Egypt, which swells in the summer season: it is said to be a branch of the Nile which issues from the lake of Kaurah, and runs into the Indian sea near Makdishu. Abul Majd of Mosul has said in the Mazil El Irshiab, that Makdishu is a large city, lying between the Zinj and Abyssinians. See also Sir Wm. Ouseley’s Oriental Geography, p. 14. On the fruits, &c. of these countries see Rinck’s Tract above-mentioned. Arab. text. pp. 11, 12, &c. It is worthy of remark, that Ibn Batuta affiliates these people with the Berbers of Soudan; see note at p. 17. This is the Magadocia of the Portuguese navigators.
bitants of Zaila, however, are of the Rāṣīza sect. Their food is, for the most part, camel’s flesh and fish. The stench of the country is extreme, as is also its filth, from the stink of the fish, and the blood of camels which are slaughtered in its streets. I then proceeded by sea for fifteen days, and came to Makdahshu, which is an exceedingly large city. The custom here is, that whenever any ships approach, the young men of the city come out, and each one addressing himself to a merchant, becomes his host. If there be a theologian or a noble on board, he takes up his residence with the Kāzi. When it was heard that I was there, the Kāzi came with his students to the beach: and I took up my abode with him. He then took me to the Sultan, whom they style Shāikh. Their custom is, that a noble or a theologian, must be presented to the Sultan, before he takes up his abode in the city. When, therefore, the Kāzi came to the palace, one of the King’s servants met him. The Kāzi was then “Borhān Oddin El Misrī (of Egypt), and to him he mentioned my having come. The servant then went to the Sultan, and informed him: but soon returned to us with a basket of vegetables, and some ‘fawfél nut. These he divided among us, and then presented us with rose-water; which is the greatest honour done among them to any one. He then said: It is the command of the King, that this person should reside in the student’s house. The Kāzi then took me by the hand, and conducted me to it. It was near the palace, was spread with carpets, and prepared for a feast. The servants then brought meats from the palace.

Their meat is generally rice roasted with oil, and placed in a large wooden dish. Over this they place a large dish of elkūshān, which consists of flesh, fish, fowl, and vegetables. They also roast the fruit of the plantain, and afterwards boil it in new milk: they then put it on a dish, and the curdled milk on another. They also put on dishes, some of preserved ‘lemon, bunches of preserved pepper-pods salted and pickled, as also grapes, which are not unlike apples, except that they have stones. These, when boiled, become sweet like fruit in “general, but are crude before this: they are preserved by being salted and pickled. In the same manner they use the 6green ginger. When, therefore, they eat the rice, they eat after it these salts and pickles. The people of Mkdashu are very corpulent: they are enormous eaters, one of them eating as much as a congregation ought to do.

The Sultan then sent for me and for each of my companions a dress; after which I was presented to him. Their custom in giving a salute is the same with that among the kings of Yemen. I remained some days the King's guest, and then set out for the country of the 'Zanūj, proceeding along the sea-shore. I then went on board a vessel and sailed to the island of 'Mambasa,† which is large, abounding with the 'banana, the lemon, and the 7citron. They also have a fruit which they call the 6jumoon (jambu). It is like the olive with a stone except that this fruit is exceedingly sweet. There is no grain in this island; what they have is brought to them from other places. The people are generally religious, chaste, and honest, and are of the sect of Shāfīa. After lodging there one night, I set out, by sea, for the city of 4Kulwā, which is large, and consists of wooden houses. The greater part of the inhabitants are Zunūj of the sect of Shāfīa, of religious and peaceful habits. The king of this place, at the time I entered it, was 'Abu El Mozaffir Hasan, a person who had obtained great victories over the countries of the infidel Zunūj. He gave much away in alms. The greatest gift bestowed by the people of these countries is ivory, which is the elephant's tooth: they seldom give gold. I then proceeded to the city of 7Zafār† by sea: this is the farthest city of Yemen,

---

* See D'Herbelot, under Zeng. From this word the Zanguebar of the maps seems to be derived. It is doubtful, however, whether our traveller proceeded so far south as to touch on those countries as there given.
† This is the Mombas of Hamilton. India, chap. i.
‡ Asseman's Biblioth. Orient., tom. iii. P. 2, p. dccclxxv.; and D'Herbelot under Dhafar. Abulfeda puts this place in the following longitudes and latitudes, viz. after the Atwāl in long. 16° 30', lat. 13° 30'; the Kānūn, long. 67° 8', lat. 13° 30'; Ibn Said, 73° 8'; the Rasam, 73° 8'. No reliance can be placed on the other numbers given, I therefore omit them. He then describes the place thus:

وطظراء مدينة على ساحل خورود خرج من البحار الجنوبي وتعت في البحيرة الشمالية نحو مية ميل وعلى طرف هذا البحار ظفراء ولخرج من الراص من ظفراء في هذا البحور الا برخ البريقالة منها and situated on the shore of the Indian sea. From this place they carry horses to India; and when the wind is fair they pass from it to the Indian shores in a full month. Between Zafār and Aden, by land, is the distance of a month; but between it and †\textsuperscript{\textcircled{1}} Hadramaut* that of sixteen days; and between it and ‡\textsuperscript{\textcircled{1}} Ammān\† twenty days. This city of Zafār stands alone in a large plain, in which there is no other village or governed district. It is a filthy place, and full of flies on account of the great quantity of fish and dates which are sold there. They feed their beasts and flocks also with fish, a custom witnessed by me no where else. Their money is made of copper and tin: they bathe several times in the day on account of the heat of their country. Their diseases are generally the elephantiasis and hernia. The greatest wonder among them is, that they injure no one unless he have previously injured them. Many kings have attempted their country, but have been forced to return, with the effects of their devices upon their own necks. At the distance of half a day from this place is the city of "El Ahkāf,† the residence of the "people of

\textsuperscript{*} See D'Herbelot, under Hadhramout.

\textsuperscript{†} We have, in the Marāsid El Iltāa, this word pronounced Omān, and the place is said to be a westerly tract of land on the shore of the sea of Yemen, and on the east of Hajār; that it contains two towns; its heat is proverbial, and its inhabitants of the Ibitāsia sect of heretics.

\textsuperscript{‡} This word means sand-hills or banks, as mentioned in the note on Zafār. The author of the Marāsid El Iltāa says on it
"Aâd.* In this city there are many gardens, in which there is the large and sweet fruit of the *banana, the seed of one of which will weigh ten ounces.† There is also the *betel-tree, and that of the *cocoa-nut, which are generally found no where else except in India, and to those of India may these be compared. I shall now describe both. With respect to the betel-leaf, its tree is supported just as that of unripe grapes generally is; they prop it up with reeds.‡ It is planted near the cocoa-nut, and is sometimes supported by it. The betel-tree produces no fruit, but is reared merely for its leaf, which is like the leaf of the *thorn, and the smallest are the best. These leaves are plucked daily. The people of India esteem it very highly, for whenever any one of them receives a visit from another, the present made is five of these leaves, which is thought to be very splendid, particularly if the donor happen to be one of the nobles. This gift is esteemed among them as being much more valuable than that of gold or silver. Its use is as follows: A grain of fawfel (which is in some respects like a ‘nut-meg) is first taken and broken into small pieces; it is then put into the mouth and chewed. A leaf of the betel is then taken, and when sprinkled with a little quick lime is put into the mouth and chewed with the fawfel. Its properties are to sweeten the breath, help the digestion, and to obviate the danger incident to drinking water on an empty stomach: it also elevates the spirits and stimulates to venery.

As to the *cocoa nut, it is the same with the *Indian nut. The tree is very rare and valuable. It is something like the palm. The nut is like a

* A tribe mentioned in the Koran.
† As this passage appears obscure to me, I give the original. تبلغ الأعمى منه ورماني مشروفة عيني. El Aḥkaf is the plural of Hikf, sand, and it is taken to signify a crooked sand-bank. But the Aḥkaf which is mentioned in the Koran is a valley between Ommán (al. Ammán) and the country of Mahráz; it is also said to be between Ommán and Hadramout: they are sand-banks which approach the sea.
‡ Knox says: “the tree that bears the betel-leaf, so much loved and eaten in these parts, grows like ivy, twining about trees or poles which they stick in the ground for it to run up by, and as the betel grows, the poles grow also.” Ceylon, p. 34.
man's head; for it has something like two eyes and a mouth; and within, when green, is like the brains. Upon it too is a fibre like hair. From this they make cords with which they sew their vessels together, instead of iron nails. They also make great ropes for their anchors out of it.*

The properties of this nut are, to nourish and quickly to fatten the body,—to make the face red, and greatly to stimulate to venery. Milk, oil olive, and honey, are also made out of it. They make the honey thus: having cut off the tendril on which the fruit would be formed, leaving it, however, about the length of two fingers, they then suspend a larger or smaller pot to it, and into this a kind of water drops, which they collect morning and evening. They then expose it to the fire, just as they do dried grapes, and it becomes stiff, and exceedingly sweet, honey: out of this they make sweetmeats.† As to the making of milk, they open a side of the nut, take out the whole of the inside with a knife, and put it on a plate. This they macerate well in water. It then becomes milk, both as to taste and colour: and is eaten as such. The oil-olive is thus made: When the nut is ripe and has fallen from the tree, they peel off the bark and cut it

* According to Mr. Crawfurd, a species of this palm, called the gomuti in the islands of the Indian archipelago, produces a superior kind of cordage to that of the cocoa-nut: and while that of the cocoa-nut is most in use in the Maldives, Ceylon, &c., this prevails in the parts he is describing, vol. i. pp. 380, 398. It is curious enough to observe, that the same thing is said by Abu Zaid El Hasan, in his remarks on the Arab travellers of the ninth century, translated by Renaudot, when speaking of the ships of these parts; and that the editor doubts the truth of the statement. See Pinkerton's Voyages and Travels, vol. vii. pp. 207, 220, where the whole process of making is described.

† Mr. Crawfurd's description of the manner in which the toddy is extracted from the gomuti palm is so nearly allied to this, that I cannot forbear copying it, vol. i. p. 398: "The principal production of this palm is the toddy, which is procured in the same manner as from other palms, or in the following mode: one of the spathes, or shoots of fructification, is on the first appearance of its fruit beaten for three successive days with a small stick, with the view of determining the sap to the wounded part. The shoot is then cut off a little way from the root, and the liquor which pours out is received in pots of earthenware, in bamboos, or other vessels. When newly drawn the liquor is clear, and in taste resembles fresh must. In a very short time it becomes turbid, whitish, and somewhat acrid, and quickly runs into a viscous fermentation, acquiring an intoxicating quality. A still larger quantity is immediately applied to the purpose of yielding sugar. With this view the liquor is boiled to a syrup, and thrown out to cool in small vessels, the form of which it takes, and in this shape it is sold in the markets." The manner of making the oil is also mentioned by Mr. Crawfurd, pp. 381, 382.
into pieces; it is then placed in the sun, and when it is withered they heat it in a pot, and having extracted its oil, eat it with their breakfast and other meals. The Sultan of Zafār is ‘El Malik El Mogith, uncle’s son to the King of Yemen.

Leaving Zafār, I proceeded by sea towards ‘Ammān, and on the second day put into the port of ‘Hāsik; where many Arab fishermen reside. We have here the 3 incense tree.* This tree has a thin leaf, which when scarified produces a fluid like milk: this turns into gum, and is then called ‘lobān, or frankincense. The houses are built with the bones of fish, and are covered with the skins of camels.

Leaving this place, we arrived in four days at the mountain of “Lomaān, which stands in the middle of the sea. On the top of it is a strong edifice of stone, and on the outside of this there is a reservoir for the rain-water.

After two days I arrived at the island of ḌTair, in which there is not a house: it abounds with such birds as the ‘sparrow. After this I came to a large island, in which the inhabitants have nothing to eat but fish. I then arrived at the city of “Kulhāt,† which is situated on the top of a mountain. The inhabitants are Arabs, whose language is far from elegant, and who are, for the most part, “schismatics. This, however, they keep

* This is the χάλκη of the Greeks. See the Phaleg. of Bochart, lib. ii. cap. 18, or, as appended to the Monumenta Vetustiora Arabica, by Alb. Schultens, pp. 23-6.

† This is written Kalhāt by the author of the Marāsid El Ilāā, who says: "It was a city in ‘Ammān upon the seashore, which is well inhabited and populous: the inhabitants, however, are all schismatics of the ḏBaṭṣa sect, which they openly profess. As some further notices will occur of this sect, I will here give what the author of the Kāmoth with Jawhart says about it. A city in the coast of ‘Ammān, built on the sea shore, and inhabited by people who are schismatics of the Bāṭṣa sect, which they openly profess.

El ḏBaṭṣ... Abd Allah Ibn ‘Aḥṣab al-‘Ibāṣī, the followers of the sect of the ‘Ibāṣī sect, called the ‘Ibāṣī sect, and the followers of Ibn ‘Aḥṣab Abd Allah Ibn ‘Aḥṣab; i.e. 'the ‘Ibāṣī sect, the followers of Ibn ‘Aḥṣab Abd Allah Ibn ‘Aḥṣab, who, as our traveller will presently tell us, is, according to them, the saint who is to put an end to error.
secret, because they are subject to the King of Hormuz, who is of the Sonnee sect.

I then set out for the country of Ammān, and after six days' journey through a desert, arrived there on the seventh. It abounds with trees, rivers, gardens, with palms, and various fruit trees. I entered one of the principal cities of these parts, which is Nazwā.

This is situated on a hill, and abounds with gardens and water. The inhabitants are schismatics of the Ḳibāizā sect. They fall in with the opinions of the base Ibn Moljam, and say, that he is the saint who shall put an end to error. They also allow the Califate of Abu Beker and Omar, but deny those of Othman and Ali. Their wives are most base; yet, without denying this, they express nothing like jealousy on the subject.

The Sultan of Ammān is an Arab of the tribe of El Azd, named Abu Mohammed Ibn Nahbān; but Abu Mohammed is with them a general title, given to any ruler, just as Atābek, and other titles are, to Sultans of other places. The inhabitants eat the flesh of the domestic ass, which is sold in the streets, and which they say is lawful.

---

* This is probably the Marāṣid El İltā (مراسم إل إلتا) which is there said to be a hill in Ammān; there is, it is added, a number of large villages on the shore near it, the whole of which are called by this name. The inhabitants are of the Ḳibāizā sect.

† See the Annales Muslemici, tom. i., pp. 332-3, &c.

‡ See D'Herbelot, under Azd.

§ So the Pharaohs of Egypt, (i.e. Pe Ouro. Copt.) the king: the Abimeleks of Gerar among the Philistines, &c. According to Abulfeda, the title of Atàbek was first given by Malik Shah to his Vizier Nizān El Mulk, A.D. 1052. Annales Muslemici, vol. iii., p. 229-7.
CHAPTER X.

From this place I went to Hormuz,* which is a city built on the seashore; opposite to which, but within the sea, is "New Hormuz. This is an island, the city of which is called "Harauna. It is a large and beautiful place, and here the King resides. The island is in extent about a day's journey: but the greatest part of it consists of salt earth, and of hills of Dârâni salt.† The inhabitants subsist upon fish and dates, the latter of which is brought from Basra or Ammân. They have but little water. The most strange thing I saw here, was the head of a fish, which might be compared to a hill. Its eyes were like two doors, so that people could go in at the one, and out at the other. The Sultan of Hormuz was at this time Koth Oddîn Tamahtas, son of Turân Shah,‡ a most generous and brave prince. Under his control were the pearl fisheries.

From Harauna I proceeded to Janja Bâl,§ for the purpose of visiting a

---

* See an excellent geographical article on this place in Asseman's Bibloth. Orient., tom. iii., P. 2, pp. dcclvii-viii.; also Sir Wm. Ouseley's Oriental Geography, pp. 12, 88, 138, 140, 141, &c.; and D'Herbelot, art. Hormoz.

† According to the author of the Kâmoos, this patronymic is irregularly formed, but refers to Darâyâ, a town in Syria, vol. i. p. 638, edit. Calcutta. Jâmi tells us in the Nusuktâ al-nisâ, that it is referred to Dârâ, one of the villages of Damascus: his words are: داران إحدى أز دارا داران دهست از دههای دسته. See also Mr. Hamaker's "Liber de expugnatione Memphidiae," &c., who derives it from داران.

‡ De Guignes has given a list of the Kings of Ormuz (tom. i. p. 345), from Texeira, which he had some suspicion was not very correct. In this Turan Shah is placed in 1378: but our traveller places a son of this prince upon the throne before 1940, and gives him a name not to be found in Texeira's list; the suspicion of De Guignes is therefore well-founded.

§ This is, perhaps, the Jergânban of Mr. Ulenbroek, see his Irac. Persic, descriptio, p. 65. In the Marâsîd El Ilîa this place is given جرگانبان, and is said to be a large village between Sawa and Aldi. قرية كبيرة بين سوء والدي.
certain saint. I accordingly crossed the sea, and then hired some Turko-mäns, who inhabit these parts, and without whose assistance there is no travelling, on account of their courage and knowledge of the roads. We have now a waterless desert, four days in extent, over which the Badawin Arab caravans travel. In this the S瞳moo blows during the months of June and July, and kills every one it meets with, after which his limbs drop off. Over this I travelled, and arrived at the country of Kauristân (Kü-zistan), which is small. From this place I proceeded for three days over a desert like the former, till I came to Lär,* which is a large and beautiful city, abounding with rain water and gardens. I now went to the cell of the holy Sheikh Abu Dolaf, the person whom I intended to visit at Janja Bāl.

In this cell was his son Abd El Rahmān, with a number of Fakeers. In the same cell resides a Sultan, whom they call Jalāl Oddin El Turko-mānī.

I next went to the city of Janja Bāl, in which the Sheikh Abu Dolaf resided. I went to his cell, and found him alone sitting on the side of it upon the ground, and clothed in an old woollen garment.† I saluted him; he returned the salute, and then asked me about my coming thither, and of my country. He afterwards made me stay with him, and, by one of his sons, who is a pious, humble, abstemious, and very good man, he sent me meat and fruits. This Sheikh is an astonishing man. He has a very large cell, and bestows costly presents; and moreover clothes and feeds all who visit him. I saw no one like him in these parts, nor is it known whence his income is derived, unless it is brought to him by the brotherhood.‡ Most people, however, think that it is from miraculous operations.§ The people of these parts are of the sect of Shāfīa.

* The capital of Laristān.
† Jubbāti Sīf. Hence, as it is generally believed, the Sūfīs have received their name. See Tholuck's Sufismus &c. Berolini, 1821, p. 26, &c.
‡ Of this brotherhood, or society, some notice will be taken hereafter.
§ The passage is كُون, where is the only word which can create any difficulty. It is generally defined to mean, "matter not existing from eternity, but produced in time," (جَيْبَ حادث يتغي نبود ويدا اهد). In this place it probably means money produced out of matter by some miraculous process.
I then bade farewell to the Sheikh, and travelled on to the city of 'Kaisa, which is also called 'Siraf.* It is situated on the shore of the Indian ocean, and near to the sea of Yemen. 'Fars is a good and extensive district: its gardens are wonderfully rich in scented herbs. The inhabitants are Persians: those, however, who dive for the pearls are Arabs. The pearl-fisheries which are between 'Siraf and 'Bahrein are situated in a quiet gulf of the sea, not unlike a large valley. To this place comes a great number of boats, and in these are the divers, with the merchants of Fars and Bahrein. When one of the divers intends to go down, he places something upon his face made out of tortoise-shell, and in this a place for the nose is cut out; he then ties a rope round his middle and goes down. The time they will remain under water varies; some will remain an hour, others two, others less. When the diver gets to the bottom of the sea, he finds the shells firmly fixed in the sand among trees (of coral). He then either tears them off with his hands, or cuts them away with an iron knife, and puts them into a leathern bag which hangs to his neck. When he begins to experience a difficulty of remaining under water, he shakes the rope, and the man who holds it draws him up, and puts him into the boat. The bag is then taken and the shells opened, and they find in each a piece of flesh, which being cut away with a knife and exposed to the air, hardens and becomes a pearl. After this both great and small are collected together, and one-fifth goes to the King: the rest are sold to the merchants present. To many of these merchants, however, the divers are generally in debt, and in this case the pearls are taken by way of payment.

I next proceeded from 'Siraf to the city of 'Bahrein,† which is a large and handsome place, abounding in gardens and water. It is wonderfully hot, and so very sandy, that the houses will sometimes be overwhelmed with sand. There is at both the eastern and western side of it, a hill (or bank): the one they call 'Kosair, the other 'Hoair, and on these they

---

* See Asseman's Bib. Or., tom. iii. P. 2, p. dccxxix; Sir Wm. Ouseley's Oriental Geography, pp. 11, 82, 88, 104, 105, &c.; and Edritz, section 6 of the third Climate.
† See D'Herbelot, art. Bahrein. have an adage, and say: "Kosair and Hoair, and, indeed, every opponent brings advantage" (كسر وهو روبر وكيل غير خير).

I then travelled to the city of Kotaif,† (as if it were a word of the diminutive form from Kotf). It is, however, a large and handsome place, inhabited by Arabs of the Rafa'iza sect, extremely enthusiastic, publishing their sentiments and fearing no one. From this place I proceeded to the city of 'Hajar, which, however, is now called El Hasa. We have here a greater abundance of dates than is to be found elsewhere, and which are used as fodder for the beasts. The inhabitants are Arabs of the tribe of "Abd El Kais. From this place I travelled to Yemama, which is also called Hajr,‡ a beautiful and fertile city, abounding with water and gardens.

* Edrisi, in his 6th sect. of the 2d climate, mentions these hills in the following manner:

† Edrisi says of this place, sect. vii. Cln. iii. As to the city of Kotaif, it is close to the sea, and is in itself large. From Kotaif to El Absa are two stages, and from the same place to Hamas a distance of two days, and this place is also situated on the Persian Gulf.

‡ In speaking of this place Edrisi says: Then to El Absa one stage, thence to Hamas one stage, thence to the shore of Hajr one stage; and all these stages, &c. In the 6th sect. of the 2d climate this place is also mentioned, as is likewise Yamama: the words are
The inhabitants are, for the most part, of the tribe *Beni Hanifa; they are the ancient possessors of this district. *From this place I went on pilgrimage and arrived at Mecca, in the year 733 of the Hejira (A.D. 1332). In this year the Sultan of Egypt El Malik El Nasir, also performed the pilgrimage. After finishing the pilgrimage, I proceeded towards *Judda, intending to go by way of Yemen to India: but in this I failed. I then proceeded by sea towards *Aidhab, but was driven by the wind into a port called *Ras Dawair. From this place I travelled by land with the *Beja, and passed over a desert, in which there was a great number of ostriches and gazelles, and some Badawin Arabs subject to the Beja. After a journey of nine days I arrived at *Aidhab; and leaving this place, and ومع الشمال أرض اليمامة ومدناها جزيرة في خراشها و بها كانت اليمامة المرة ماكينة في وقتها وم ساحل هجر الي البصرة طريق علي الساحل غير معمورة. And with the northern country of El Yemama, and of its cities is Hajar, which is now in ruins. In this country resided the queen Yemama in her times .... From the shores of Hajar there is a road to Basra along the shore, but uninhabited. See also Annales Muslemici, tom. i., p.173. Abulfeda, however, places El Ahsa (الحسا) in long. 73° (or 8°) 30′, lat. 22° 8′, and says it is a small city abounding with palms and running water: its springs are exceedingly hot. El Ahsa is in the desert, and is from Kotaif (Katif) in a south western direction about two stages. Its palms are as numerous as those in the vale of Damascus, and they are all round it. It is said in the Moshtarak, that Ahsa is the plural of Hiss, which means sand, into which the water sinks, and proceeds until it comes to the hard earth, which retains it. In this the Arabs dig and draw out the water. El Ahsa, therefore, has become the proper name of a place among the districts of the Arabs. This is the Ahsa of the tribe Beni Saad of Hajar, and is a residence of the Karamae (heretics so called) in Bahrain. It is also said, that the Ahsa of the Beni Saad, is a different place from that of the Karamae. El Ahsa has no walls. Between it and Yemama is a distance of four days. The people both of Ahsa and Kotaif carry fruits to El Kharj, a valley of Yemama, and for every camel-burden of fruit, they buy another of wheat.

passing through district after district in Upper Egypt, arrived at last at Cairo, where I remained some days. Hence I proceeded to Syria, and then to Jerusalem. From this place I went to 'El Ramla, *Acca, *Tripoli, Jabala, and *El Lādhikīā (Laodicea). And from this I went by sea to the country of *Room, which has been so called, because it formerly belonged to the Romans:† and, even now, they are here in considerable numbers, under the protection of the Mohammedans. Here are also many Turkomans. I next arrived at *El Alayā, which is a large city upon the sea shore, inhabited by Turkomāns. The present Sultan is *Yūsuf Beg, son of *Karmān. I was introduced to him. Our meeting was pleasant, and he furnished us with provisions.‡

CHAPTER XI.

From this place I proceeded to the district of *Anatolia,§ which contains some handsome cities. In all the Turkomān towns there is a Brotherhood of *youths, one of whom is termed إخَى (my brother, i.e. the word brother joined with the pronoun of the first person singular إِمَّي). No people are more courteous to strangers, more readily supply them with food

١ الرملة. ٢ طرابلس. ٣ جبلة. ٤ اللاذقيه. ٥ الروم. ٦ الملايا. ٧ يصف بيات. ٨ ابن قرمان. ٩ اتلاليه. ١٠ الأخية الفتية.

† See D'Herbelot, under the article Roum.
‡ Of this prince De Guignes gives us no account whatever.
§ According to the Marāsid El Idās, بلد كبير من مشاهير بلاد الروم وهو حسن علي شاطي, a large, well-known and handsome district of Room, situated on the sea-shore; it is strong, contains many villages and inhabitants, and is near the gulf of Constantinople. See also Annales Muslemici, tom. iv. p. 220–1.
and other necessaries, or are more opposed to oppressors than they are. The person who is styled the Brother is one, about whom persons of the same occupation, or even foreign youths, who happen to be destitute, collect and constitute their president. He then builds a cell, and in this he puts a horse, a saddle, and whatever other implements may be wanting. He then attends daily upon his companions, and assists them with whatever they may happen to want. In the evening they come to him and bring all they have got, which is sold to purchase food, fruit, &c. for the use of the cell. Should a stranger happen to arrive in their country, they get him among them, and with this provision they entertain him; nor does he leave them till he finally leaves their country. If, however, no traveller arrive, then they assemble to eat up their provisions, which they do with drinking, singing, and dancing. On the morrow, they return to their occupations, and in the evening return again to their president. They are therefore styled “the Youths,” their president “the Brother.”

In this city I went to the college of its Sheikh, Shahāb Oddin El Hamāwi; and, on the second day, one of this society came to me. He was addressed by the Sheikh in Turkish. The Sheikh told me that this man came to invite us to a feast. I was much astonished, and said to the Sheikh, This is a poor man, how can he afford to feast us, who are many. The Sheikh was surprised at my reply, and said: This is one of the Brotherhood, a society consisting of two hundred silk merchants, who have a cell of their own. I consented, therefore, and went to the cell, and witnessed the astonishing attention, kindness, and liberality which they shewed their guests. May God reward them! The Sultan of Anatolia was ṢKhāzir Beg Ibn Yūnus the Turkomān. I was presented to him. He was then sick. He behaved very liberally towards us, gave us provisions, and sent money for our travelling expenses.

I next proceeded to the town of ṢBurdūr, which is small, and surrounded by trees and gardens. I first went to the house of the Khatib (the preacher), and there met the society of the Brotherhood, who invited us to their feast.

* No mention of this prince occurs in De Guignes.
The Khatib refused to go: they therefore gave us a feast in a garden without the town. I was truly astonished at their wish to shew us every respect and attention, although we were ignorant of their language, and they of ours.

From this place I went to the town of 'Sabartā, which is handsomely built, and has good streets. I next went to the city of 'Akridūr, which is large, and abounding with trees and water. A lake of sweet water adjoins it, over which vessels pass, in the space of two days, to the town of Akshahar, and to other places. I here put up at the lecturer's, "El Fāzil Moslih Oddin, who treated me very respectfully. The Sultan of this place was "Abu Is-hāk Beg, one of the greatest princes of these parts. He gave us protection in his district throughout the month of Ramadān. During my residence I was introduced to him; after this he sent me a horse and some money. He is a condescending and excellent prince.

I then went to the city of 'Karā Hisār.* It is small, and surrounded by water on every side. The Sultan is 'Mohammed Chelebī. He is the brother of Abu Is-hāk, King of Akrīdūr. I was introduced to him, and he treated me with great respect, and gave me some provisions. After this I proceeded to the city of 'Lādhik, which is a large and fine city, abounding with water and gardens. As soon as I had entered it, a number of persons who were in the streets got up and seized upon the bridles of our horses; after which others came and contested the point with them. We were much alarmed at this; but a person coming up who could speak Arabic, said they were contending only as to who should entertain us, as they were of the society of Youths. Upon this I felt safe. They then cast lots, and we proceeded to the cell of the party on whom the lot fell, and on the day following, to that of the other. Both the parties shewed us the greatest respect. The Sultan 'Yataj Beg, who is one of the greatest princes of these parts, hearing of us, sent for us and treated us with great respect.

* According to the Marāsid El Itlāa, a large farm on the north of Aleppo.
I then proceeded to the fortress of 'Tawās, then to the city of 'Milās, which is large and beautiful. Its Sultan is 'Urkhān Beg, 'Ibn El Man-tashā. When I was introduced to him he treated me with great respect: he is a very excellent prince.* I proceeded from this place to the city of *Kūnīa,† which is large and handsome, and abounds with water and gardens. This district belongs to the Sultan 'Badr Oddin Ibn Karmān; over which, however, the King of Irāk has occasionally had the rule, on account of its proximity to some of his states which are in these parts. I put up at the cell of its Kāzī, who is known by the name of 'Ibn Kalam Shāh. He is a member of the society of Youths. His cell is most beautiful; and he has a great number of disciples, who trace the authorities for their judicial decisions as high as Ali Ibn Abī Tālib. They are clothed as the Sāfis are with the khirka,‡ and close trowsers.

In this place is the tomb of the holy Sheikh 'Jalāl Oddin, better known by the title of *Mawlānā§ (our Mawla). He is very highly esteemed. It is said, that he was at first a mere lecturing doctor who had a large number of pupils: but upon a certain day a stranger came into his lecture-room with a basket of sweetmeats, which he had for sale, upon his head; the Sheikh said to him, bring your basket here. The man took a piece of sweetmeat and gave it to the Sheikh, who ate it. He then went out, no one else having tasted the sweetmeat; the Sheikh became agitated and went out after him, giving up his reading, and leaving his pupils in a state of expectation. At length, however, they set out in quest of him, but failed to discover the place of his retreat. Some years after, he returned with his mind deranged, and speaking nothing but Persian verses. These

---

* According to De Guignes, this Ottoman prince reigned from 1326 to 1369 (tom. i. p. 271), and consequently he must have been living when our traveller was in these parts.
† Iconium.
‡ A coarse ragged garment worn by the religious beggars of the east.
§ See an interesting article on this writer in fourth Tābākā (طبیعة الهمار) of Dāwlatshāh, art. مولانا جلال الدين رومي, and in the نصائح الآنس by Jemā, not far from the end.
his pupils, as they followed him, noted down and published under the title of the Mathnavi, a book highly esteemed in these parts.

I next proceeded to "Läranda," the Sultan of which is "El Malik Badr Oddin Ibn Karmān, who makes this place his capital. I met him, and was entertained with the greatest kindness as his guest.

I then proceeded to "Aksarā, which is one of the finest districts of Room, and subject to the king of Irāk. I next went to the city of Nikda, then to "Kisaria (Cæsarea), both of which are subject to the king of Irāk. I next proceeded to the city of Sivās, which is also subject to the king of Irāk. It is a large place, and now the rendezvous of the greater part of the king's army. I next went to the city of Amāsiā, then to Sūnusa, then to Kumash, then to Azanjan, then to Arzerrūm; all of which are subject to the king of Irāk. In "Arzerrum I saw the brother "Tūmān, one of the Society of Youths, whose age exceeded one hundred and thirty years. He was still in possession of all his faculties, and could walk wherever he wished. After receiving his blessing I proceeded to the city of Birki, the king of which was Mohammed Ibn Aidin; I was, in company with the lecturer of this place Mohyī Oddin, one of the most celebrated and reputable men of his age, introduced to the presence.

The king one day said to me, have you ever seen a stone that came down from heaven?++ I answered, No. He continued, such a stone has fallen in the environs of our city. He then called some men and ordered them to bring the stone, which they did. It was a black, solid, exceedingly hard, and shining, substance. If weighed it would probably exceed a talent.§ He then ordered some stone-cutters to come in, when four came forward. He commanded them to strike upon it. They all struck together upon it

++ See D’Herbelot, under the article Mathnaoui.
§ See D’Herbelot, under Amasia.
§ For some very interesting accounts of other phenomena of this sort, see the second edition of M. De Sacy’s Chrestomathie Arabe, tom. iii. pp. 437-441.
§ According to some 112, to others 130 pounds weight.
accordingly with an iron hammer four successive strokes, which, however, made not the least impression upon it. I was much astonished at this. The king then ordered the stone to be taken to its place. He sent fruit and food to us during the time we remained there; and, when I had bidden him farewell, he sent me a thousand dirhems with one hundred mithkâls of gold, as also clothing, two horses, and a slave. He also sent for my companions some dirhems and clothing separately.

I then proceeded to the city of 'Tira, which belongs also to this prince. It is large, and abounds with gardens and water. From this place I went to the city of 'Ayäsulük, the Emîr of which is the Sultan 'Mohammed Ibn Aidin, son of the Sultan of 'Birki; then to the city of 'Yazîrî, which belongs to the Sultan of Birki; its Emîr is 'Omar Beg, one of the Sultan's sons, and a most excellent prince. I then proceeded to the city of 'Magnesia, the Sultan of which is called 'Sâru Khân. I then went to the city of 'Bergama (Pergamos), of which the philosopher Plato is said to have been an inhabitant. His house is still seen here. The Sultan of this place is styled 'Bakhshî Khân. I next went to the city of 'Balî Kasra, which is large and beautiful. Its governor is called 'Dâmûr Khân. I then went to the city of 'Burûsa,* which is a large place, and governed by 'Ikhtiyâr Oddin Urkhân Beg, son of 'Othmân Jûk. This is one of the greatest, richest, and most extensive in rule, and commanding the greatest army of all the Turkoman kings. His practice is, constantly to be visiting his fortresses and districts, and to be inquiring into their circumstances. It is said that he never remained a month in any one place. His father had con-

---

* Mr. Kosegarten has here یربسìی which he writes Bursa. Our copies add مدینة عظيمة a great city: and again وکثرهم مالا و بدنا و مسکور و هرفی أكثر اوقاتا لا يزال يطوف على حصنهم و بلده و يعتقد احرازا و يقال له أنه لم يقم شاه کاملا بلند قط و راده &c. This I notice to shew, that the copies differ considerably in some instances, and to warn the reader, that, where my translation differs from Mr. Kosegarten's, he must not immediately conclude that either of us is wrong.
quered the city of Burūsa, and had besieged that of "Yaznīk,* nearly twenty years, but did not take it; after this his son besieged it for twelve years and took it. In this place I met him; he received me very respectfully, and provided me with a considerable number of dirhems. I next went to Yaznīk. It has a large lake eight miles in length; the city is also surrounded with water and trees. I then left this place, and after some days arrived at the city of 'Bustūnī;† after this at the city of 'Būlī, the king of which is 'Shāh Beg. I then went to the city of 'Burlū, which belongs to the governor of "Kastamūnia. I then went to Kastamūnia, which is a very large and beautiful city, abounding with every delicacy, which may be purchased at a very low rate. I saw an aged Sheikh among its inhabitants, whose age, as I was told, amounted to that of one hundred and sixty-two years. Its Sultan was "Suleimān Bādshah, a splendid, but aged man; he is a respectable and respected person. I was introduced to him, and received very honourably.

CHAPTER XII.

Sanūb—Crim—Kirash—The Desert of Kifjāk—El Kafā, subject to Mohammed Uzbeck Khan—El Sarai—Azāk—El Mājar—Bish Tağ, the Camp of Mohammed Uzbeck—Ceremonies observed here—Bulgār—Mode of travelling here—Astrachan—Permission to visit Constantinople—Ukak—Mountains of the Russians—Surdāk—Bāhā Saltāk.

I then went on to the city of "Sanūb, which is large, and belongs to the governor of Kastamūnia, Soleimān Bādshah. I remained here some time.

Leaving this place I proceeded by sea for the city of "El Kiram (Crim),

---

* Mr. Kosegarten has Aznîk which he writes Iznîk.
† So Mr. Kosegarten, which he writes Materni.
‡ Mr. K. Boli. Our MSS. present here large additions to that of Mr. Kosegarten.
but suffered considerable distress in the voyage, and was very near being drowned.† We arrived, however, at length, at the port of "El Kirash, which belongs to the desert country of "Kifjak." This desert is green and productive: it has, however, neither tree, mountain, hill, nor wood in it. The inhabitants burn dung. They travel over this desert upon a cart, which they call "Araba." The journey is one of six months; the extent of three of which belongs to the Sultan "Mohammed Uzbek Khan;" † that of three more to the infidels. I hired one of these carts for my journey from the port of Kirash to the city of "El Kafā, which belongs to Mohammed Uzbek. The greater part of the inhabitants are Christians,‡ living under his protection. From this place I travelled in a cart, to the city of "El Kiram, which is one of the large and beautiful cities of the districts of the Sultan Mohammed Uzbek Khan. From this place I proceeded, upon a cart which I had hired, to the city of "El Sarai,§ the residence of Mohammed Uzbek. The peculiarity of this desert is, that its herbs serve for fodder for their beasts: and on this account their cattle are numerous. They have neither feeders nor keepers, which arises from the severity of their laws against theft, which are these: When any one is con-

---

* On the origin of this name and people, see D'Herbelot's very interesting article, under Cabgiak.
† "Uzbek Khan, fils de Toghtagou, meurt, selon les Russes en 1841." De Guignes, Hist. gen. de Huna, tom. i. p. 287. He must, therefore, have been living when our traveller visited these parts. In tom. iv. however, pp. 284-5, it is stated that he died in 1335 or 6, and what is still more decisive the author proceeds: "on remarque que l'époque de sa mort est celle de la naissance du fameux Tamerlan. Les Arabes ont désigné cette année par ce mot de leur langue Loudâ qui signifie refuge, pour faire voir que les hommes avaient besoin d'asyle dans si grandes calamités. Les lettres qui forment ce mot, en les prenent selon leur valeur numérique, désignent l'année 736 de l'Hegire." He was descended of the Mogul dynasty of Kifjak (De Guignes, Captchaq). For some account of the movements of this prince about this time, see D'Herbelot, art. Abou-Said, and of his successors, art. Uzbek.
‡ These Christians were generally Nestorians, and were well treated for the most part under Mohammed Uzbek Khan. See Asseman's Biblioth. Orient., tom. iii. P. 2, pp. ci. and cxxi, &c., where we have some very valuable notices respecting them. See also D'Herbelot, under the articles Crim, and Solgat.
§ See D'Herbelot, under Sarai.
victed of having stolen a beast, he is compelled to return it with nine others of equal value. But, if this is not in his power, his children are taken. If, however, he have no children, he is himself slaughtered just like a sheep.

After several days' journey I arrived at "Azāk,* which is a small town situated on the sea-shore. In it resides an Emīr on the part of the Sultan Mohammed, who treated us with great respect and hospitality. From this place I proceeded to the city of "El Mājar, which is a large and handsome place. The Turkish women of these parts are very highly respected, particularly the wives of the nobles and kings. These women are religious, and prone to almsgiving and other good works. They go unveiled, however, with their faces quite exposed.

I next set out for the camp of the Sultan, which was then in a place called "Bish Tāg, or Five Mountains, and arrived at a station to which the Sultan with his retinue had just come before us: at this place, which is termed the urdū, or camp, we arrived on the first of the month Ramadān. Here we witnessed a moving city, with its streets, mosques, and cooking-houses, the smoke of which ascended as they moved along. When, however, they halted, all these became stationary. This Sultan Mohammed Uzbek is very powerful, enjoys extensive rule, and is a subdser of the infidels. He is one of the seven great kings of the world; which are, the Sultan of the West, the Sultan of Egypt and Syria, the Sultan of the two Irāks, the Sultan of the Turks Uzbek, the Sultan of Turkistān and "Māwarā El Nahar, the Sultan of India, and the Sultan of China.

It is a custom with Mohammed Uzbek to sit after prayer on the Friday, under an alcove called the "golden alcove," which is very much ornamented: he has a throne in the middle of it, overlaid with silver plate, which is gilded and set with jewels. The Sultan sits upon the throne; his four wives, some at his right hand,† others at his left, sitting also upon the

* See D'Herbelot, under Azac.

† We have here a fine illustration of the regal pomp exhibited in the 45th Psalm, where we find the queen also enjoying the honour due to her rank, very unlike the practice of the Mohammedans, among whom they are never allowed to appear in public. We shall hereafter find something similar to this witnessed by our traveller in the island of Sumatra.
throne. Beneath the throne stand his two sons, one on his right, the other on his left; before him sits his daughter. Whenever one of these wives enters, he arises, and taking her by the hand, puts her into her place upon the throne. Thus they are exposed to the sight of all, without so much as a veil. After this, come in the great Emirs, for whom chairs are placed on the right and left, and on these they sit. Before the King stand the princes, who are the sons of his uncle, brothers, and near kinsmen. In front of these, and near the door, stand the sons of the great Emirs; and behind these, the general officers of the army. People then enter, according to their rank; and saluting the King, return and take their seats at a distance. When, however, the evening prayer is over, the supreme consort, who is Queen, returns; the rest follow, each with their attendant beautiful slaves. The women, who are separated on account of any uncleanness, are seated upon horses; before their carriages are cavalry, behind them beautiful Mamluks. Upon this day I was presented to the Sultan, who received me very graciously, and afterwards sent me some sheep and a horse, with a leathern bag of kimiz, which is the milk of a mare; and very much valued among them as a beverage.

The wives of this King are highly honoured. Each one has a mansion for herself, her followers, and servants. When the Sultan wishes to visit one of them, he sends word, and preparation is made. One of these wives is a daughter of 'Takfur, the Emperor of Constantinople. I had already visited each of them, and on this account the Sultan received me: this is a custom among them; and whoever fails in observing it, suffers the imputation of a breach of politeness.

'I had formerly heard of the city of 'Bulgär,' and hence I had conceived a desire to see it; and to observe, whether what had been related of it, as to the extremity of the shortness of its nights, and again of its days, in the opposite season of the year, were true or not. There was, however, between that place, and the camp of the Sultan, a distance of ten days. I requested the Sultan, therefore, that he would appoint some one who would bring me thither and back, which he granted.

When, therefore, I was saying the prayer of sun-set, in that place, which happened in the month of Ramadān, I hasted, nevertheless the time for evening prayer came on, which I went hastily through. I then said that of 'midnight, as well as that termed 'El Witr; but was overtaken by the dawn.* In the same manner also is the day shortened in this place, in the opposite season of the year. I remained here three days, and then returned to the King.

In Bulgār, I was told of the land of darkness, and certainly had a great desire to go to it from that place. The distance, however, was that of forty days. I was diverted, therefore, from the undertaking, both on account of its great danger, and the little good to be derived from it. I was told that there was no travelling thither except upon little sledge, which are drawn by large dogs; and, that during the whole of the journey, the roads are covered with ice, upon which neither the feet of man, nor the hoofs of beast, can take any hold. These dogs, however, have nails by which their feet take firm hold on the ice. No one enters these parts except powerful merchants, each of whom has perhaps a hundred of such sledges as these, which they load with provisions, drinks, and wood: for there we have neither trees, stones, nor houses. The guide in this country is the dog, who has gone the journey several times, the price of which will amount to about a thousand dinars. The sledge is harnessed to his neck, and with him three other dogs are joined, but of which he is the leader. The others then follow him with the sledge, and when he stops they stop. The master never strikes or reprimands this dog; and when he proceeds to a meal, the dogs are fed first: for if this were not done, they would become enraged, and perhaps run away.

* On the prayers and times for performing them generally among the Mahommedans, see M. de Sacy's Chrestomathie Arabe, tom. i. pp. 161-168. Of the last (الوّتْر) he takes no notice: but in the lexicons we are told that it signifies prayer generally, and that which is not prescribed, but spontaneous.
and leave their master to perish. 'When the travellers have completed their forty days or stages through this desert, they arrive at the land of darkness; and each man, leaving what he has brought with him, goes back to his appointed station. On the morrow they return to look for their goods, and find, instead of them, sable, ermine, and the fir of the 'sinjāb.'* If then the merchant likes what he finds, he takes it away; if not, he leaves it, and more is added to it: upon some occasions, however, these people will take back their own goods, and leave those of the merchant's.† In this way is their buying and selling carried on; for the merchants know not whether it is with mankind or demons that they have to do; no one being seen during the transaction.' It is one of the properties of these fires, that no vermin ever enters them.

I returned to the camp of the Sultan on the 28th of Ramadān; and, after that, travelled with him to the city of 'Astrachan, which is one of his cities. It is situated on the banks of the river 'Athal,‡ which is one of the great rivers of the world. At this place the Sultan resides during the very cold weather; and when this river, as well as the adjoining waters, are frozen, the King orders the people of the country to bring thousands of bundles of hay, which they do, and then place it upon the ice, and upon this they travel.

When the King had arrived at Astrachan, one of his wives, who was daughter to the Emperor of Constantinople, and then big with child, requested to be allowed to visit her father, with whom it was her intention to leave her child and then to return: this he granted. I then requested to be permitted to go with her, that I may see Constantinople; and was refused, on account of some fears which he entertained respecting me. I flattered him, however, telling him that I should never appear before her but as his servant and guest, and that he need entertain no fear whatsoever. After this he gave me permission, and I accordingly took my leave.' He gave me fifteen hundred dinars, a dress of honour, and several horses. Each of his ladies also gave me some pieces of bullion silver, which they call El Suwam (المصمان), as did also his sons and daughters.

* See an interesting note by Mr. Kosegarten on this passage, p. 26.
† Mr. Kosegarten has a small addition here, which he translates: "Principes Sinenses bene ex iis augurantur, et summopere eas appetunt, ut ut mille circiter dinaris ibidem aestimantur." Immediately after this our text presents a large addition.
‡ The Volga. See D'Herbelot, under the article Etel.

I set out accordingly on the 10th of the month Shawal, in company with the royal consort 'Bailün, daughter to the Emperor of Constantinople. The Sultan accompanied us through the first stage, in order to encourage her, and then returned. The Queen was attended in her journey by five thousand of the King's army, about five hundred of which were cavalry, as her servants and followers. In this manner we arrived at 'Ukak, which is a moderately sized town but excessively cold. Between this place and 'El Sarāi which belongs to the Sultan, there is a distance of ten days. At the distance of one day from this place are the mountains of the Russians, who are Christians, with red hair and blue eyes, an ugly and perfidious people. They have silver mines: and from their country is the 'suwam, i.e. the pieces of silver bullion brought. With these they buy and sell, each piece weighing five ounces. After ten days' journey from this place we arrived at the city of 'Sūdāk, which is one of the cities of the desert of 'Kifjāk, and situated on the sea-shore. After this we arrived at a city known by the name of 'Bābā Saltük. Saltük, they say, was a diviner. This is the last district (in this direction) belonging to the Turks; between which, however, and the districts of Room, is a distance of eighteen days, eight of which are over an uninhabited desert without water: but as we entered it during the cold season, we did not want much water.

* Mr. Kosegarten has 'Alāl 'Ukal. Our copies here present a large addition.
† This is probably the Soudak of M. D'Herbelot.
CHAPTER XIII.

On the occasion of my preparing to enter this desert, I presented myself before the Queen, and paid my respects to her both in the morning and evening. She received me very graciously, and sent to me a good part of every present which then came to her. I then made known to her my want of some horses: and she ordered fifteen to be given to me. After this we arrived at the fortress of Mahtul, which is the first in the districts belonging to Room, but between which and Constantinople is a distance of two and twenty days.

Before this time, the news of her approach had reached her father, who sent out ladies and nurses to meet her at this fortress, with a large army. From this place to Constantinople they travel with horses and mules only, on account of the unevenness of the roads; she, therefore, left her carriages behind her. The Emir who attended her husband’s troops returned when we had arrived at this place, and she was now attended by her own followers only. At this place I also dismissed my carriages, and a number of my attendants and companions, recommending them (to the returning party), who received and treated them courteously.

The Queen had with her a mosque, which she set up at every stage, just as her husband used to do. In this she had daily prayers. She left it, however, at the fortress. After this the office of the Moazin ceased: wine was brought into the banquet and of this she drank. I was also told, that she ate swine’s flesh with them: nor did one who prayed remain with her; some, however, of her Turkish servants daily prayed with us. Thus were the tastes changed by entering into the territories of infidelity. The Queen, however, ordered the officer who had come out to meet her, to pay every attention and respect to me. When we had arrived within a day’s journey of the city, her younger brother came out to meet her, accompanied by about five thousand cavalry, all in armour. He met her on foot, on account of his being her junior. When she had kissed his head, he passed on with her. On the next day her second brother, who is the heir-apparent, met her, having with him ten thousand horse. Both parties in this case dismounted; and after they had met they remounted and went on. When at length she approached Constantinople, the greatest part of its inhabitants, men, women, and children, came out attired in their best clothes, either walking or riding, beating drums and shouting as they proceeded. The Sultan, also, with his queen, the mother of this lady, attended by the officers of state and nobles, came to meet her. When the Emperor drew near both the parties mixed, and such was the pressure that it was impossible for me to pass between them. I was therefore obliged, at the peril of my life, to see to the carrying of our lady and her companions. I was told, that when she met her parents she alighted and kissed the ground before them, as well as the hoofs of their horses.

We entered Constantinople about sun-set; they were then ringing their bells at such a rate, that the very horizon shook with the noise. When we came to the gate of the Emperor, the porters refused to admit us without a permission from the Emperor; some of her followers, therefore, went and told her our case, and she requested permission of her father, stating our circumstances to him. We were then allowed to enter, and were lodged in a house adjoining that of our lady, who sent our provisions morning and evening. The King also granted us a letter of safe conduct, permitting us to pass wherever we pleased about the city. On the fourth day after our arrival, I was introduced to the Sultan Tafur, son of George, king of Constantinople. His father George was still living, but had retired from the world, become a monk, and given up the kingdom to his son.* When I arrived at the fifth gate of the palace, which * The retired Emperor must have been Andronicus the elder, the present one Andronicus junior, his grandson. In Mr. Kosegarten's extract we have Nēkur, Nēkur, Nēkur, perhaps: but which, or whether either of these names, is the true one, I have not been able to determine. It is not improbable, that the name of Nīcephoros Gregorios has got in here by mistake. Nor have I been able to find in any of the historians when or where this shameful marriage was contracted. I am much tempted to believe that the Byzantine writers have been ashamed to mention it. Gibbon, indeed, mentions such a marriage as this brought about by the was guarded by soldiers, I was searched, lest I should carry any weapon with me; which is submitted to by every citizen, as well as stranger, who wishes to be introduced to the King. The same is observed by the Emperors of India. I was introduced, therefore, and did homage. The Emperor was sitting upon his throne with his Queen, and daughter, our mistress; her brothers were seated beneath the throne. I was kindly received, and asked, as to my circumstances and arrival; also about Jerusalem, the Temple of the Resurrection, the Cradle of Jesus, Bethlemanagement of John Catacuzenus: but, then, this is said to have been of his own daughter. Vol. v. p. 278, ed. 1826. We are told in Mr. Savage's abridgment of Knolls and Rycart's Turkish History, that Amurath the First married the Emperor of Constantinople's daughter, but this must be a totally different affair. The death of Andronicus the elder is placed by Gibbon in 1392. As Mr. Ulenbroek has given a very interesting note on this subject in his Description of I raCON. I may perhaps be excused in giving it in this place (p. 80, proleg.) "Hinc semel iterumque, affinitate etiam ablata, Imp. Græci Principes Mohammedanos sibi devincire studuerunt. Sic Imp. Andronicus Paleologus senior filiam suam obtulit Cassano Mogolum (vel uti Graeci agunt, Tocharorum) Persicorum Khano, A. 1304. Cf. Pachymeres Andronicī Hist. lib. v. c. 16. Fatemur interim dubitari posse, an Cazanus veris Moslemis sit annumerandus. Cf. de Guignes Hist. des Huns, tom. iv. p. 267, 270. Graeci certe ilium Christianorum autorem habuissent videntur. Cf. Pachym. lib. vi. c. 1. At de Islamismo successoris Cazani fratrisque, Gaiaetsiddini Mohammedis Khodabendeh, alias Kharbenda et corrupta a Pachymere χρεισσαται appellati, nulla certe dubitatione est. Huic tamen Maria Imperatoris soror A. 1308 desponsata fuit. Cf. Pachym. lib. vii. c. 33. Nec multo interjecto tempore nuperat etiam alia Maria filia notha Imp. Andronicī Togh-tagou Khano Mogolum Kapschakensium Khano, Guignesio teste, tom. i. p. 350. Hujus quoque successori filioloque Mohammedi Uzbekkhano, Moslemicis sacris deditissimo, uxorem fuisse filiam Andronicī Junioris colligas ex Kosegartenī V. C. Commentatione de Mohammedis Ibn Batuta Tingitani itinerario...Hæc igitur acciderunt inter A. 1333 et 1341...Denique hau ita multo post, decessorum exemplum imitatus Joannes Cantacuzenus, circa A. 1316, filiam suam Theodoram sive Māriam...Orkhano uxorem dedit, &c." Hence Mr. Ulenbroek thinks it probable, that Mohammed places of worship had been tolerated before and after this time at Constantinople. I will merely remark, that if so, it is extraordinary that neither El Harawi, who visited this city in the thirteenth century, nor Ibn Batuta, who visited it in the fourteenth, has made any mention of the fact.

النماية

This church, according to Edrisi, is large, and in his days was considered as a place of pilgrimage. His words are الكنيسة العظمى المعروفة بكنيسة القيامة ويتبناها المسلمون تمامًا وهي الكنيسة الباهوج إليها من جميع بلاد الروم, &c. The great church, known by "the Church of the Resurrection," but which the Mohammedans call Kamama. This is the church to which pilgrimages are performed from all the parts of Room, &c. Edit. Rosenmüller, Lipsia, 1828.

† This is, according to El Harawi, in a cave under the temple of El Aksa; his words are وحتت أنيصي... مغارة يقال بها مهد عيسى بن مريم عليه السلام.

hem, and the city of Abraham (or 'Hebron), then of Damascus, Egypt, Irák, and the country of Room; to all of which I gave suitable replies. A Jew was our interpreter. The King was much surprised at my tale; and said to his sons: Let this man be treated honourably, and give him a letter of safe conduct. He then put a dress of honour on me, and ordered a saddled horse to be given me, with one of his own umbrellas, which with them is a mark of protection. I then requested that he would appoint some one to ride about with me daily into the different quarters of the city, that I might see them. He made the appointment accordingly, and I rode about with the officer for some days, witnessing the wonders of the place. 'Its largest church is that of 'Saint Sophia.' I saw its outside only. Its interior I could not, because, just within the door there was a cross which every one who entered worshipped.'

"איה סופיה"

"איה סופיה" מָדִיבַּת הַקְּלִיל, or Hebron.

* El Harawi, who visited Constantinople in the 18th century, thus speaks of it, and of this church. And the devastation caused by the war, it is clear that the church was destroyed.

In this place are statues of brass and marble, pillars and wonderful talismans, as well as the minarets already mentioned, and other monuments (of greatness) to which no equal can be found in the habitable world. Here is also Ayia Sophia (Αγία Σοφία) which is the greatest church they have. I was told by Yâkût Ibn Abd Allah, the merchant of Mosul, that he had entered it, and that it was just as I had described it. In it are 360 doors, and they say, that one of the angels resides in it. Round about his place they have made fences of gold; and the story about him is very strange, which we shall relate in its place, when I shall speak of the arrangement of this church, its size, height, its doors and their height, its length, breadth, and the pillars that are in it: also of the wonders of the city, its order, the sort of fish found in it, the gate of gold, the towers of marble, the brazed elephants, and all its monuments and wonders: and all the kindness shown me by the king Emanuel (which I shall do), in the book of wonders ( كتاب المجد) D.V. as already mentioned. This city, which is greater than its fame, may God of his bounty and grace make the capital of Islamism!
said, that this church is one of the foundations of 'Asaf, the son of Barachias, and nephew of Solomon. The churches, monasteries, and other places of worship within the city, are almost innumerable.

When it appeared to the Turks, who had accompanied our mistress, that she still professed the religion of her father, and wished to remain with him, they requested permission to return to their own country, which she granted. She also gave them rich presents, and appointed persons to accompany them to their homes. She also requested me, that she might commend these attendants to me, giving me, at the same time, 300 dinars, with 2,000 dirhems in money; likewise dresses both of woollen and cotton cloth, as well as horses, on the part of her father. I returned, therefore, after a stay in Constantinople of one month and six days, to the place where I had left my companions, carriages, and other goods: and, from this place we travelled upon these carriages, until we arrived at Astrahan, where I had formerly left the Sultan Mohammed Uzbek Khân. But here I found that he had gone with his court to 'El Sarāi, to which I also proceeded. When I was admitted to his presence, he asked me of our journey, of Constantinople and its king, of all which I told him. He then reimbursed my travelling expenses, as is his usual custom. This city of 'El Sarāi is very handsome and exceedingly large. Of its learned men is the Imām, the learned 'Noōmān Oddin, 'El Khāvārezmi. I met him in this place. He is a man of the most liberal disposition, carries himself majestically with the king, but humbly with the poor, and with his pupils. The sultan visits him every Friday, sits before him, and shews him every kindness; while he behaves in the most repulsive manner.

I then travelled on to 'Khāvārezm, between which and this place is a journey of forty days, through a desert in which there is but little water and grass. There are carriages in it, which are drawn by camels. After ten days I arrived at the city of 'Sārāi Jūk, which is situated upon the banks of a large and full river, which they call the 'Ulū sū or great water. Over this is a bridge joining its nearest parts, like the bridge of Bagdad. From this place I travelled for three days with all the haste possible, and arrived at Khavārezm. This is the largest city the Turks have, and is very much crowded, on account of the multitude of its inhabitants. It is subject to the sultan Uzbek Khān, and is governed on his part by a great Emīr, who resides within it. I have never seen better bred, or more liberal, people than the inhabitants of Khavārezm, or those who are more friendly to strangers. They have a very commendable practice with regard to their worship, which is this: When any one absents himself from his place in the mosque, he is beaten by the priest in the presence of the congregation; and, moreover, fined in five dinars, which go towards repairing the mosque. In every mosque, therefore, a whip is hung up for this purpose.

Without this city is the river `Gihon, one of the four rivers which flow from Paradise. This river, like the Athal, freezes over in the cold season and remains frozen for five months, during which time people travel over it. Without this city also, is the grave of the Sheikh Ḫānoddin the Great, one of the great saints, over which there is a cell. Here also is the grave of the very learned Ḫār Allah El Zamakhshari.* Zamakhshar is a village at the distance of four days from Khavārezm. The prevailing sect at Khavārezm, is that of the Ḫ Schismatics.† This, however, they keep secret, because the Sultan Uzbek is a Soonnee.

They have in Khavārezm a melon to which none, except that of Ḫ Bokhāra, can be compared: the nearest to it is that of Isphahān. The peel of this melon is green, the interior red. It is perfectly sweet and rather hard. Its most remarkable property is, that it may be cut in oblong pieces and dried, and then put into a case, like a fig, and carried to India or China. Among dried fruits there is none superior to this. It is occasionally used as a present to their kings.

* See D’Herbelot, under Zamackschar and Zamakschar.
† On the origin and peculiarities of this sect, see Pococke’s Specimen Hist. Arab. pp. 20, 214, ed. 1806. M. de Sacy’s Chrest. Arab. tom. i. p. 351. Their principal dogma is a denial of predestination, and a belief that man can do either good or evil just as he pleases. They are also termed Kadarites (قداری) because they deny predestination.
From Khavārezm I set out for Bokhāra, and, after a journey of eighteen days through a sandy and uninhabited desert, arrived at the city of El Kāt which is but small, then at Wabkana: then, after one stage, we came to Bokhāra, which is the principal city of the country beyond the Gihon. After it had been ravaged by the Tartars, it almost entirely disappeared: I found no one in it who knew any thing of science.

It is said that Jengiz Khān, who came with the Tartars into the countries of Islamism and destroyed them, was in his outset a blacksmith in the country of Khotā. He was a liberal-minded, powerful, and corruptulent

* This is, perhaps, the Kath of the Marāṣid El Ithā, which it thus describes: Kath is a large city of Khavarezm (or Kharezm), on the eastern parts of the Jaihūn (or Oxus), nor is there any other eastward of it in the districts of Khavarezm.

† Our copies constantly read not with Mr. Kosegarten's. Whatever might have been the intention of the copyist in writing his, I think there can be no doubt, that our traveller did not intentionally write "porcorum regem," as he supposes, p. 25.

The accounts given of the origin of this extraordinary man by Abulfedâ (Annales Musulmimi, vol. iv. p. 278-9) and others, differ in many respects from this. It is not improbable, however, that if we were in possession of all the particulars, they could be reconciled much easier than accounts of much later date, and of events which have taken place much nearer home. See the Rauzut El Safâ, vol. v.; the History of Ghengiz Khān, by Petis La Croix; and D'Herbelot, under Genghizhan; also Marco Polo's account, (Travels by Mr. Marsden, chap. xlv. p. 194, with the notes). The accounts given by these travellers agree much better with one another, than either of them does with the historians.

‡ In the very valuable notes of Mr. Marsden, on the Travels of Marco Polo, he gives it as his opinion, that Khotai, Khotai, or Kotsi, is the same with Chinese Tartary, and appeals to the Oriental geographers as being of this opinion. I can only say from all I have seen of them, that they speak very vaguely on the situation of these places. Abulfedâ, for example, who is no mean geographer, says (Ann. Mus. vol. iv. p. 228) "he passed the river (Gihon) and went into Khotai: and there was beyond Khotai on the borders of Chinese Tartary," &c. which plainly marks the places as distinct. Again, in our text, we have Khotai and China mentioned as distinct places. Edrisi, too, speaks of Chinese Tartary, and the as distinct places, meaning the towns, &c. which are evidently to be found in Khotai.
TARTARY.

person. His practice was, to assemble and feast the people; who in consequence joined him in considerable numbers, and made him their leader. He then conquered the district in which he lived; and, with this accession of strength and followers, he next subdued the whole country of "Khotâ, then China: after this the countries of " Khashak, " Kâshgar, and " Mâlik.† At this time Jalâl Oddîn Sanjar, son of Khvârezm Shâh, was king of Khvârezm, " Khorâsân, and " Mâwarâ El Nahr, a powerful and splendid prince. Jengiz Khân, on account of an affair which had happened among the merchants, and in which some property had been taken, invaded his territories.† This is well known. When, however, Jengiz Khân had entered upon the frontiers of Jalâl Oddîn's countries, he was met by the king's army, which, after some fighting, was put to the route. After this Jalâl Oddîn himself met him, and some such battles took place, as have never been witnessed among the Mohammadans.

In the event, however, Jengiz Khân got possession of Mâwarâ El Nahr, and destroyed Bokhâra, Samarkand, and " El Târmidh; killed the inhabitants, taking prisoners the youth only, and leaving the country quite desolate. He then passed over the Gihon, and took possession of all " Khorâsân and " Irâk, destroying the cities and slaughtering the inhabitants. He then perished, having appointed his son Hûlûkî to succeed him. Hûlûkî (soon after) entered Bagdad, destroyed it, and put to death the Calif El Mostaa-

† See an account of this affair in the Histoire des Mongols, tom. i. liv. i. chap. v. p. 148-9, &c. Paris, 1894.
sem of the house of Abbâs, and reduced the inhabitants.* He then proceeded with his followers to Syria, until divine Providence put an end to his career: for there he was defeated by the army of Egypt, and made prisoner. Thus was their progress in the Mohammedan countries put an end to.

The epitomator Ibn Jazzi El Kelbî states, that he has been told by the Sheikh 'Ibn El Háji, who had heard it from 'Abd Allah Ibn Roshaíd, who had met Nûr Oddin Ibn El Zajâj one of the learned men of Irâk, with his brother's son in Mecca, and who told him as they were conversing together, that in the war with the Tartars in Irâk not fewer than four and twenty thousand learned men perished; and that himself, and that man, pointing to his brother's son, were the only learned men who had escaped.

I next proceeded from Bokhâra for the camp of the Sultan † Alâ Oddin Tarmashirîn,† and, in my way, passed by Nakhshab, the place to which the patronymic of the Sheikh ‡ Abu Turâb El Nakhshab‡ is referred.

* A'bî 'Allâm. ‡ Nûr oddin bin 'Abdul-Wahab. † Nûr oddin bin 'Abdul-Wahab. ‡ Nûr oddin bin 'Abdul-Wahab.

* For particulars respecting the butchery here alluded to, see the Annales Moslemici, vol. iv. p. 550–1, &c.
† This is, probably, the Tîrîm Sîrî Kân (ترمسير خان) of Dow and Ferihta, who invaded Hindustan A. H. 727, with a numerous army, but retired without making a conquest of it, after receiving great wealth from Mohammed Shâh. Dow, vol. i. p. 314. See also the extract from De Guignes a little lower down. Some account of the exploits of this prince in the neighbourhood of Ghizna, is also to be found in the first volume of the Mêtîlûl-mûdîn by Abû al-azzâq as-Surâdî under the date of 732 of the Hegira, A.D. 1331. This name is written in the Târikhi Badayûnî.
‡ A short account of this recuse is given in the Nûfús of which the following is an extract: Abû Turâb Shâhshih Tâdis Allah Ta'âlî ba ra'ye a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a'tâm' a
From this place I proceeded to the camp of the Sultan, the king of Māwarā El Nahr. This is a powerful prince, who has at his command a large army, and is remarkable for the justice of his laws. The territories of this king occupy a middle station among those of the four great kings of the world, who are, the king of China, that of India, that of Irāk, that of the Turks Mohammed Uzbek Khān: all of whom send presents to him, give him the place of honour, and very highly respect him. He succeeded to the kingdom after his brother Jagatai, who was an infidel, and had succeeded to his elder brother Ṣ Kobak, who was also an infidel: he was, nevertheless, just, and much attached to the Mohammedans, to whom he paid great respect.

It is said that this king Kobak was one day talking with the doctor and preacher Ḍ Badr Oddin El Maidānī, when he said to him: you say that God has left nothing unmentioned in his book. The preacher replied, it is even so. Shew me, then, said he, where my name is to be found. The reply was, In the passage "In which form he pleased hath he fashioned thee." This astonished him, and he said, Ṣ Bakhshī, that is, well done! I spent some days in the camp of Tarmashirīn. Upon a certain day, however, I went to the mosque, which was in the camp (the camp they call the Urdū) for I had heard that the Sultan was to be in the mosque. When the service was ended, I approached in order to pay my respects to him, as he had heard of my arrival. He was pleased with me, and treated me very respectfully. After this he sent for me. I went to

---

Abu Turāb Nakshābī, may God sanctify his mystery, was (a saint) of the first class; his name was Aṣkār Ibn Ḥasan: they also say, that Aṣkār Ibn Mohammed Ibn Ḥasan was one of the Sheikhs of Khorāsān, famous for his knowledge of decisions, piety, and faith. He was associated with Abu Ḥātim Attār of Basra, and Ḥātim Asamm. He was also the preceptor of Abu Abd Allah Jallād, and of Abu Obeid Allah Basari. This Abu Turāb went with three hundred Rukwah Dāra (i.e. I suppose, persons clothed in rags as religious). Two of these remained with him, namely, Abu Abd Allah Jallād, and Abu Obeid Basari, all the rest returned. It is one of his sayings: That is an enlightened man, whom nothing perplexes, and with whom every thing is clear. He was at his prayers in the desert, when he was scorched by the samoom, and remained for a whole year standing on his feet; this happened in the year 245, the year in which Dhu El Nūn departed this life.

* This passage occurs a few lines from the beginning of the 82d chapter of the Koran.
TARTARY.

him, and found him in his tent, and there paid my respects to him. He then asked me of Mecca, Medina, Jerusalem, Damascus, and Egypt; as also of El Malik El Nâsir, the kings of Irâk, and Persia. To all of which I gave suitable answers, and received marks of distinction. One of the odd things that happened respecting him, was, that once when the hour of prayer had arrived, and the people were assembled in the mosque, the Sultan delayed. One of his young men coming in, said to the priest Hâsâm Oddin El Yâghi, the Sultan wishes you to wait a little. Upon this the priest got up and said: I ask, are prayers had here for the sake of God, or of Tarmashirin? He then ordered the Moazin to proclaim the prayers. So the Sultan came in after two prostrations had been performed, and went through his prayers at the extremity of the part in which the people stand, and which is near the door of the mosque where they usually leave their mules, and there went through what he had missed. He then came and seized the hand of the priest, who laughed heartily at him. He then sat down in the oratory, the priest by his side, and I by the side of the priest. He then addressed me. When, said he, you go back to your own country say, that a doctor of the Persians sat thus with the Sultan of the Turks (al. that a poor man of the poor of the Persians thus did with the Sultan of the Turks). This priest it was who succeeded in reducing the King to the observance of all the positive and negative commands. The Sultan very much respected, loved, and obeyed him. But the Sheikh accepted of no gifts from the King; nor did he eat any thing but what he acquired by the labour of his own hands. This King, when I wished to travel on, provided me with 700 dinars for my journey. We broke up our intercourse, therefore, and I set out accordingly.

This Tarmashirin (it may be remarked) had broken some of the statutes of his grandfather Jengiz Khân, who had published a book entitled ʻEl Yasāk* the prohibition, which enacted, that whosoever should oppose

* Makrisi mentions this work as containing the regulations of Jengiz Khân, and calls it یاسا, and یاس. From this word, according to him, originated the word سیاست, now in use among the Arabs to signify government, or punishment. See the Chrestomathie Arabe of M. de Sacy, tom. ii. pp. 68-97 and 160, edit. 2, where we have a short account any one of these statutes, should be put out of office. Now, one of the statutes was this, that the descendants of Jengiz, the governors of the several districts, the wives of the nobles, and the general officers of the army, should assemble upon a certain day in the year which they call "El Tawa, i. e. the feast; and, that should the Emperor have altered any one of these statutes, the nobles should stand up and say, Thou hast done so and so upon such and such a day, and hast made an alteration in the statutes of El Yasāk (i. e. that which is not to be changed), and, therefore, thy deposition is a necessary consequence. They are then to take him by the hand, and remove him from the throne, and to place in it another of the descendants of Jengiz Khān. And, should any one of the nobles have committed any crime, he is to be duly adjudged on this occasion.

Now, Tarmashirīn had entirely abolished the observance of this day, which gave very great offence. Some time, therefore, after we had left the country, the Tartars, together with their nobles, assembled and deposed him, appointing for a successor one of his relations: and to such an extent was the matter pressed, that Tarmashirīn took to flight and was put to death.*

I then proceeded to Samarkand, which is a very large and beautiful city. Without it is the tomb of "Kotham, son of Abbās, who was martyred on the day the city was taken. After this I arrived at the city of *Nasaf,† of these regulations. See also tom. v. des Notices et Extraits des Manuscrits de la Bibliothèque du Roi, pp. 592, &c. The author of the Histoire des Mongols, Paris, 1824, says, tom. i. p. 296, "Ses statuts ne sont point parvenus jusqu'à nous; on n'en trouve que quelques extraits dans les auteurs de cette époque," &c.

* De Guignes (Hist. gen. des Huns, tom. iv. p. 311) gives us, under the date 1342, the following notice of this prince: "Après sa mort (Dgelaleddin) l'empire fut donné à Beghi, qui eut pour successeur Bougha-timour, ensuite à Doizi-khan fils de Barak. Après eux regnèrent successivement Kendigik, &c. et Daouatmou-khan, &c. Celui-ci eut pour successeur son frère Turmeschirin, qui se fit Musulman, et qui le premier ordonna à tous ses sujets d'embrasser cette religion, dont il ne se trouvait plus de traces parmi les Mogols, depuis que Berrak-khan en avait fait autrefois profession. Ce prince fut détrôné par son frère Butun-khan qui lui succeda, et qui éprouva un pareil sort de la part de son frère Zenkechi.”

† This place, according to the Mariasid El Iliān, is مدينة كبيرة باليوم والخطاب بين جزيرة Wusūnūn لِهَا فهِنْدَر (فندور) وربض وأبرăr اربعة وهي في مستوى لأيبلم مها على نزيفين فيهما.
to which the patronymic of Abu Jaafar Omar El Nasafi is referred. I then went on to the city of 'Tirmidih, to which is referred the patronymic of Abu Îsa Mohammed El Tirmidhi, author of the 'Jâmia El Kebir.' This is a large and beautiful city, abounding with trees and water. We then passed over the Gihon into Khorasân; and, after a journey of a day and half over a sandy desert in which there was no house, we arrived at the city of 'Balkh,† which now lies in ruins. It has not been rebuilt since its destruction by the cursed Jengiz Khân. The situation of its buildings is not very discernible, although its extent may be traced. It is now in ruins, and without society.

Its mosque was one of the largest and handsomest in the world. Its pillars were incomparable: three of which were destroyed by Jengiz Khân, because it had been told him, that the wealth of the mosque lay concealed ٢iel كرلا قري كبيرة وليس بها نهر جار سوى نهر يجري في وسط المدينة وينقطع في بعض السنة وزروهم وبساتينهم على الياء a city great in inhabitants and independent villages, and situated between the Jaibân (Oxus river) and Samarcand. It has a citadel, suburbs, and four gates, and it is in a plain. The hills are about two farsangs from it, and adjoining Kashar. It has many villages but no river except one which runs through the middle of the city. It falls however in some seasons of the year. Their tillage and gardens are near wells.

* Among the several works bearing this title in Haji Khalifa, I find none ascribed to this author. He notices it, however, under the title جامع الصميم. There appears also to be some notice of him in the كتابات الإنس by Jâmi, under the name Abu Bekr El Warak El Tirmidhi, which is as follows. أبو بكر الوراق الترمذي قدس الله تعالى سره أز طبقه ثانه اسمه نام رحمة بن عمر أبوجعفر الترمذي اسمه بابال'a ترمذ بوذ وقير وي آتجت اسمه أما لم يباع بوذن خال عبد عيسى ترمذي اسمه ساحب مسند Abu Bekr El Warak El Tirmidhi was a (saint) of the second rank. His name was Mohammed Ibn Omar El Hakim El Tirmidhi. He was originally of Tirmidh (Termed of our maps), and his grave is now there, but was in Balkh. He was the paternal uncle of Abu Isa of Tirmidh, author of the Musaad (مسند or book of cases); which is probably the work styled جامع الكبير by Ibn Batuta. A copy of this work is to be found at Oxford. See Uri's Catalogue, No. clxxxvii; D'Herbelot, art. Giame al. Kebir; and Ann. Muslem. tom. ii. p. 275.

† A well known city in Khorasân, famous in history and for its wealth: between this place and Tirmidh is a distance of twelve farsangs. مدينة مشهورة بخاراسان مي اصلها واشهرها ذكروا واكثرها خبرا وبين ترمذ التي عشر فرسحا - مرادت الأطار.
under them, provided as a fund for its repairs. When, however, he had destroyed them, nothing of the kind was to be found; the rest, therefore, he left as they were.

The story about this treasure arose from the following circumstance. It is said, that one of the Califs of the house of Abbâs was very much enraged at the inhabitants of Balkh, on account of some accident which had happened, and, on this account, sent a person to collect a heavy fine from them. Upon this occasion, the women and children of the city besought themselves to the wife of their then governor, who, out of her own money, built this mosque; and to her they made a grievous complaint. She accordingly sent to the officer, who had been commissioned to collect the fine, a robe very richly embroidered and adorned with jewels, much greater in value than the amount of the fine imposed. This, she requested might be sent to the Calif as a present from herself, to be accepted instead of the fine. The officer accordingly took the robe, and sent it to the Calif; who, when he saw it, was surprised at her liberality, and said: This woman must not be allowed to exceed myself in generosity. He then sent back the robe, and remitted the fine. When the robe was returned to her, she asked, whether a look of the Calif had fallen upon it; and being told that it had, she replied: No robe shall ever come upon me, upon which the look of any man, except my own husband, has fallen. She then ordered it to be cut up and sold; and with the price of it she built the mosque, with the cell and structure in the front of it. Still, from the price of the robe there remained a third, which she commanded to be buried under one of its pillars, in order to meet any future expenses which might be necessary for its repairs. Upon Jengiz Khân's hearing this story, he ordered these pillars to be destroyed; but, as already remarked, he found nothing.

In the front of the city is, as it is reported, the tomb of 'Akâba Ibn Mohsin El Sahâbî; who, according to what is related in the 'Athar (a book so called), entered paradise without rendering up an account (of his deeds).

After this I travelled from Balkh for seven days, on the mountains of "Kühistan, which consist of villages closely built. In these there are many cells of religious, and others who have retired from the world. I next came to the city of 'Herāt, which is the largest inhabited city in Khorāsān. Of the large cities of this district there are four: two of these are now inhabited, namely, Herāt and *Nisābūr; and two in ruins, namely Bālkh and *Meraw. The inhabitants of Herāt are religious, sincere, and chaste, and are of the sect of *Hānīfī. The King of Herāt was at this time the Sultan, the great Hosain son of the Sultan Giāth Oddin El Gauri, a man of tried valour. From Herāt I went to *Jām,† which is a moderate sized city, abounding with water and plantations. From this place I went to *Tūs, one of the largest cities of Khorāsān. In this the Imām *Abu Hāmed El Ghazālī‡ was born, and in it we still find his tomb. From this place I went to the Meshed of *El Riza, i.e. of *Ali Ibn

---

* The dynasty, however, as such, ceased long before this time, according to Abulfeda, vol. iv. p. 288-9. For the origin of it see Dow, vol. i. p. 143. This, however, is the “Malak Asseddin-boussain”, fils de Gaflatheddin” of De Guignes, who reigned in Herāt from about 1331 to 1370. Hist. gen. des Huns, tom. i. p. 416; also tom. iv. p. 313, &c.; and D’Herbelot, under Schamseddin. In the first volume of the Murastal Saadain, we have the following account of this prince and his dependents: درسلا راته باداشاهي ابر سعيد جهارسال برد كه ملك: مز الدين حسین حکومت هرات سیکرد بعد از راته سلطان حکام عراق و خراسان نکدیراکرستین نهادند و در هر کونه متعلقی سر بر آورد و هر جانب مجدد خیال درسر آورد. اشراف اطراف واپسین بلدان بانی راجه عدل وأحسان روز بدار اهلان هرات آرورد و در ظلم مرحمت ملک معز الدين حسین مرنه احوال شندند حضرت معمر سیرت حمیدس و خدخت بهنود همد را در نیافه عاطف و نفل رفت قررداده از فیض کروست و محبوب محبوب و مبارک کشند, &c. “In the year of the death of Abu Said, it was the fourth in which the king Moiz Oddin Husain had reigned in Herāt. After the death of the Sultan (i.e. Abu Said), the Governors of Irāk and Khorāsān refused submission to each other; and hence a pretend set up his head in every corner, as did every ultra become vain in every part, and hence the nobles and gentry of every district betook themselves to Herāt, a place where justice, kindness, and safety, was to be found; and under the shadow of the king Moiz Oddin Husain they were quiet. This personage was of laudable and prepossessing manners, and protected and amply provided for all who sought refuge with him.” This confmers Ibn Batūta’s account, see p. 48.

† The birth-place of the celebrated Jāmī, author of various Persia and Arabic works.

Mūsa El Kāzīm son of Jaafar Sādik. It is a large and well peopled city, abounding with fruits. Over the Meshhed is a large dome, adorned with a covering of silk, and golden candlesticks. Under the dome, and opposite to the tomb of El Riza, is the grave of the Calīf Hārūn El Rashid. Over this they constantly place candlesticks with lights. But when the followers of Ali enter, as pilgrims, they kick the grave of El Rashid, but pour out their benedictions over that of El Riza. From this place I went to the city of 1 Sarakhas, then to 1Zāva, the town of the Sheikh 1Kotb Oddin Haidar, from whom the Fakeers of the sect called the Haidaria, take their name. These men place an iron ring on their hands and their necks; and, what is still more strange, on their virilia, in order to prevent intercourse with women.

From this place I went to 1Nisābūr, one of the four principal cities of Khorāsān. It is also called the Little Damascus, on account of the abundance of its fruits. The city is handsome, and is intersected by four rivers. I here met the Sheikh 1Kotb Oddin El Nisābūrī, a learned and accomplished preacher, and he took me to his house. It happened that I had

* He died in Tūs, during an expedition he had undertaken into those parts. His general character is, that he was any thing but religious, but nevertheless a bigotted Sooneen.

† Written according to the mắcصيد الأطلال Sarakhas and Sarkhas (مرصاد الأطلال). It is, it is added, an ancient and large city in Khorāsān, in the mid-way between Nisābūr and Meraw. It is much subject to drought, having only one river, which is dry a great part of the year. The people generally drink water from wells.

‡ I have not been able to find any other particular account, either of this Sheikh or of his sect. In M. de Sacy's Chrestomathie Arabe, we have an account of a Sheikh Haider, who appears to have been the leader of a sect in Khorāsān, and who discovered the use of the intoxicating herb called the khashāsha; but it may be doubted whether this is the person meant by Ibn Batūta, because we have a different name given here from that given by him. See Chrest. Arabe, tom. i. p. 227; i. e. in Ibn Batūta we have قطب الدين حيدر, but in M. de Sacy النبی حيدر. If the title in the traveller is not a mere epithet. M. de Sacy says in his notes (p. 244) that he has not been able to find any particulars respecting the life of this sheik.
purchased a slave. The Sheikh said to me: Sell him, for he will not suit you; and I sold him accordingly. I was told, after a few days, that this slave had killed some Turkish children, and had been executed in consequence. This was one of the Sheikh's great miracles.

From this place I proceeded to Bastām, the town to which the patronymic of Abu Yeزيد El Bastāmi is referred. His grave is also here, under the same dome with that of one of the sons of Jaafar Sadik. I next proceeded to Kundus and Baghān, which are villages with cultivated lands adjoining each other. In each of these is a cell for the sainted and recluse. The land is green and flourishing, and its grass never withers. In these places I remained for some time for the purpose of pasturing and refreshing my beasts.¹

After this I proceeded to the city of Barwan,† in the road to which is a high mountain, covered with snow and exceedingly cold; they call it the Hindū Kush,‡ i.e. Hindoo-slayer, because most of the slaves brought thi-

---

* Some account will be found of this devotee in Pococke's Specimen Hist. Arab. p. 372, edit. 1806, and also in the Ghwarat Anas of Jami, of which the following is an extract:

Abu Yeزيد پیامی قدس الله تعالى روحه از طیفه اول است نام وی طیفه (طیفه) خیسی بن سروشاست حد اکثر بن من علیا مسلمان. شده از ارتدوکس اندازه وی خصوصاً وی از خاطرات وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی از نظر وی وی اз

Abu Yeزيد Bastāmi, may God sanctify his spirit, was (a saint) of the first class. His name was Taifsūr (Pococke Taifsūr) Ibn Isa Ibn Sarushān. His grandfather was a Guebre, but became a Musulmān. He was contemporary with Ahmed Ibn Khizrāwa, Abu Hafiz, and Yahya Mādīh; and he saw Shatiki Balkhi. His death happened in the year 261. They also say in the year 254, but the first is the most correct. His preceptor was Kardawī. He mentioned it as his will, that his grave should be made deeper than that of his master; this was done out of respect to him. He was a man of opinion, and the leader of a sect, which however never became general. Notices of the other persons here mentioned occur within a page or two in the same work.

† Perhaps the Budnoon of Dow (vol. i. p. 157) and the بیان وی of Ferishta.

‡ This Mr. Burckhardt gives in his abstract of these Travels in Nubia, p. 555, Hindwaksh, where he has not only disregarded the vowels given in the MSS., but has shown that he must have been an entire stranger to the Persian language, as accurately given and translated here by our traveller.
ther from India die on account of the intenseness of the cold. 1 After this we passed another mountain, which is called 2 Bāšāī. In this mountain there is a cell inhabited by an old man, whom they call 3 Aṭā Evliā, that is, the Father of the Saints. It is said that he is three hundred and fifty years old. When I saw him he appeared to be about fifty years old. The people of these parts, however, very much love and revere him. I looked at his body: it was moist, and I never saw one more soft. He told me, that every hundredth year he had a new growth of hair and teeth, independently of the first, and that he was the Raja "Aba Rahim Ratan of India, who had been buried at 4 Multān,* in the province of Sindia. I asked him of several things; but very much doubted as to what he was, and do so still.

I next arrived at the city of Barwan. In this place I met the Turkish Emir 5 Barantay, the largest and fattest man I had ever seen. He treated me very respectfully, and gave me some provisions. I then went on to the village of 6 El Jarkh, and thence to 7 Ghizna, the city of the warrior of the faith, and against India, the victorious Mahmūd, son of 8 Subūktagīn.† His grave is here. The place is exceedingly cold: it is ten (al. three) stages distant from 9 Kandahār. It was once a large city; but is now mostly in ruins. I then went on to 10 Kābul, which was once a large city; but is now, for the most part, in ruins. It is inhabited by a people from Persia whom they call the 11 Afghāns.‡ Their mountains are difficult of access,

---

[Notes and footnotes are provided in the text, including references to Mr. Kosegarten, p. 27; an abridgment of Ferishta's reign of Mahmood, found in Dow's Hindostan, vol. i. p. 52, &c.; the descendants, according to their own statements, from the house of Israel, and of the family of Saul the first Israelitish king. Ibn Shah Aīlam of the tribe of Kωθ Khail, author of the Kholāsat El Anāb, himself an Afghān, and a most sedulous enquirer, as he tells us, into their history, gravely affirms, that nothing can be more certain than that this is their origin. He then goes on to say, that they originally resided on Solomon's mount in Syria; but upon some emergency migrated to Candahār, whence many of them made their way into Hindustan, and were of considerable use in assisting Mahmūd of Ghizna, to make his first conquest in that country. He also tells us, that his ancestors, hearing in Candahār of the teaching of Mohammed, sent a deputation to him into Arabia, to inquire whether he was or not, the last] having narrow passes. These are a powerful and violent people; and the greater part of them highway robbers. Their largest mountain is called the mountain of Solomon. It is said that when Solomon had ascended this mountain, and was approaching India from it, and saw that it was an oppressive country, he returned refusing to enter it. The mountain was therefore called after his name: upon this the king of the Afghāns resides.

We next left Kābul by the way of 'Kirmāsh which is a narrow pass situated between two mountains, in which the Afghāns commit their robberies. We, thank God, escaped by plying them with arrows upon the heights, throughout the whole of the way. The next place we arrived at was "Shish Naghār, which is situated at the extremity of the Turkish dominions. From this place we entered the great desert, which is fifteen days in extent. In this no one can travel except in one season out of the four, on account of the Samoom, by which putrefaction takes place, and the body as soon as dead falls to pieces in its several members. We got to the 'Panj Ab, (i.e. the five waters,) in safety. This is the junction of five different rivers, and which waters all the agriculture of the district. We were comfortable enough when we got on the river, which happened in the beginning of the month Moharram, A.H. 734, (A.D. 1332). From this place the informers wrote of our arrival to the court of the Emperor of India. It is a custom with them, that every one who enters India with a wish to see the Emperor, must be described in writing from this place, stating the particu-

Prophet mentioned in the law and the gospels; and that, upon being assured of this, the whole nation at once received the faith. If there were the least possible approximation to truth in the story of their descent, it is reasonable to suppose, that their language would either be pure Hebrew, or a dialect very nearly approaching it: but the truth is, as far as I can learn, that nothing like this is the fact: but quite the contrary. This boasted descent is, therefore, a fable; as very probably their early attachment to the faith of Mohammed is. Some, indeed, have been credulous enough to believe this story of descent; and thence to imagine, that in them they had discovered the ten tribes of the house of Israel; which, however, is more than the Afghāns themselves imagine. That part of all the twelve tribes of Israel returned from the captivity, except such has had become real heathens, the New Testament will not allow us for a moment to doubt. (See Acts xxvi. 7. James i. 1.) I do not, therefore, see the least probability of finding them either in Candahār or elsewhere. Some part of the modern history of the Afghāns may probably be true.
lars of his person and the objects he has in view, which is sent off by a courier. For no one is allowed to appear at court, unless the Emperor has been previously acquainted with all the circumstances of his case.

CHAPTER XIV.

The river (just mentioned) is the Sinde: it is the greatest river in the world, and overflows during the hot weather just as the Nile does; and at this time they sow the lands. Here also commence the territories of the Emperor of Sindia and India, who was at this time Mohammed Shāh. From this place also is the description of persons arriving sent in writing to the Emīr of Sindia to Mulūn. Their Emīr, at this time, was one of the Mamlūks of the Sultan ʿMohammed Sar Tīz Shāh, i.e. sharp-head, by name; who reviews the armies of the Emperor. I next proceeded to the city of Janāī,* in which is a people called ʿEl Sāmira.† They never eat

* I do not find any place in the geographers corresponding sufficiently near to this in name and situation to determine where it is.

† The name of a sect of Hindoos, of which we find occasional mention in the Dahistān. They are perhaps called Sāmira, as being a sort of legalists, samārāt (سمارت) according to the Dahistān, signifying law. We are told by the author of that work, that he saw one of them, and him he describes very nearly in the words of Ibn Batūta: شرعت بنامه ناگار سری صعید میرم پرمی را در سامیرا گرفته و گذار مسلمانان خود را نپذیرفته و با بیکانه کینان صعبت نداشت. و میگفتند بکی از ایامی مسلمانان هم لک روبه بود داد و نیروی نفرمود. Of this sect, the writer saw Sri Manī Rāma the Brahman in the capital of Lahore, who would take no eatable from a Mohammedan, nor would associate with any of another persuasion. They said too, that one of the Musulmān Emīrs offered him three lacks of rupees, which, however, he would not accept of.
with strangers, nor are seen eating by them: nor do they contract affinities, or suffer any one to contract affinities with them. It was here I met the Sheikh El Sulih El Aabid the religious Bahaa Oddin El Korashi (see p. 7), one of the three, of whom the Sheikh El Wali Borhan Oddin El Ahraj said in Alexandria, that I should meet them in my travels: and I certainly did meet them. May God be praised.

I then proceeded to the city of Sivastan, which is large. Without it is a desert, and in this there is no tree except the Egyptian thorn, nor do they sow anything on the banks of its river except the melon. They generally live upon a sort of millet, peas, fish, and milk of the buffalo: for the buffalo is here, in great abundance. The place is exceedingly hot: from Multan, the capital of Sindia, it is at a distance of ten days; but from Multan to Dehli, the residence of the Emperor of Hindustan, is a distance of fifty; which, however, will be traversed by the courier with his despatches in five.

There are in Hindustan two kinds of couriers; horse and foot: these they generally term El Wolak.* The horse courier, which is part of the Sultan’s cavalry, is stationed at the distance of every four miles. As to the foot couriers, there will be one at the distance of every mile, occupying three (consecutive) stations, which they term El Daviah, and making (in the

* i.e. Quick, hastening, &c. from the Arabic root لولع properavit, &c. The Eastern couriers are generally some part of the King’s forces, and when the despatches are important are officers of distinction, as it is the case in our own military affairs. These among the ancient Hebrews were generally termed ריעה runners, a term perfectly synonymous with that used here, רע or רעל (which is perhaps an erroneous reading for دران the Persian word for runner.) This will elucidate an obscure passage in the 19th Psalm, v. 5, where we have "rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race." The word answering to strong man, is in the original 단, which means hero. In the translation too we have a race; but, as we know of no races among the Hebrews, we are reduced to some difficulty as to what could here have been intended by the writer. In the original, however, we have 단ף, which means nothing more than a way, road, or path: and the sense is, rejoiceth as a hero to run the road; i.e., to bear the despatches of his master with the greatest possible celerity and safety. This makes the whole passage easy and plain: it exhibits the sun as an officer honoured by the Almighty to bear the announcement of his powers, through every clime of his dominion, in a language silent but expressive, and equally intelligible to all. whole) three miles: so that there is, at the distance of every three miles, an inhabited village; and without this, three sentry-boxes, in which the couriers sit, prepared for motion, with their loins girded. In the hand of each is a whip about two cubits long, and upon the head of this are small bells. Whenever, therefore, one of the couriers leaves any city, he takes his despatches in the one hand, and the whip which he constantly keeps shaking in the other. In this manner he proceeds to the nearest foot-courier; and, as he approaches, he shakes his whip. Upon this out comes another, who takes the despatches, and so proceeds to the next. For this reason it is, that the Sultan receives his despatches in so short a time. In Sivastān I met the aged Sheikh Mohammed of Bagdad,* who told me, that his age was then one hundred and forty years; and, that he was present when the Calif El Mostaasem was killed by the Tatars in the environs of Bagdad.

I then proceeded by the Sinde to the city of Lāhāri,† which is situated upon the shores of the Indian sea, where the Sinde joins it. It has a large harbour, into which ships from Persia, Yemen, and other places put. At the distance of a few miles from this city, are the ruins of another, in which stones in the shape of men and beasts almost innumerable are to be found. The people of this place think, that it is the opinion of their historians, that there was a city formerly in this place, the greater part of the inhabitants of which were so base, that God transformed them, their beasts, their herbs, even to the very seeds, into stones; and indeed stones in the shape of seeds are here almost innumerable.

I next proceeded to Bakār,‡ which is a handsome city, divided by an

---

* Instead of this we have in Mr. Kosegarten, "Et in ea incidi in illius loci concionatorem cui nomen Escheibâni. Exhibuit mihi litteras quibus fidellum princeps Omar ben abd el assis Ommavida, quodam illius ab avo concionatoris Sceiwestanici munus contulit. Posteri hereditario jure munus retinent, litteras servant faustaque aibi ex us augurantur."

† This is, no doubt, the Larry Bundur of Major Rennell, see his map of Hindustan, with the Memoir, pp. 285, &c. Mr. Kosegarten has LAHARI.

‡ Of this place we have no notice in Major Rennell, either in the Memoir or the map. It may have been destroyed, however, since the times of Ibn Batûta, and the name only survive in the Puckar river, one of the arms of the Sinde which meets the sea in those parts, and which may have run through the town when our traveller was there.
arm of the river Sinde. Here I met the religious and pious Sheikh 'Shams Oddin Mohammed of Shiráz. This was one of the men remarkable for age. He told me that he was something more than one hundred and twenty years old. I then proceeded on to the city of 'Uja,* which is a large city, situated on the Sinde. The governing Emir, at the time of my arrival, was 'El Malik El Fāzil El Sharif Jalāl Oddin El Kabji, a very brave and generous prince. Between myself and him a friendship arose and was confirmed. After this we met in Dehli. I next travelled on to Multān, which is the principal city of Sindia, before the Emir of which the Sultan's soldiers are obliged to appear.

This Emir had always before him a number of bows of various sizes, and when any one, who wished to enlist as a bowman, presented himself, the Emir threw one of these bows to him, which he drew with all his might.† Then, as his strength proved to be, so was his situation appointed. But when any one wished to enlist as a horseman, a drum was fixed, and the man ran with his horse at full speed, and struck the drum with his spear. Then, according to the effect of the stroke, was his place determined.

There were many persons, Emirs, nobles, and learned men, who came to this place before us, and with us, all intending to be presented to

---

* The Outch of Major Rennell, probably; Mr. Kosegarten has Aja.
† We find an allusion to this custom in the 18th Psalm, where David says that his arms can break a bow of steel. The word, however, rendered steel, means in the original copper (כַּנְנָא), and, probably, should be understood only as a part of the bow, either the middle limb, to which pieces of horn, or of any other elastic substances were fastened, or the fibrula, or clasps, by which this and the horn, &c. were combined.

The bow was among our own ancestors considered as a criterion of strength, as we find in one of the songs in Robin Hood's Garland: vol. ii. London, 1785, p. 13.

...... That ever a boy so young,
Should bear a bow before our king,
That's not able to draw one string.

See also Bishop Hall's preface to his "Revelation unrevealed."

That the strength of a man was thus measured among the ancient Arabians, may be seen in the "Historia imperii vetustissimi Joctanidarum in Arabia Felice," by A. Schultens, pp. 135-5.
the Emperor. After a few days, therefore, one of the chamberlains of the Sultan arrived here, in order to conduct these persons to the presence. We then hastened to Dehli, between which and Multān there is a distance of forty days; throughout which, however, are many contiguous houses, and at these we were honoured by being invited every morning and evening to feasts, prepared by those who came out to meet such as were proceeding to be presented to the Emperor. The first city we entered belonging to Hindūstān was 'Abūhar, which is the first Indian city (in this direction). It is small and closely built, and abounds with water and plantations.

There are not in Hindūstān any of the trees peculiar to our country, if we except the 'lote tree, which, however, is larger in the trunk than it is with us; and, its seeds are like those of a great 'gall apple, exceedingly sweet. They have likewise large trees not known among us. Of their fruit trees, the grape* is one, which resembles the orange tree, except that its stem is larger, and its leaves more numerous. Its shade, too, is extensive and very dense, and is apt to affect with fever those who sleep under it. The fruit is about the size of the large ʰ Damask prune†, which when green and not quite ripe they take, of those which happen to fall, and salt and thus preserve them, just as the lemon is preserved with us. In the same manner they preserve the ginger while green, as also the pods of pepper: and this they eat with their meals. When the grape is ripe, which is in the autumn, its seed becomes yellow, and this they eat like the apple: it is sweet, but during mastication acquires some acidity. It has rather a large stone, which they sow like the orange seed, and from this a tree grows up.

Of their fruits are those termed the 'Shakī‡ and Barkī, the trees of which

* This is probably the mango.  † So Mr. Kosegarten.
‡ This is commonly called the jack, or bread-fruit. Crawfurd says, in his History of the Indian Archipelago, vol. i. p. 422: “of the jack fruit (autocarpus integrifolia) two species occur in the Indian islands, the common jack and the Chāmpādak. These two fruits of monstrous size grow, unlike most others, from the trunk and larger branches of the tree. The first grows often to an enormous size: the taste, though too strong to be agreeable to Europeans, is remarkably suited to the native palate. Containing a large quantity of saccharine and glutinous matter, the jack is highly nutritious.” He tells us a little lower down, that its are high, and their leaves are like the Jawz (or Indian nut): the fruit grows out from the bottom of the tree, and that which grows nearest to the earth is called the Barkī; it is extremely sweet and well flavoured in taste; what grows above this is the 'Shaki. Its fruit resembles that of the great gourd, its rind the skin of an ox (leather?) When it grows yellow in the autumn, they gather and divide it: and in the inside of each is from one to two hundred seeds. Its seed resembles that of a cucumber, and has a stone something like a large bean. When the stone is roasted, it tastes like a dried bean. These, i.e. the Shaki and Barkī, are the best fruits found in Hindūstān.

They have another sort of fruit, which they call ë El Tand: this is the fruit of the ë Pipercula. Its ' seed is the size of that of an ' Armenian peach, to which its colour may also be compared; it is exceedingly sweet. They also have the ' Jummūn,† which is a high tree: the fruit resembles that of the olive, and is black; as does likewise its stone. They have also the sweet orange in great abundance; but the acid orange is more esteemed. They also have one between the sweet and sour, which is exceedingly good. They have too the fruit called the ' Mahwa: the tree is tall, and the leaves name in the archipelago is probably a corruption of the Telinga jaka: our word شکی Shaki (or shaks, perhaps) seems to be another corruption of the same word. Mr. Kosegarten has شکی Shaki. Mr. Marsden adds, in his History of Sumatra, p. 99: "The outer coat is rough, containing a number of seeds or kernels (which, when roasted, have the taste of chestnuts) inclosed in a fleshy substance of a rich, and to strangers, too strong a smell and flavour, but which gains upon the palate." The Chāmpādāk of Mr. Crawfurd is, probably, the Barkī (بركي) of our traveller: the name, however, is preserved in Knox's Ceylon, in the word Warracha. "Before they be full ripe," says he, "the inhabitants call them Cost; and when ripe Warracha or Kellas: but with this difference, that the Warracha is hard, but the Kellas as soft as pap, both looking alike to the eye, but they are distinct trees." p. 26, edit. 1817.

---

* Mr. Kosegarten also reads El Tand p. 18.

† This is, probably, the Jambū (Eugenia) of Mr. Crawfurd. See History of the Indian Archipelago, vol. i. pp. 428-9. See also Marsden's Hist. Sumat. p. 99. Mr. Kosegarten has here أجنِت, which he gives Ducauk. It is, no doubt, an error.
are like those of the "Jawz, except that there is a mixture of yellow and red in them. The fruit resembles the small "prune, and is very sweet. Upon the head of each of its berries is a small seed, not unlike the grape both in shape and taste; but they who eat it generally experience the head-ache. When dried in the sun, its taste is like that of the fig. This berry they call 'El Angūr. The grape, however, is seldom found in Hindūstān, and then only in Dehli and a few other places. It produces fruit twice in the year. The fig is not found in Hindūstān.

They also have a fruit, which they call Kosaf, which is round and very sweet. About the tree they dig (and heap) the earth, just as they do about the chesnut. They also have in India fruit common with us which is the pomegranate, and which bears fruit twice in the year. The grain which they sow for subsistence, is sown twice in the year; and, that which is for the autumn, about Midsummer when the rains fall, which they reap in sixty days from the time of sowing it. Of this grain one is termed the 'Kodrū, which is a sort of millet. This is the most plentiful grain in use among them; and of it are the 'Kāl and the 'Shāmākh, the latter of which is smaller than a bean. The Shāmākh however often grows without culture, and is the food of the religious, the abstemious, the fakeers, and the poor generally, who go out and gather what thus grows spontaneously, and live upon it the year round. When this is beaten in a wooden mortar, the rind falls off, and then the kernel, which is white, comes out. This they boil in the milk of the buffalo, and make it into a stew, which is much better than when baked. Of their grain, one is the "Māsh,† which is a sort of pea:

* Mr. Kosegarten has kešra kasīra, which he writes kessira doubling the a.

† To the valuable note of M. de Sacy on this vegetable (Relat. de l’Egypte, p. 119), the following may be added from the medicinal dictionary of Hossin.
and of this the Munjam is a species. The seed is oblong, and of a clear green colour. This they cook with rice, and then eat it with oil. It is called El Koshira and taken daily for breakfast. Another species of this is the Lūbiā,† and another the Murut, which resembles the Kodrū, except that its seed is smaller, and is used for fodder for cattle: it is pulse. They also feed the beasts with the leaves of the māsh, instead of green corn. All these are their autumnal grains. And when they cut these, they sow the spring grain, which consists of wheat, barley, lentiles, and pulse.‡ that of the bākila (bean) but is less flatulent. The best time to use it is the summer: and the best of it, are those which are large, green, and plump. Its nature is cold at first, but moderate. Of its skin they make the chīn mukashkhar, and say that it is dry at first. The chyle produced by it is good; and it digests sooner than the bākila (or bean). The property of its chīn mukashkhar is, to be advantageous in pouticing for pains in the limbs, &c. The term chīn mukashkhar, means like something barked or peeled: but here seems to be applied as a compound word, as the name of something, but what it is I have not been able to discover. Nor am I quite certain about the syllables bitu, in bituisiyah, as the diacritical points in the MS. are not very plainly written: but as I could find nothing else so suitable, I have taken that, which according to Meninski means exposed to the sun, &c.

---

* We find in Golius, under Pers. مانش .... Lusitanis Munyo. Is not this mungo the munjam of Ibn Batūta?

† To M. de Sacy’s notes on the Loubia (Relat. de l’Egypte, p. 38, &c.) may be added the following from the dictionary of Hosain.

لوبیا (طیب) نزدیک گویید و تامور رآ صیل تراز ماس ہلم شیدت وپیرین آبید و نیلبت (نچع) وی کسید یزیبل انگریز آن سرخ بود کہ خپڑه دو و دریز باور و ارجعت وی کسید دار اور میاک اور یوبل و خشک و کوونرد مرد و شش شت پور کے لیے خاصا سرخ لیو دیم ناس پالت کند و جزلی برد و بادن جو مگر کند وسيم و بشیر ناز رو ناح لبر. The lūbiā, which they also call lūba and thāmar, is easier of digestion and ejection than the māsh. It is less productive of flatulency than the bākila (bean). The best of it is that which is red, but is not eaten. Its nature is warm at the first, but in moisture and dryness is moderate. They also say, that it is cold and dry .... The second property of the red sort is, that it assists in purperal complaints, expels the urine and makes the body plump. It is also valuable in pulmonary diseases.

‡ Of this, according to Hosain, there is, the white, the black, the karsani, the wild, and the garden, pulse. The wild is most scarce, and the garden pulse is eaten. حمص بباری خورند کویندر سفید و سرخ و وسیا و کرستی بود و بری و وساتنا بود بری کمرتر بود .... و وساتنا غذا نیکو نداد &c. Then follow its medicinal properties. on the ground from which the autumnal grain had been gathered. The soil of the country is exceedingly good.

As to the rice, they sow it three times during the year on the same ground: it is much in use among them. The sesame and sugar-cane they cultivate along with the autumnal grain.

I at length left the town of Abūhar, and proceeded for one day through a desert enclosed on both sides by mountains upon which were infidel and rebel Hindoos. The inhabitants of India are in general infidels; some of them live under the protection of the Mohammedans, and reside either in the villages or cities: others, however, infest the mountains and rob by the highways. I happened to be of a party of two and twenty men, when a number of these Hindoos, consisting of two horsemen and eighty foot, made an attack upon us. We, however, engaged them, and by God's help put them to flight, having killed one horseman and twelve of the foot.

After this we arrived at a fortress, and proceeding on from it, came at length to the city of Ajūdahan* which is small. Here I met the holy Sheikh Farid Oddin El Bodhāwondi, of whom the Sheikh El Wali Borhān Oddin El Aaraj had spoken to me in the port of Alexandria, telling me that I should meet him. I therefore did meet him, and presented him with the Sheikh's salutation, which surprised him; He said, I am unworthy of this. The Sheikh was very much broken by the temptations of the Devil. He allowed no one to touch his hand or to approach him; and, whenever the clothes of any one happened to touch his, he washed them immediately. His patronymic is referred to Bodhāwond, a town of El Sambal.

In this part, I also saw those women who burn themselves when their husbands die.† The woman adorns herself, and is accompanied by a

---

* The Adjodin of Major Rennell.

† It will not be necessary here to notice what has been written on this inhuman practice by more modern travellers, or by our own countrymen resident in Hindūstān: but, as some curious matter is found in the Dastūstān, a Persian book not yet translated, it may not be amiss here to give an extract on this subject:

آورده اند که زنی که پس از مرگ شهراستی شود کاهان زنِ
و شهراست تمایل بهخدش روا هنگام در بر پشت یکدند و دوگ شهراستی بک چنایکه مارکیم مارا ار سرویگ نور ویئین می آورند آنین شهراستی از دوزخ ب‌آورده به بیش اند ریاند و هر آن زنی که مسی
cavalcade of the infidel Hindoos and Brahmins, with drums, trumpets, and men, following her, both Moslems and Infidels for mere pastime. The fire had been already kindled, and into it they threw the dead husband. The wife then threw herself upon him, and both were entirely burnt. A woman's burning herself, however, with her husband is not considered as absolutely necessary among them, but it is encouraged; and when a woman burns herself with her husband, her family is considered as being ennobled, and supposed to be worthy of trust. But when she does not burn herself, she is ever after clothed coarsely, and remains in constraint among her relations, on account of her want of fidelity to her husband.

The woman who burns herself with her husband is generally surrounded by women, who bid her farewell, and commission her with salutations for

---

They say, that the woman who becomes a Sattee after the death of her husband, obtains pardon both for her own and her husband's sins, so that they may both remain long in paradise: and even if the husband should have gone to hell, just as a snake-catcher draws out a snake from his hole, so would the woman draw her husband out of hell, and place him in paradise. Every woman, too, who becomes a Sattee, should she again have a body, would have that of a man, not that of a woman. But, if she did not become a Sattee, but remain a widow, she would never in the metempsychosis have any other body but that of a woman. It is considered the duty of a woman to enter the fire in which her husband is burning, unless she be pregnant. A Brahman's wife must burn with her husband in the same fire, and so become a Sattee: others may burn elsewhere. It is not considered right, however, to force a woman into the fire: and, in like manner, a woman desiring to become a Sattee, is not to be kept back from her purpose. The doctors have said, that the original intention of becoming a Sattee was this: that a woman should, after the death of her husband, consume all her desires, and thus die (to the world) before her natural death: for in the language of mysticism woman means desire; and the intention is, that she should cast away her desire, not that she should throw herself as a dead carcasse into the fire, which is abominable." The word Sattee (in the Sanscrit सती) means saint, &c.
their former friends, while she laughs, plays, or dances, to the very time in which she is to be burnt.

Some of the Hindoos, moreover, drown themselves in the river Ganges, to which they perform pilgrimages; and into which they pour the ashes of those who have been burnt. When any one intends to drown himself, he opens his mind on the subject to one of his companions, and says: You are not to suppose that I do this for the sake of any thing worldly; my only motive is to draw near to "Kisāi, which is a name of God with them. And when he is drowned, they draw him out of the water, burn the body, and pour the ashes into the Ganges.

After four day's journey, I arrived at the city of "Sarsati*. It is large and abounds with rice, which they carry hence to Delhi. And after this at "Hānsi,† which is a very beautiful and closely built city, with extensive fortifications. I next came to "Masūd Abād,‡ after two days travelling, and remained there three days. The Emperor Mohammed, whom it was our object to see, had at this time left his residence in Dehli, and gone to Kinnoje,§ which is at the distance of ten days from that place. He sent his Vizier, however, "Khāja Jahān|| Ahmed Ibn Ayās, a native of Room, with a number of kings, doctors, and grandees, to receive the travellers, (an Emir is with them termed king.) The Vizier then so arranged the procession, that each one had a place according to his rank.

We then proceeded on from Masūd Abād till we came to Dehli, the capi-

---

* The Suruste of Major Rennell.
† Perhaps the Hassengur of Rennell, or the حانسي of Ferishta, which is certainly near the river Suruste, mentioned in the account of the battle between Shahāb Oddin and the Hindoo chiefs, A. H. 588. Dow writes it Hafsi, p. 169: (A. H. 752).
‡ This place I do not find in the maps.
§ This is, probably, the expedition noticed by Dow, Hindustan, vol. i. p. 322.
|| Chaja Jehan was, according to Dow, high in power with Mohammed Shah at this time. Hindustan, vol. i. p. 318; and Ferishta says, that Ahmed Ayāz received the title of Khāja Jahān, and was made commander of the forces of Guzerat upon the king's accession.
tal of the empire. It is a most magnificent city, combining at once both beauty and strength. Its walls are such as to have no equal in the whole world. This is the greatest city of Hindūstān; and indeed of all Islamism in the East. It now consists of four cities, which becoming contiguous have formed one. This city was conquered in the year of the Hejira 584 (A.D. 1188).  * The thickness of its walls is eleven 'cubits. They keep grain in this city for a very long time without its undergoing any change whatever. I myself saw rice brought out of the treasury, which was quite black, but, nevertheless, had lost none of the goodness of its taste. The same was the case with the kodrū, which had been in the treasury for ninety years. Flowers, too, are in continual blossom in this place. Its mosque is very large; and, in the beauty and extent of its building, it has no equal. Before the taking of Dehli it had been a Hindoo temple, which the Hindoos call 'El Bur Khāna (But Khāna†); but, after that event, it was used as a mosque. In its court-yard is a 'cell, to which there is no equal in the cities of the Mohammedans; its height is such, that men appear from the top of it like little children. In its court, too, there is an immense pillar, which they say, is composed of stones from seven different quarries. Its length is *thirty cubits; its circumference eight: which is truly miraculous.† Without the city is a reservoir for the rain-water; and out of this the inhabitants have their water for drinking.‡ It is two miles in length, and one in width.

* According to Firishta, however, it was not conquered by the Mohammedans before A.H. 588. His words, which I do not find in Dow, are these: وِجَّحَن فِي هُوَار نُفَتَرَة سلَّمَان شَهْبُ عَدْل مَلَك كَرِيدَد نَهْثُي شَاهِب نَبِي مَعْلَمَة ثُمَّ خَصَصَهُ إِلَى عَسَبَهُ سِهْبُ مَان وَمَانِسِهَ إِلَى تَصَرُّف كْنَارِي. When Fishtār was slain in the field of battle of Shalāb Qudn, Dehli, as will hereafter appear, in the latter part of the year 588 passing from the power of infidels, went into the government of the kings of Ghaur and their followers. According to the Aini Akbār, however, Dehli was first taken by Mahmood of Ghizna:

† This sort of temple is constantly termed But khāna (بُتْ خَانَه, a but house or house of Buddha) by Firishta.

‡ Is it the pillar of Firozshāh?

§ The waters of the Jumna, it should seem, are so impregnated with natrion as to be unfit for drinking. Col. Fitzclarence tells us, in his "Journal or Route across India, through Egypt to HINDUSTAN.

About it are pleasure-gardens to which the people resort. (al. the nobles of the city.)

CHAPTER XV.

Conquest of Delhi—Abstract of the History of Hindustan, from this time to that in which Ibn Batūta visited this place.

The city of Delhi was conquered by the Emir "Kotb Oddin Aibak, one of the Mamlūks of the Sultan "Shahāb Oddin Mohammed Ibn Sām El Ghauri* king of Ghizna and Khorāsān, who had overcome *Ibrahim Ibn Mahmood Ibn Subuktagīn† the beginner of the conquest of India. This Emir Kotb Oddin resided here as governor, on the part of Shahāb Oddin: but when Kotb Oddin died, his son, *Shams Oddin Lalmish,‡ became governor. After this, Shams Oddin became possessed of the kingdom here, having been appointed thereto by the general consent of the people; and he governed India for twenty years. He was a just, learned, and religious prince. After his death, his son, *Rokn Oddin, took possession of the throne; but polluted his reign by killing his brothers, and was,

صلب الدين ابناك.  شهاب الدين محمد بن حاصوب.  ابراهيم بن محمد بن مسكيش.  شمس الدين للميش.  ركن الدين.

England," (p. 238) that "the water of the Jumna, and of the wells, which they are now obliged to drink (i.e. the inhabitants of Delhi) is so much impregnated with natron, otherwise called soda, as to prove at times very injurious." Our traveller was in India before the time of Shah Jahān, and consequently before the canal for supplying purer water (mentioned in the same page by the Colonel) had been made: and hence the necessity for this reservoir.

* The taking of Delhi by Kotb Oddin Aibak (صلب الدين ابناك) who was then a servant of Shahāb Oddin, is placed by Ferishta in the year of Hegira 588. See Dow, vol. i. p. 156; where we are also told that Kotb Oddin made Delhi the seat of his government.

† An outline of these events will be found in Dow, vol. i. pp. 146-7-8.

‡ This is, no doubt, a mistake of the copyist: Shams Oddin Altmish was, according to Ferishta, the name of this king; see Dow, p. 176. And by this account be reigned twenty-six years. The word for six, however, might have been omitted by our traveller's copyist.
therefore, killed himself.† Upon this, the army agreed to place his sister ʻEl Malika Razia, upon the throne, who reigned four years. This woman usually rode about among the army, just as men do. She, however, gave up the government, on account of some circumstances that presented themselves.

After this, her younger brother, Nāsir Oddin,† became possessed of the government, which he held for twenty years. This was a very religious prince; and so much so, that he lived entirely on what he got by writing out and selling copies of the Koran. He was succeeded by his Nawāb, ʻGhīth Oddin Ahmed, one of his fathers’ Mamluks, who murdered him.‡ This man’s name was originally ʻBalaban; his character had been just, discriminating, and mild: he filled the office of Nawāb of India, under Nāsir Oddin, for twenty years: he also reigned twenty years.§ One of his

---

* The account of this reign is found in Dow, p. 182; and in p. 188 commences the account of his sister’s reign noticed by Ibn Batūta, and perfectly agreeing with it. The Emperor, according to Ferihsat, said of her: رضیه اکرجه بصورت زن است أما معنی مرد است. “Although Razia is a woman in form, she is a man in understanding.”

† A similar account of him is given by Dow from Ferihsat, where (p. 208) we have an anecdote about one of the copies of the Koran, which in his industry he had copied out; and another in which we are told, that his queen (for he had but one, and no concubines) one day complaining of her hands being injured (بسته‌ای من آزار دار) which Dow translates, “burnt her fingers,” in baking his bread, and requesting to have a maid to help her, was told, “that he was only a trustee of the state, and that he was determined not to burthen it with needless expenses. He therefore exhorted her to proceed in her duty with patience, and God would reward her in the end.” Two reigns, according to Ferihsat and the Tabakati Akbari, intervene here, of which Ibn Batūta makes no mention: the reason probably is, that they possess no particular interest.

‡ Nothing of this is mentioned in Ferihsat.

§ According to Ferihsat he ascended the throne A.H. 664 and died in 685. See Dow, p. 208-221. At the outset of this section, we have an abstract of his origin according to the historians of Hindustān, which differs in some respects from that of our traveller. Here, as already remarked, he is erroneously named Balin for Balaban. Ferihsat thinks, that as several persons of the name of Balaban occur in history, it probably may be the name of a Turkish tribe. His words are: رگوین در توارخ جند كسری بلقب بلسی نذرکرد اند میت اوئند بود که بلسی طایفه از ترکان باشند. It is curious enough, that in the Tabakati Akbari, which was composed before the times of Ferihsat, Balaban is said to have been called Balaban the Dwarf: the words are pious acts was, his building a house which was called the 'House of Safety';* for whenever any debtor entered this, his debt was adjudged; and in like manner, every oppressed person found justice; every man-slayer deliverance from his adversary; and every person in fear, protection. When he died he was buried in this house, and there I myself visited his grave. The history of his beginnings is surprising, which is this: When a child he lived at Bokhāra in the possession of one of the inhabitants, and was a little despicable ill-looking wretch. Upon a time, a certain Fakeer saw him there, and said: "You little 'Turk!" which is considered by them as a very reproachful term. The reply was: I am here, good Sir. This surprised the Fakeer, who said to him: Go and bring me one of those pomegranates, pointing to some which had been exposed for sale in the street. The urchin replied: Yes, Sir; and immediately, taking out all the money he had, went and bought the pomegranate. When the Fakeer received it, he said to Balaban: We give you the kingdom of India. Upon which the boy kissed his own hand, and said: I have accepted of it, and am quite satisfied.

It happened, about this time, that the Sultan Shams Oddin sent a merchant to purchase slaves from Bokhāra and Samarkand. He accordingly bought a hundred, and Balaban was among them. When these Mamlūks were brought before the Sultan, they all pleased him except Balaban, and him he rejected, on account of his despicable appearance.

* In a note p. 42, some notice will be found of an inscription brought from Ceylon by Sir Alexander Johnston and translated by me. Upon referring to that inscription it will be found, that an asylum is spoken of: the passage alluded to in our text in this place, seems to me to signify an institution perfectly similar to that in the inscription, and appears to be confirmatory of the view there taken of the inscription. We have no account of this establishment in Dow; but in the Tabakāt Akbarī and Ferishta, it is said: "He was buried in the House of Safety."
HINDUSTAN.

Upon this, Balaban said to the Emperor: Lord of the world! why have you bought all these slaves? The Emperor smiled, and said: For my own sake, no doubt. The slave replied: Buy me then for God’s sake. I will, said he. He then accepted of him, and placed him among the rest; but, on account of the badness of his appearance, gave him a situation among the cup-bearers.

Some of the astrologers, who were about the king, were daily in the habit of saying to him: “One of the Mamlûks will one day overcome thy son, and take the kingdom from him. To this the Emperor, on account of the justice and excellency of his own character, paid no regard, till they also told it to the Queen-Mother; who soon made an impression on his mind respecting it. He accordingly summoned the astrologers before him, and said: Pray can you tell which of the Mamlûks it is, who is to take the kingdom from my son, if you see him? They said, we have a mark whereby we can distinguish him. The Emperor then ordered all the Mamlûks to be present; who came accordingly, station after station, as commanded. Upon these the astrologers fixed their eyes; but did not discover the person looked for, until* the day began to draw towards the close. At this time the cup-bearers said one to another, we are getting rather hungry, let us join and send some one into the street to buy us something to eat. They did so; and Balaban, as the most despicable, was sent to make the purchase. Balaban accordingly sallied forth, but could find nothing in that street which would suit him; he then went on into another, during which time the turn of the cup-bearers came on to be presented. But, as Balaban was not forthcoming, they took a little pitch and whatever else was necessary for their purpose, and daubing it over a child, took him with them in the place of Balaban; and when his name was called over, this child was presented; and the business of the day was closed, without the astrologers finding their mark upon any one; which was a providential circumstance for Balaban.

* The force of the particle (until) is worth remarking in this place, as it is obvious that no inference whatever can here be drawn, that the circumstance hinted at did afterwards take place. The same often takes place in the scriptural usage of the terms אֶזֵּה, וְדוּעַ &c. very unlike the usage of our particle until. See Noldius, p. 534, edit. 1794.

Q 2
At last Balaban made his appearance; but not till the business of the day was over. The cleverness of Balaban was afterwards noticed, and he was made head of the cup-bearers. After this he was placed in the army, and soon became a general officer. After this the Sultan Jalâl Oddin married his daughter, which was before he had been made king. But when he was, he appointed Balaban to the office of Nawâb or Viceroy, which he filled for twenty years. He then killed his master, and seized the empire. This Balaban had two sons; one of these, namely, El Khân El Shahid, he appointed as his own successor, and governor on his part in the provinces of Sindia: he resided at Multân. He was killed, however, in an affair with the Tartars, leaving two sons, Kaikobâd† and Kaikhosru. Balaban's second son, named Nâsir Oddin, was appointed to govern the districts of Laknouti and Bengal. When, however, the heir-apparent El Khân El Shahid had been killed, Balaban appointed El Khân El Shahid's son Kaikhosru, his successor, passing over his own son Nâsir Oddin.

Nâsir Oddin, however, had a son named Moiž Oddin residing at the court of his grandfather at Dehli, the person who eventually became successor to Balaban. This at length came to pass on account of Gîâth Oddin Balaban's dying in the night, when his own son Nâsir Oddin was out of the way in the district of Laknouti. On this occasion he appointed Kaikhosru his grandson, the son of El Khân El Shahid, as already mentioned.

The king, however (or chief) of the Emîrs and Nawâb to the Sultan Balaban, happened to have conceived a strong enmity against Kaikhosru,

---

* In Dow, vol. i. p. 226, we have the same account.
† The Tabakât-i Akbarî and Farishta give the name of Kaikobâd to the son of this Nâsir Oddin, and who is here termed Moiž Oddin. All agree, however, in making the son of Nâsir Oddin eventually to succeed to Balaban in the empire. Which of our writers is correct in the other particulars I have not the means of determining, nor is it of much importance; but, from the accounts given below by Ibn Batûta, and no where else to be found, I am disposed to believe, that he had access to documents not in existence in the times of the historians referred to: and if so, his story bids the fairest for being the true one. The title of Balaban's second son Baghera Khân (بَغْرَا خَان) as given by Ferishta and Dow, is constantly in the Tabakât-i Akbarî Bakerâ Khân (بَكَرَا خَان).
on this account he had recourse to a stratagem, which gained him his end: it was this: He forged a letter in the name of the Emīr, stating that they had declared Moīzz Oddīn son of Nāsir Oddīn, king. With this he goes to Kaikhosrū by night, as if wishing to advise with him, and says: The Emīrs have proclaimed thy uncle's son; and I very much fear for thy safety. The reply was: What am I to do? He said, save thyself by escaping to the districts of Sindia. But, replied he, how am I to get through the gates of the city, which are already barred. The keys, answered the Emīr, are here in my possession. I will open the gates for you. The young man thanked him for this, and then kissed his hand. The Emīr said: Mount immediately. He accordingly did, with his nobles and slaves; and the Emīr opened the gates, let them out, and immediately closed them again.

He next went to Moīzz Oddīn, son of Nāsir Oddīn, and asked permission to enter; which being granted, he proclaimed him Emperor. "But, how is this," replied Moīzz Oddīn, "since Kaikhosrū my uncle's son was appointed successor?" The Emīr told him of his stratagem, and how he had got rid of Kaikhosrū. Moīzz Oddīn thanked him for this, and then took him to the palace; where, sending for the rest of the Emīrs and nobles, they invested him with the supreme authority during the night. In the morning this was confirmed by the people generally; and Moīzz Oddīn took possession of the throne.

His father, however, was living at this time in the provinces of Bengal and Lakhoutī: and, when the news of his son's being made Emperor reached him, he said: I am heir to the crown, how then can my son exercise this authority during my lifetime? He accordingly set out with his army for Dehli, in order to make war upon his son Moīzz Oddīn. Moīzz Oddīn too marched out with his troops to give battle to his father. They both arrived at the same time at the city of Karrā, which is situated on the banks of the Ganges, took their stations on opposite sides of the river, and prepared for the onset. It was the will of divine Providence, however, to spare the blood of the faithful; and hence the heart of the father

* The Currah of Major Rennell.
Nāsir Oddin began to relent towards his son; for he said to himself, surely as long as my son is king, I shall partake of his glory. Moizz Oddin too felt in his mind that something of submission was due to his father. Each of them, therefore, as if by instinct, left his army and rode directly into the middle of the river and met there. Here the Emperor kissed the feet of his father, and asked his forgiveness. His father replied, I give you my kingdom; and so invested him with the authority of Emperor. He then wished to retire to his districts; but his son said: Nay, but you must come with me to mine. He accordingly accompanied him to Dehli; and, entering the palace, seated his son upon the throne, and took his own station before him. This day is therefore called, the day of meeting; because they had this happy rencontre in the middle of the river, no blood being shed, and the kingdom mutually given and accepted.

After this, Nāsir Oddin returned to his districts; where after two years he died, leaving a family behind him. The kingdom was thus confirmed to Moizz Oddin, which continued for four years, during which the inhabitants

* The account of this transaction is given in a manner somewhat different in the Tabakāt Akbārī, Ferishta, and after the latter, by Dow, vol. i. p. 225, &c., the former, stating, as Ferishta does, that Nāsir Oddin did not think of leaving Luknouti for Dehli for two years, until he had heard of the great profigraphy of his son, proceeds thus:

سلطان سمست ملک نظام الدين با لشکرها آرامه واسباب سلطنة ولؤزم حکمیت بجانب ارده حکمیتی فرود جوین سلطان نامر الدين بربی مطلع شد دانست که باعث این امر ملک نظام الدين است وزیر با لکب وقیان و حکمیت از لکب وبیان بربی بروران شد هردو لکب بر کار آب بی ترد بیابان فرود آمدند سه روز پر مارکات و مکاتبات نظرین سلسله ملقات نیودند ودر باد جکنونی ملقات سفند کذشفت آخر قرار یافت که پر برخست نشید وسلطان نامر الدين از آب بیابان پر خست ملقات کذشفت &c. "The Sultan, at the instigation of the Vizier Nizām Oddin, providing himself with an army, and other appurtenances of royalty, set out for Oude. When the Sultan Nāsir Oddin was acquainted with this, knowing that the Vizier Nizām Oddin had originated it, he also set out with an army, elephants, and great pomp towards his son. Each of the armies took its station on each side of the Sirvo (Soorjew or Gogra). When three days were spent in sending and receiving letters, as to how the meeting was to be arranged, it was at length agreed, that the son should retain the throne; and that Nāsir Oddin should pass the river, and do homage to his son upon it." I make this extract, because Dow introduces certain matters into the account not to be found either in Ferishta or the author cited. Such as the armies waiting for some days in hourly expectation of an action; the old man finding his army inferior to that of his son, and the like: when the fact seems to be, that a negotiation was set on foot immediately, and that the father had no intention or wish to give his son battle. What authority our traveller had for placing this meeting upon the Ganges it is not easy to say.
may be said to have enjoyed a continual holiday. After this he was affected by a complaint, by which one of his sides became quite withered, and for which the physicians could find no remedy. At this time, his Nawāb, Jalāl Oddin Fīroz Shāh El Khilāji, revolted, taking his station upon a high mount without the city. Moizz Oddin sent his Emirs for the purpose of giving him battle; but they all, one after another, joined him, and proclaimed him Emperor. Jalāl Oddin then entered the city, and enclosing Moizz Oddin within his palace for three days, overcame him, put him to death, and took possession of his kingdom. This Jalāl Oddin was a mild and well-informed prince; he governed India for two years. He had a son and a daughter. The daughter he married to his brother's son Alā Oddin, a daring, bold, and powerful man. His wife, however, so much harassed him, that he was obliged to complain to her father, in order to have an end put to their disputes.

The uncle had given him the government of Karrā and Manikbūr, containing two of the most populous districts in India. Alā Oddin, however, had an eye to the kingdom. The only difficulty he had to contend with was, his want of money; for he had none, except what he got by his sword in making new conquests. Upon one of these expeditions, his horse happened to stumble against a stone as he went along, and from this a kind of ringing noise proceeded. He immediately ordered his men to dig; and here they found an immense quantity of wealth. This he divided among his followers, and hence acquired considerable power. It happened that his uncle undertook an expedition against him, and summoned him before him, but he refused to appear. The uncle then prepared to go to

---

* Dow, ib. p. 229.
† Here the Khilji dynasty originated, and that of Ghaur ended. Dow, ib. pp. 229-231.
‡ Noticed by Dow, p. 243
§ The Currah and Manicpoor of Major Rennell.
¶ This wealth seems to have been acquired in an expedition into the Deccan. Dow, ib. p. 245 and 247. In countries like those of the East, however, subject to a perpetual change of masters, it is not at all to be wondered at, that much treasure is often buried; and, perhaps, this will in some measure account for the stories we so often meet with, of great treasures being found in the earth.
him; for he said, This young man is as my son, I will therefore go to him. The nephew accordingly met him, which happened upon the banks of the Ganges, in the very place where Moizz Oddin and Nasir Oddin had formerly met: and, like them, each rode into the middle of the river. Ala Oddin, however, had commanded his followers, that, at the time he should embrace his uncle Jalal Oddin, they were to kill him. When, therefore, the parties met, and the nephew was in the act of embracing the uncle, the followers of the nephew killed him, which put Ala Oddin in possession of his uncle's army, and all proclaimed him Emperor. After this he governed Hindustan for twenty years. He was just, and looked to the affairs of his subjects in person. Now he also had a nephew named Soleimân Shâh, and as he was one day engaged in the chase, this nephew conceived the intention of destroying him, just as he had of destroying his own uncle. He shot him, accordingly, with an arrow in an unguarded moment, and the uncle fell from his horse.† The nephew was

* Ferishta's account of this transaction will be found in Dow, vol. i. pp. 252-254. But here the Persian historians represent the affair as having taken place in the Ganges: and, as Ibn Basîta says, it took place where the former one did, he must have written the Ganges, on that occasion.

† Dow, ib. pp. 267-269. But here the name of Atî Khân occurs: if, however, we turn to Ferishta, we shall find Soleimân Shâh, just as we have it in our traveller: and as we have another variety, it may not be amiss to cite the passage:

سلطان در غصب رفته پنفر نمی‌شد با کوکه، بدشانه از بلده دهلی باند، بنزهست فرود چون به تخت (تل پشت) رسید آگاه چند روز مقام کرده هر روز عصرا می‌رفت و می‌گریزد پوشیده بیرم مخصوص بود و شکار رفته بود چون گاه (یکه) شد نوانست بی‌بند و بیرم مانند رود بید دیگر پیش از طول‌الدین شد داد که مرمی ببسته شدن و خیب‌با جنگ کس بگوشه رفته بیرن بلندی و پشت که خورشید نیمه طیار شد و شکار کد ناگه سلیمان شاد برادر زاده سلطان علی الدین که ازاغی خان داشت و کیک دربر دروهی قسه سلطان جلال الدین و علی ال‌دین اختار آرده با جنگ سوار نو سلمان که چگر تدین آوربد و سیر کرد و درآمده و قصد سلطان خوش سلطان را به تیرکنند سلطان از بلندی بی‌شک امده، &c. "The Sultan was enraged, and in his own person proceeded towards that part in regal pomp. When he arrived at Tiket (according to the Tabakât Akbari at Til Pâr), and had resided there a few days, and went daily into the desert to hunt the kamurghah, upon one of these he happened to have lost time, so that he could not get to the army, but remained out. On the next day, before sun-rising, he ordered the hunting to commence, while he, with a about to make up to him, when he was told by his slave that he need not do so, as he was quite dead. He left him, therefore, and returned to the palace, and took possession of the government. A little while after Alā Oddin, recovering from his stupor, got up and mounted a horse, which the army perceiving joined him. He then entered the city, and besieged his nephew Soleimān Shāh in the palace; who, feeling his weakness, betook himself to flight, but was taken and put to death by his uncle Alā Oddin. After this he never rode a hunting, to divine service, or to the celebration of any public holiday.

He had five sons, the younger of whom were 'Shahāb Oddin and Kotb Oddin: the eldest he had, during his life time, ordered to be kept in prison.*
When taken with his last sickness (the anger of the young man on account of his imprisonment not having abated), and when the disease was making rapid advances, he sent for this son in order to name him as his successor;
but, he delaying to come in consequence of this irritation, the Mamlūks, the head of whom hated this son, together with the principal Nuwāb, placed the younger son Shahāb Oddin upon the throne, as soon as the Emperor was dead: and the appointment was confirmed by the people. The three elder children, however, were ordered to be imprisoned and their eyes to be put out: and thus was the government established.

few others, went aside and sat upon a height, so that when the Kamurgah should be started he might engage in the hunt. All on a sudden, however, Soleimān Shāh the Sultan's nephew, who was styled Allīkh Khān, and was keeper of the Door, having in his mind the affair of Jalāl Oddin and Alā Oddin, with a few horsemen who were his old servants and had lately become Mohammedans, parading as it were for his amusement, made for the Sultan; who, when they had attacked him with their arrows, fell from the height, &c. The place where this occurred is called Jilput, by Dow, which is, perhaps, an error of the press for Tilput, as found in the Tabakāt Akbari. Of the Vakeel Muttaluk, as in Dow, we have in both histories

* This, we have, I suppose, in the temporary banishment mentioned by Dow, vol. i. p. 292.
Ferishta, however, mentions it not as a command, as given by Dow, but merely as a permission to go to Amrohe, on a hunting excursion: his words are, permission to Khazir Khan to make a hunting excursion to Amrohe, saying, when I shall have recovered my health, I will send for you. See also id. p. 293, where Ferishta does not say one

He gave

R
Upon this the Queen sent for two of the most powerful of her husband’s Mamluks, the name of one of whom was ‘Bashir, that of the other, “Mubashshir, and with tears complained of the conduct of the principal Nuwab towards her children, soliciting their assistance, and stimulating them to put the chief Nuwab to death; and affirming, that it was his intention to murder her younger son Kotb Oddin. They accordingly agreed to kill him, which they did by stratagem while he was in his house.* They then brought forth Kotb Oddin to his brother Shahab Oddin, who held the reins of government. Kotb Oddin remained for some time in the situation of his Nuwab, but at length deposed his brother, and took possession of the kingdom; which he held for some time.

After this he took a journey to ‘Dawlat Abad, between which and Dehl is a distance of forty days. The road is from first to last inclosed with willow and other trees, so that a traveller seems to be in a garden throughout all this distance.† Besides, there are at the distance of every three miles the stations of the foot couriers, at which there are also inhabitants, as already mentioned. From this place to El Telingana,‡ and ‘El Maabar,§ is a distance of six months. In all these stations there is a word about trying his affections or seeing him weep, as stated by Dow, but that the Emperor embraced him affectionately, and allowed him to go into the haram to see his mother, &c.

* In pp. 295-6. The account of the Queen’s proceeding differs a little in Ferihta from that in Ibn Batuta: and here Dow is incorrect. “The mother of Mobirick Shaw .... acquainted Sheik Nizam ul Dien,” &c.; but Ferihta says it was the Sheikh Najm Oddin Shaikh Nizam ul Dien. And a little lower down he tells us, just as our traveller does, that this affair was communicated to both the Mubahlahir and the Bashir: his words are باز كشتند وقصروا تعيش ونشتره مهربار وداکان بدنة كشتند
&c. i.e. they returned and told the affair to the Mubahlahir and the Bashir, who were the heads of the Eunuchs. Where we also learn that these are names of office.

† We are told by Ferihta, and after him by Dow, Hind. vol. i. p. 319, that the emperor planted both sides of the road from Dehl to Daulatbad with trees, for the purpose of shading the inhabitants when passing from the one place to the other.

‡ This is, no doubt, the reading of our MSS. تلبت تلبت Telinga of Ferihta and Tilting of Dow; the reading of our MSS.

§ It will scarcely be necessary to add any thing to the valuable notes of M. de Sacy and Mr.
Marsden on this place; Relat. de l’Egypte, p. 118, and Travels of Marco Polo, p. 636. But as a few notices of it are to be found in Abulfeda’s Geography, not mentioned by them, I shall here give them. وقال ابن مسعود المعمر الشهير على الآلية: منها جبل الآلية (اللنس) ونبضتها تضرب lodging for the Emperor, with cells for his suite, and for travellers generally. There is no necessity, therefore, for a poor man’s carrying any provisions with him on this road.

When, therefore, the Sultan Kotb Oddin was on this journey, and had with him "Khazir Khan, the son of his elder brother who was in prison, some of the Emirs formed a conspiracy, by which it was their intention to depose the Emperor, and to proclaim this son of his elder brother. But the Emperor discovering this, instantly put his nephew and his nephew’s father to death, as well as his other brothers, who were then confined in the fortress of Ő Kâliyûr.*

This fortress is situated on the top of a high hill, and seems as if it had been cut out of the rock: opposite to it is no other mount. Within it are reservoirs filled with rain-water; and about it are numerous walls, upon which warlike engines are planted. This is their strongest fortress: beneath it, is a small town.

When, however, Kotb Oddin had killed his brothers, and so purified his kingdom that no one seemed left to contend with him, divine Providence gave the supreme power to one of his most powerful and choice friends, namely, 'Nāsir Oddin Khosrū Khān, who killed him, and took possession of the empire: but this he held only for a short time. The reason was, that when he had taken possession of the throne, he sent dresses of honour to the governors of the several provinces; which they all put on, as a mark of obedience, if we except 'Toglik Shāh, father of the present Emperor of Hindūstān Mohammed Shāh. This person was then governor of 'Debalbūr, and would neither put on the dress, nor tender his obedience. The consequence was, an army was sent against him, which he put to flight. The Emperor then sent his brother against him: him also he routed, and put to death: and so far did matters proceed, that Toglik also slew 'Nāsir Oddin Khosrū Khān and seized his empire.

This 'Nāsir Oddin had originated some great abominations during his reign, of which the forbidding oxen to be slaughtered is one, and which is one of the regulations of the infidel Hindoos. For among them, no one is allowed to slaughter an ox; and, in case he should do so, he is ordered to be stitched up in its skin, and to be burnt. The reason is, they so much esteem the ox that they drink its urine, both to promote prosperity and to recover health. They also daub their walls with the dung of these ani-

---

* The rise of this wretch will be found in Dow, pp. 300-4; and at p. 307 we are told, that his reign continued only five months; but according to my copies of Ferishta his reign was some days short of this.

† The province of this name. We have in Dow, vol. i. p. 303, the first intimation of this, where we are told, that this chief was governor of Lahore and Debalpūr; and that his son was appointed master of the horse in Dehli, as noticed by our traveller a little lower down. Toglik, however, is styled in Dow, Ghazi Malluk.

‡ Nothing is said in Dow of this; but in Ferishta some intimations of it are found, viz. "He began to practise idolatry with the Hindoos, so that the Korān was occasionally placed as a stool and sat upon."
HINDUSTAN.

125

male. Hence it was that Nasir Oddin became so hateful to the Mahommedans, that they stimulated Togil Ghiath Oddin, to put him to death, and to take possession of the kingdom.

This Togil was originally descended from the Turks who inhabit the mountains in the district of Sinda. He was very poor, but belting himself to the cities of these parts, he got employment in feeding cattle. After this he became a foot soldier, and a horse soldier: in the next place, as his abilities appeared he was made a commanding officer. After this the Emperor Kuda Oddin appointed him governor of Dehli; and his son, who is now Emperor, keeper of the horse. Togil was brave, warlike, honourable, and just: and, as his son was stationed at Dehli as keeper of the horse, when the father had determined to rebel.
he corresponded with this son, who cajoled the Emperor Khosrū Khān; sometimes, for example, appearing at his post without the city, and then returning to his father. After some days, however, he was missing till after sunset, which giving some suspicion to Nāsir Oddin, he sent for him, but could not find him: on this occasion he had escaped, and taken all the best of the Emperor’s horses to his father.

The Emir of Multān, Kashlu Khān, joined Toglik in his rebellion, in order to avenge Koth Oddin, son of Nāsir Oddin, their common master. When, however, the two conspirators entered Dehli, and Nāsir Oddin had betaken himself to flight with only a few Hindoo fakeers, Toglik said to Kashlu Khān: You shall be Emperor. But he refused; and Toglik took possession of the government. After this, Nāsir Oddin was taken and put to death; and the kingdom was purged, and remained so for four years.

After this the Emperor sent his son, who is now Emperor, to reduce the provinces of Telinga, which are at the distance of three months from

* This is Dow’s Malleck Fuchir ul Dīn Jonah. Ferishta tells us, that the escape of this young man to his father, was the first thing that awakened this king to the danger of his situation: and, as his words very much confirm the account given by Ibn Battūta I shall here give them: دریان اوقا بعد از دوما و نم ملک جونا نیم شی فرمست یافته با نا سه کس معتمد سوار شد و از دهلی بیاغار راه دیپالیور گرفت خسرو خان آ خوای غفلت بیدار شده از زوال دیپس خوش دیماهان کردید &c. In the mean time, after two months and a half, Jūnā, finding an opportunity in the middle of the night, mounted with two or three confidential friends, and took the road from Dehli to Debalpūr with all haste. Khosrū Khān being (thus) awakened from his sleep of negligence, became anxious as to the decline of his power, &c. The particulars, however, differ a little.

† Our MSS. here read بلائی which is a manifest mistake of the copyist, for بلائی the orthography of Ferishta, and which Dow writes, Tilling, vol. i. p. 509, where we have an abridgment of the account given by Ferishta of this rebellion. But as Dow’s mode of writing the proper names, &c. differs very materially from that found in my MSS. it may not be amiss to notice it. Ferishta’s words are these, وللک فخر الالع جونا (جونا ا) پسر نرک بود بیلی عهد کرناشده شریا باعطای جنرال آسمان رضاینی ولفغان خطاب داده: “But Malik Fakhar Oddin Jūnāla (al. Jūnā) his eldest son, he appointed as his successor, and lifted his head almost to the skies, by giving him a royal umbrella. He also gave him the title of Alīf Khān.” With this my MSS. agree; Dow, however, gives Alīg Khān, (he probably read لخ where I have الف).

For some account of Telīngā, (occasionally written تلگان by Ferishta) the place here meant, see Rennell’s Memoir to his Map of Hindustan, p. cxi. &c.
Dehli; but when he had arrived at a certain part of the way, one of the courtiers thought proper to rebel, and to possess himself (if possible) of the kingdom. For this purpose he circulated a report, that the Emperor was dead; supposing that the Emirs would now immediately proclaim him king. When they heard this, however, every one of them struck his drum, and betook himself to his own part (i.e. to rebellion): so that the prince was left with his particular friends alone.† The Emirs, moreover, intended to kill him; but from this they were diverted by one of the great men of their body, whose name was ْTimūr. The prince then fled to his father with ten of his friends, whom he styled ْYārān (i. e. friends in the Persic); but, when he came to him, was immediately sent back on his journey with a large army. Upon this, the Emirs, who had intended to put him to death, fled; but some of them were taken, and put to death. Thus the matter terminated, and he returned to his father.

* This appears to be equivalent to the scriptural expression, “Every man to his tent, O Israel,” which seems to have been the watch-word for rebellion.

† As the account of this mutiny is not given correctly by Dow (vol. i. p. 309, &c.) I shall here give it in the words of Ferishta.

The father himself then undertook an expedition against the province of ْLaknouti, in which resided at that time the Sultan Shams Oddin son of Ghiāth Oddin Balaban: to whom had fled the Emirs of Toglik, as just mentioned. About this time, however, Shams Oddin died, having first bound his son, Shahāb Oddin (by contract), who accordingly took possession of the throne. His younger brother, however, ْGhiāth Oddin Bahādur Būrā, overcame him, and seized upon the kingdom. He then killed all the rest of his brothers, except Shahāb Oddin, who had been bound to mount the throne, and Nāşir Oddin: for they fled to Toglik imploring assistance. He allowed them, therefore, to march with his army, in order to give battle to Ghiāth Oddin. Toglik had also appointed his son Mohammed to the office of Nuwāb in Dehli during his own absence on this expedition. He proceeded therefore, and gained possession of the province of Laknouti, having put Ghiāth Oddin to the rout, after which, however, he took him prisoner, and carried him to Dehli.

* Some account of this expedition is given by Dow, vol. i. p. 311, where we also find the appointment of the Emperor's eldest son to the office of Nuwāb of Dehli. Ferishta places this expedition in the year of the Hejira 724, A.D. 1524, and as Dow's account is in some respects inaccurate, I shall give Ferishta's words:

سنه أربع عشرين ومسلماًا عرضاً از لهندوئي وسابكانو آمد كه امسا وحکام آتاجا نست ظلم دراز كرد يبداد بسیر مرکز سلطان تغلق ذه لکم جميع كرد اللف خان اردقه في نواب خود داحته وجانب شرق هندوستان نفست فورود وجون به ترهت رسید سلطان هماهنام ولد سلطان غیات الدين بلس مکی، &c. "In the year 724 accounts came from Lakhnouti and Sanārgānwa, stating that the Emirs and magistrates of that place were exercising great cruelties and injustice upon the inhabitants. Upon this the Emperor Toglikshāh getting an army together, and appointing Alif Khan for his Viceroy in Dehli, set out for the eastern parts of Hindūstān: and when he arrived at Turbat, the Sultan Nāsir Oddin, son of the Sultan Ghiāth Oddin Balaban, &c."
When he had got near to Dehli, he sent to his son Mohammed, requesting him to build him a “kushkā, that is, a palace, which he did, and constructed one, well built of wood, in the space of three days. But Mohammed the son made an agreement with the geometrician who planned it, that the steps leading to it should be made sufficiently broad to allow the elephants to ascend them, in order to their being presented to the

* We read in Dow (vol. i. p. 311) that forty elephants had been sent from Jagenagur, by Alif KHân, for the Emperor; and it is probable these were the elephants intended to be presented on this occasion, if there is any truth at all in this part of the story. In p. 312 of Dow, vol. i, we have a very short account of this event; but there the scene is placed at Afghānpūr, a place of which Rennell gives no account, but which must be very near Dehli. This has been taken from Feriâhta, whose words are as follows:

موجع دار السلطان شهد در طی محاصره ومحاذ دان: سعی داد غافل از آنکه اجل کریب بی‌کوکته می‌کنند این خیال شینه که یک در بَلی اینفار

متوجه اینکه کوکته نسبت اگرچه در مدت سه روز اقدام کرده حکاک سلطان آنجا رسد شک در آنها توقف کرده سالا بعد از آنکه شهر آراسته کرده باشد وجمیع اسباب ابتدت آماده شده داماد یک‌دهم به‌سیما در آن سلطان آلنا رسد سبب احداث مبارک بخاطر آوردند در آن‌هایم نزول برود ورود دیگر الف خان وسایر امرای دهلی بعید بعیدان انابل پادشاه سرداران شده با‌جمعه که با‌ستقبال او آمده بودند در آن قصر نشست وآباده خاص کنند سرداران گویی طعم برداشتم یوزم دانند که سلطان بسرعت مواد خواهد شد سمها ناشته بر آمدهن سلطان

بی‌درب دریا سخت‌نشین آنها ساینی در زنی حفظ خانه‌هائی ادخال وسالان با پنچ نقر در تره بار کر یاد که در توجه حکایت نسبت در این تاریخ مذکور است که جهان قرن نما ساخته رازه‌بر گری که سلطان

تغلق از بکاله همراه آوردند به بر یک در ضر وانديد از مدتی آن زمان نشست کرده حرکت وبعضی از مرخان کلته‌اند که از ساخی این قسم قبرکه هیچ فرضی نیست بی‌آن

سی‌مایا که اللف خان قصد پدر خود باشد. “He made for his capital, using every possible endeavour to expedite his progress, not at all aware that his end was so near. When Alif KHân had heard that his father was coming in great haste, he erected a palace for him near Afghānpūr, in the space of three days; so that when the Sultan should have arrived at that place, he might lodge there for the night; and in the morning, when the city should be adorned, and every thing prepared to receive him, he should enter it with great pomp. The Sultan accordingly arrived there, and believer the reason given for erecting this palace to be the true one, he took up his lodging there. On the day following Alif KHân, with the rest of the Emir of Dehli, happy at the intimation of the king’s arrival, with the company who came to welcome him sat down in the palace to a feast. When the stables were removed, and the company was aware that the Sultan would soon mount, they got up, not waiting even to wash their hands. The Sultan, however, delayed as long as washing his hands would require,
Emperor Toglik. A place also was so constructed, that when the foot of the elephant should come in contact with it, the whole palace should fall down upon all who may happen to be in it. When, therefore, the Emperor arrived at his palace, he had it carpeted and furnished, and took up his residence within it. Now, the Emperor had a second son, who was a great favourite with him. In consequence of this, the elder brother, but during this time the roof of the palace fell in, and the Sultan with five others perished. In some of the histories it is said, that since the palace was new and fresh built, and as some persons made the elephants which the Emperor had brought with him from Bengal race round it, as the weight of the elephants made the ground sink, the palace on this account fell. Others say, that this useless palace was built merely because Alî Khân had a design upon his father.” This opinion, however, Ferihta rejects as improbable, and inclines to another, given by the Hâjî Mohammed of Kandahâr, that the palace was struck by lightning. The author of the Tabakât Akbari, however, who is followed by the Farhat El Nazirîn (فرحات الناشرين) after giving the same account with Ferihta of this circumstance, concludes, by ascribing to it the same cause with Ibn Batûta. His words are:

"Having arranged matters in Bengal, he came to Dehli. Mohammed Khân, his son, at the head of a party in Dehli, built a palace in three days, and with much solicitation got the Sultan to come to it. The roof, however, fell in, and his matters were brought to a conclusion; and although Ziâ Barnî labours to give a good name to this prince, yet to have built such a receptacle, and to have used such diligence to get the Sultan to it, must bring to mind the badness of his character.” (A-ini Akbarî) This Ziâ Barnî, it should be remembered, was a favourite with Mohammed Shah, and wrote his history under the immediate inspection of Mohammed’s son Firoz Shâh, as the author of the Tabakât Akbari has judiciously remarked. There can be no doubt, therefore, that Ibn Batûta’s account of this event is the true one. An account of this transaction, similar to those above given, is also found in the Maṭbû‘i Bâktî, by Abd El Baki.
Mohammed, very much feared lest he should be appointed successor to the throne. When, therefore, the different orders, as well as those who had come to welcome the Sultan, had concluded the banquet, the elephants were presented before him: but, when the elephant's foot came in contact with the place appointed, down came the palace upon the head of the Sultan Toglik, his favourite son, and the courtiers who were assembled before him, and all perished. Mohammed, the present Emperor, accordingly took possession of the throne, having been proclaimed by the Emirs and people, and thus was the kingdom purged of his enemies.

APPENDIX.

As this fortress* is one of the greatest curiosities in Hindūstān, I may perhaps be excused in giving some extracts from a book entitled the 7Gwalior Nāmah respecting its history and governors.

The hill, it is said, was originally called 'Kūmatat, and that its neighbourhood abounded in wild beasts. Upon the hill a devotee named 'Gawāli Pā made his residence, just thirty-two years before the reign of Bikramājīt. Some time after this a Zemindār named Suraj Sīn, happening to come to this place while engaged in the chase, applied to the devotee for water to drink, which was granted. Upon this and some other occasions, the powers of these waters turned out to be so wonderfully beneficial, that the Zemindār requested to be permitted to enlarge the well, and to build a fortress on the hill, which was also granted. The Darvāzah, after blessing the Zemindār, and giving him a casket, which had the supernatural property of supplying him with gold, gave him the name of Suraj Pāl, adding, that as long as his descendants retained the name of Pāl, so long would they hold this fortress, and succeed in reducing their neighbours to their obedience. The consequence of which was, this Zemindar and his posterity became the proprietors of all the neighbouring country: and, after him, the well "Sūraj Kund received its name.

* For some good views of this fortress, see Colonel Fitzclarence's Journey overland from India; and Bernier's Voyage to Hindustan, in Pinkerton's Collection of Voyages and Travels, vol. viii. p. 64.

After this King, eighty-four of his posterity reigned in the fortress of Gwalior: the fourth of whom, 'Bhīm Pāl, built the pagoda called 'Bhīm Ab sar: the seventh "Bhūj Pāl built, the pagoda called "Chatar Bhūj Rāe at the top of the fortress: the eighth, "Padam Pāl, built the pagoda of "Lachmai Narīyan: the ninth, "Anang Pāl, skilled, as it should seem, in the chemical art, struck golden sahrafs of five tola in weight. Nothing remarkable is recorded of the rest until we come to the last, who received the name of "Yatāj Karān, and who, conformable with the prophecy of the Hindū sage, lost the government of the fort, together with that of the adjacent countries. The account of this event is shortly this.

A neighbouring Raja, named Rhan Mal, had no son, and only one daughter: this prince therefore of the Pāl family offered himself as her suitor, and was accepted. Before he could return to Gwalior, he was adopted son and successor to the Raja Rhan Mal; and, as this Raja's dominions were greater than his own, he was easily persuaded by his Vicerey, Rām Deo, whom he had left at Gwalior, to make over the government of the country and fortress to him.

Seven of Rām Deo's successors held the fortress accordingly, until the time of the Sultan Shams Oddin, who was originally a slave of Turkish extraction, belonging to the Sultan Koth Oddin Aipak. This king, when returning from an expedition to the Deccan, saw, for the first time, this singularly strong fortress; and, upon finding that none of its governors had paid tribute to the Emperors of Delhi, swore upon the Koran that he would subdue it; which he soon after accomplished.

Upon this occasion, which happened A.H. 630, A.D. 1232, a mosque was erected in the fort, and prayers offered up in the name of the Sultan. Some time after, the Sultan surveying the place, found that it contained only two wells of water, and that the part at which he had entered was rather weak; he ordered a wall, therefore, to be built, joining it to the hāil; and in the area he made eight wells, and "nine bādries; all of which are still in being. One of these wells is very famous for its waters, which are carried to a great distance, and are found very useful to invalids.

After the Sultan Oddin had made all his arrangements he returned to Delhi, leaving the fortress in the hands of one "Bahādur Khān. From this time to that of the Sultan Alā Oddin, no officer had been sent from Delhi to Gwalior; some time after his accession, however, it was given to two Rājpūts of the "purgunna of Dandarūli, as a reward for faithful service. These men, however, being much envied by their neighbours, the Rāj-pits of Tūnār, were at length invited to a feast, at a little distance from the fortress, and killed by treachery. The fortress then fell into their hands; and eight persons of that tribe held it in succession. Several wells, pagodas, and bowers, were made by this race; the last of whom was Bikramajit. The fortress then reverted to the Moolema.

**

From this time to the reign of Ibrāhīm, grandson of the Sultan Bhalāl Lūdī, the fortress was held by Bikramajit, upon paying tribute to the kings of Dehli. Ibrāhīm, however, forced the power, not without considerable loss, out of the hands of Bikramajit, who being sent to the presence a prisoner, received the jāgīr of Shams Abād; the government of the fortress then fell into the hands of Aazam Humāyūn, Ibrāhīm's general.

Some time after this, Ibrāhīm suspecting the fidelity of his nobles, and thinking it particularly dangerous to retain Aazam Humāyūn, who had a large and powerful circle of friends, had him suddenly put to death; upon which Selim Khān, son of the murdered general, rebelled, and betook himself to the east of Hindūstān; but was taken and put to death by Daryā Khān, who had been appointed Governor of the province of Bahār.

Soon after, the Lūdī family fled to the Panj Ab, and presented themselves and their services to Zakhār Oddīn Mohammed Bāber, in Kābul; here they represented the perturbed state of Hindūstān, and formed a treaty with him, which ended in its final subjugation; for soon after a battle took place, in which Ibrāhīm was slain, with Bikramajit fighting at his side. Khāja Rahīm Dād, one of Bāber's servants, was now appointed to the government of Gwalior, but in a little time got out of favour; when a Rājpūt named Dahar Mankād, a Zemindār of that quarter, became Governor of the fortress.

Upon this occasion, the Sheikh Mohammed Ghaouth, a man of considerable influence, represented to the king the great impropriety of an infidel's holding this fortress, under a sovereign who professed the true faith; and Khāja Rahīm Dād was restored to the government; which he held but a short time, and was succeeded by 'Abul Pāth, who held it till the death of Bāber.

When Mohammed Humāyūn ascended to the throne, he took up his residence for some time in the fortresses of Gwalior; and at that time built the Humāyūn temple, a place commanding an extensive prospect, and enjoying the most wholesome air. He then returned to his capital.

When Shīr Shāh came to the throne, he took up his residence for some time at Gwalior, and then built the Shīr temple, and also constructed a large tank in its area.

After the death of Shīr Shāh, which happened at this place, his son Jalāl Khān, succeeded to the throne, and took the name of Islām Shāh. He also took up his residence in this fortress, and in it he died.

During the next reign, which was short and troublesome, the possession of the fort of Gwalior remained in the hands of Bahbaal, a slave of Shīr Shāh, who held it until Akbar came to the throne.

The Rājpūts, however, desirous of regaining their ancient ascendancy in these parts, with Rām Sāh, a son of Bikramājīt, assembled a large force and attacked the fortress. Upon this occasion, Kayā Khān, one of Akbar's generals, was despatched to relieve and take possession of it. When Kayā arrived at Gwalior, he was met by the forces of Rām Sāh, and an obstinate battle of three days' continuance ensued, but which ended in favour of Akbar's troops. After this Bahbaal remained to be subdued, and the fort to be taken, which after a short siege was completed. The servants of Akbar held the fortress after this for fifty years.

When Jahāngīr came to the throne, the government of Gwalior was put into the hands of his servants, who seem to have advised him to destroy the building termed the Sātīr Mandar, to erect another in its place, and to name it the Jahāngīr Mandar, which is said to be very beautiful.

When Shāh Jahān succeeded to the empire, the government of Gwalior fell to the lot of one of his greatest favourites and bravest generals, Muzaffir Khān, who, on this occasion, received the title of Wālī Khān Jahān; and in his hands it remained during a space of nineteen years.

This Governor was a great encourager of good and learned men, and very remarkable for his justice and liberality to all. He is said to have had an elephant so powerful and courageous, that he would destroy whole ranks of the enemy at once; which he did so effectually upon a battle happening with the house of Lūdī, that he was the principal cause of the victory, and for which the Governor obtained the title of Khān Jahān. On this and other accounts he had a statue of this elephant carved in stone, and set up at the north gate of the fort. Near the same spot he erected and peopled a village; and this he called, after his former name, Muzaffir Pūr. In the vicinity of this he planted a garden, and here he made two wells, and erected some seats for the accommodation of the inhabitants. A few trees of this garden still remain.

Besides this, he built a lofty mansion for himself, containing some large rooms of state, with other apartments: in the court of which he made a deep tank, and in the front of this court four gardens. In this mansion the Governors of the fort still reside. It is also said, that during this man's government, his son Mansūr planted a garden on the banks of the river Sūn Rūgh, which he called after his own name, and which still is used as a promenade for the town; he built two four walls of stone, in the middle of which seats were constructed. He also built and peopled the village Mansūr Pūr, which he called after his own name; and this still remains.

After the expiration of nineteen years, Khānī Jahān took a journey to Lahore, and there died. Upon this occasion Sayyad Sāīr Khān, who had been his confidential servant, asked for, and obtained the government of the fort of Gwalior. He then resided in it for two years; after this his brother governed the fort, and he himself was appointed to the government of the provinces. This brother, named Sayyad Aålám, held the fort for five years, during which time he made and beautified a garden near the Sarai of 'Meher Ali; and in the ground known by the name of Kisū Pur, he built and peopled the village Shāh Kunj. It is said, that at that time the foundations of the gates of the fort, called 'Bādal Kadda and 'Hiata Pūl, had become much decayed, and that he repaired them, covering the gates with iron, and so firmly nailing them, that the rush of an elephant would not make the least impression on them.

Soon after this, he was put out of office for some crime which had better not be mentioned (as our author tells us), and was succeeded by 'Loharhāsp Khān, son of Muhābat Khān, who appointed 'Karshāsp Khān his lieutenant; but after two years took up his residence himself in the fortress. He is said to have been a brave and liberal man, charitable to the poor, and most anxious for information, both from travellers and others. He erected a court of justice without the gate called Bādal Kaddah, and close to the northern wall of the fort, in which, on certain days, he administered justice to the people. The kettle-drum of royalty, which formerly was placed at the gate termed Haita Pūl, he removed to the east of the fort, and nearer to the city, where it still remains. He commenced the removal of the 'Shāh Kunj to the east of the fort, but left the work unfinished. He also erected a lofty state-room in the 'Arwāhi, and made two wells of exceeding good water in its court-yard. After the space of six years, however, he was sent on an expedition into the Deccan, from which he returned with success. He then presented himself before the Emperor in Dehlī, who appointed him to the government of the Sūbah of Kābul. Upon this occasion, his lieutenant at Gwalīr was a person named Akhārī, an officer in whom he placed great confidence. This happened A.H. 1067; A.D. 1656.

During the sickness of the reigning king, which happened at this time, and the troubles which arose on account of the rebellion of Dārā Shikōh and his brothers, we hear scarcely any thing of the fortress of Gwalīr; because, perhaps, it happened to lie almost entirely out of the scene of action; it remained, however, for some time in the hands of Akhārī; but as he had the imprudence to close it on one occasion against the royal standard, it was at length given to 'Obaid Allah Khān; and soon after this, several of the rebels falling into the king's power, were put into confinement in the fortress, and there kept.

In the next year, i.e. A.H. 1068, A.D. 1657, Dārā Shikōh was carried prisoner to Dehlī, and there lost his life; and upon this, his son, 'Siāhar Shikōh, with several of his friends, were all placed in the fortress of Gwalīr, in the custody of Obaid Allah Khān. The fort was now closely guarded, and no stranger permitted to enter it.
FORT OF GWALIOR.

About this time a great scarcity took place, probably in consequence of the preceding wars, when Obaid Allah Khan made a provision, for the first time, for the pious, for travellers, and the poor; this was given in the court-house built by the former Governor, where Mohammed, a Sherif and Mansabdar, presided. Soon after, several other of the rebels, namely, Mohammed Sultan, Soleimān Shikōh, and several nobles, their friends, fall into the hands of the Emperor, and were consigned to the Governor of Gwalior, who now was Muatamid Khān, Obaid Allah having been commanded to give up the fortress to him. Soleimān Shikōh, however, soon after died; and Morād Bakhsh, one of the nobles, was put to death by the law of retaliation. The graves of both are on the top of the fort.

The first two years of the government of Muatamid Khān in the fortress of Gwalior, were marked with the utmost liberality and regard to public good; particularly so, as a great scarcity prevailed during this time. He also erected a lofty hall for the transaction of public business, adjoining the Shāh Jahān Mandar, as also a bath which was a great public convenience. A wall too, which had long ago been commenced, stretching out before the gate termed Bādal Kadda, and which had been intended to obstruct a ready egress from the fort, was completed by him; to which he added another, somewhat higher than the gateway, and joining the walls of the castle. A sixth gateway, leading from the fort to the plain, was also constructed by him; and this received the name Aālamgīr. Upon both angles of the wall he likewise erected a lofty tower, and over the gates of each of these, a "Chhsterī. On the left side of the gate Bādal Kadda, a large hall of justice was also built, in which the business of state was ever after to be transacted; from all of which, the appearance and strength of the fort were greatly augmented. The inscription then written on the Aālamgīrī gate, was this:

* در زمان خاسته عالی
* معمدم خان زنطرت عالی
* باد دایم مکان نیفی آباد
* که زنیش زمانه یافت مراد

In the happy times of Aālamgīr,
From whose bounty time was blest, Muatamid Khān from his lofty mind,
Opened a door of prosperity upon the face of the fortress.
Hatīf said, on the year of its date,
"Let the place long remain the residence of plenty."

The sum of the letters, according to the Abjad, found in the last line of these verses will give the date of the Hejira in which this event took place, which is A.H. 1071, A.D. 1660.

The Mandui, looking towards the city eastward, and commenced by Muhābat Khān, was completed by this Governor, and called Awrang Kunj Abūd. He also constructed the shops which run in both directions, and in which the business of the city and markets is carried on. Over this place he constructed a high wall which joins the fort, and which received the name of "The fort, the asylum of the city." Encompassing this is the 'Nūrī Kunj Abād, also erected by him for the reception and support of the pious. He also repaired, and very much strengthened, the court of the Kachharī: and, as the inhabitants of this part were very much in want of water, he obtained leave from the court to construct three stone cisterns, with seats, gates, and whatever else was necessary to promote the convenience and pleasure of the people: all of which he completed; and the following is the inscription which was placed over one of the gates at this time.

During the reign of the great prince Aālamgir,
From whose justice the world is peopled,
Mu'tamid Khān erected a strong building,
From the water of which the sick are healed.

By wisdom, says Hātif, I sought the year of its erection:
It is a fountain of light. (i.e. the sum of the letters in the four last words, which is, A.H. 1073—A.D. 1662.)

The tank, which stood in the way to the fort, and was situated near the Bhairūn Pūl, growing old, was by the heavy rains which fell about this time utterly destroyed; and the stones of which it had been built were carried to some distance. This Governor thoroughly repaired it; and the idol-temple standing near it, which had originally belonged to Gāwālī Pā, and was now much frequented by the Hindoos, he converted into a mosque for the use of strangers and travellers. The following is the inscription which was then fixed upon it:

In the reign of the great prince Aālamgir,
Like the full shining moon, the enlightener of the world,
Praise to God, that this happy place,

* فلّه شهر بناء.
* نور کچھ آباد.
T
FORT OF GWALIOR.

Was by Mu'amid Khân completed, as an alms.
It was the idol-temple of the vile Gawâlî.
He made it a mosque like a mansion of Paradise.
The Khân of enlightened heart, nay light (itself) from head to foot, Displayed the divine light like that of mid-day.
He closed the idol-temple:
Exclamations (of surprise), rose from earth to heaven.
When the light put far away the abode of darkness,
Hâtîf said, let the light be a blessing.

N.B. The sum of the letters composing the three last words, counted according to the Abjad, (see Sir William Jones's Persian Grammar, p. 14, edit. 9), amounts to 1075, and this gives the year of the Hejira in which this took place—A.D. 1664.

He also repaired and deepened a tank in the grounds called the Khabûtar Khânâ, or Pigeon-house; and to this he gave the name of Nûrî Sâkir. Another tank, too, situated on the top of the fort, and near the Shâh Jahân Mandar, which had grown so much out of repair as to lose its water, notwithstanding its having been cut out of the solid rock, he thoroughly repaired, and enclosed with a wall firmly built with brick and mortar, so that not a drop of its water was lost. To each of these last a copy of verses was attached, giving the date of the repairs, and the name of the Khân; which I do not think it worth while to copy out and translate.

The same Governor, it is said, so adorned and planted the 6Arwâhî, which appeared like a girdle about the mount, that it presented fountains, tanks, a 5chabûterab, grapes, melons, and other fruits; such, that many of the fruits were, on account of their superi-rative excellence, frequently sent to the Presence at Dehli. The melons were occasionally so large, that some of them exceeded fourteen of the sêr of Shâh Jahân Abâd, in weight.

Besides this, a mosque was erected in the 1Chok Bâzâr, with three immensely high towers and some minarets, having also a tank of water with other fountains always filled with water, and surrounded with seats for the convenience of ablution. Before this is an area with a very high gate, on the top of which is a 8Bankla, and on both sides two beautifully constructed halls. Another tank was also made, and named after his son, 1Jamâlî Sarûr, which was surrounded by stone walls, and provided with seats.

In the year 1078 of the Hejira, A.D. 1667, an order came from the court, commanding Mu'amid Khân to give up the fort, together with the prisoners it contained, which were then three, to Khidmatgûr Khân, and to proceed to the Presence, in order to receive the government of Akbârâbâd. With this the Khân complied, and proceeded to Shâh Jahân Abâd, where he was loaded with favours, and dismissed to his station. And, as the writer of this history, Harûman Iba Kardhar Dâs, the Munshi, was a servant of Mu'amid Khân, his account of Gwalior closes with the removal of his master from that place.
CHAPTER XVI.

Ibn Batūta arrives at the Queen Mother's Palace—His Daughter's death and funeral—The Emperor's return to Dehli—Appoints Ibn Batūta Judge of Dehli—Character of the Emperor—Quarrels with the Inhabitants of Dehli, and commands them to quit the city for Daudatabād—Emir of Fargāna put to death—The Kāzī Jalāloddīn and others put to death—Cruelties of the Emperor—Arabic panegyric composed by our traveller for him—in danger of losing his life—Gives up his office, and joins the Religious.

Let us now return to the description of our arrival Dehli. When we arrived at this place, the Vizier having previously met us, we came to the door of the Sultan's haram, to the place in which his mother, "El Makhduūma Jahān* resides, the Vizier, as also the Kāzī of the place, being still with us. These paid their respects at the entrance, and we all followed their example. We also, each of us, sent his present to her, which was proportionate to his circumstances. The Queen's secretaries then registered these presents, and informed her of them. The presents were accepted, and we were ordered to be seated. Her viands were then brought in; we received the greatest respect and attention in their odd way. After this, dresses of honour were put upon us, and we were ordered to withdraw to such places as had been prepared for each of us. We made our obeisance and retired accordingly. This service is presented, by one's bowing the head, placing one of the hands on the earth, and then retiring.

When I had got to the house prepared for me, I found it furnished with every carpet, vessel, couch, and fuel, one could desire. The victuals which they brought us consisted of flour, rice, and flesh, all of which was brought from the mother of the Emperor. Every morning we paid our respects to the Vizier, who on one occasion gave me two thousand dinars, and said: This is to enable you to get your clothes washed. He also gave me a large robe of honour; and to my attendants, who amounted to about forty, he gave two thousand dinars.

* This, according to the Tabakātī Akbarī and Feriḥta, was the name of the Emperor's mother, and to her was consigned the care of the household.
After this, the Emperor's allowance was brought to us, which amounted to the weight of one thousand Dehli-Ritls of flour, where every Ritl * is

* This word, which according to the author of the Kāmoos, &c. may be pronounced either Ritl or Rātī (رئی) is constantly given by M. de Sacy Rātī (رئی) for what reason I know not. As it is important that the reader should have some idea of the value of this measure of weight, I shall here put down what the author of the Kāmoos has said about it (sub voce Rātī) and, as it is here connected with several others, I shall copy the whole of the article.

The Makkûk, of the form Tannūr, is a cup out of which one drinks; it is also a measure containing a sāa and a half, or (which is the same thing) from half a rîl to eight ounces; or, half the waibat. And the waibat contains either two and twenty or four and twenty mudds, according to the modd of the prophet (i.e. of Hegāis), or three kailajes; and the kailaj contains the maund and seven-eighths of a maund; and the maund contains two rîls, a rîl twelve ounces, and an ounce contains an istâr and two-thirds, and an istâr contains four mathkâls and a half; a mathkâl equals a dram and three-sevenths of a dram; and a dram six dâniaks; and a dânik contains two kirât (carats); and a kirât two tassûjês; and a tassûj two grains; and a grain the sixth of the eighth of a dram; which is a part of forty-eight parts of a dram. Tabularly thus:

1 Makkûk = 1 Sāa + ¼ = 1 Rîl - to 8 ozs.
= 1 Waibat
1 Waibat = 22 or 2¾ Mudds = 3 Kailajes
1 Kailaj = 1 Maund + ¼
1 Maund = 2 Rîls
1 Rîl = 12 Ounces
1 Ounce = 1 Istâr + ¼
1 Istâr = 4 Mathkâls + ¼

Mathkâl = 1 Dram + ½
1 Dram = 6 Dânîaks
1 Dânîak = 2 Kirâts
1 Kirât = 2 Tassûj
1 Tassûj = 2 Grains
1 Grain = ¼ of ½ of a Dram

The ounce, I believe, is our ounce troy, and hence the value of any other of the weights may be found. The value of weights, jewels, and metals, as used in Hindustan, are thus given.

(a) Since writing this, I find that it has been also extracted by M. de Sacy in his Chrestomathie, tom. i. p. 96, edit. 2. But, as his extract is without a translation, and otherwise incomplete, I shall retain it.
equal to five and twenty Ritls of Egypt. We also had one thousand Riti in the Tijarat Nameh: that 8 rice grains make 1 red grain, which in the Hindoo is called a Ratti: 8 of these grains make 1 Maasha; 3½ Maasas, 1 Dram; 4½ Maashas, 1 Mathkai; 6 barley corns, 1 Dang; 12 Maashas a Tula; 16 Maashas, 1 Dam; 1 Riti is equal to half a Sēr; 1 Maund to 1 Sēr. See also Shakespeare's Hindustani Dictionary under and Hamilton's India.

The following are the names and values of measures used in Hindustan, in measuring grain and other heavy substances, as given in the Tijarat Nameh.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Measure</th>
<th>Value</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sēr</td>
<td>120</td>
<td>120 pounds</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maund</td>
<td>30</td>
<td>30 pounds</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sēr</td>
<td>114</td>
<td>114 pounds</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maund</td>
<td>30</td>
<td>30 pounds</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

... i.e. a sixteenth of a sēr makes one chhatān; two chhatānks, half a pāo; three chhatānks, a pāo, minus one-fourth; four chhatānks, one pāo; two pāos will be half an athar; three pāos will be an athar, minus one-fourth; four pāos will be one sēr: five athars, one pasēr; eight pasēris, one maund, which will contain forty sēr. But the sēr every where varies, so that in Shah Jahan Abād the sēr will be equal to eighty current rupees; in Akbar Abād, eighty sicca rupees; in Farakh Abād, it will equal eighty-two sicca rupees in heavy articles; but in grain, to two and thirty takkas. In Lucknow the sēr is equal to ninety-six rupees; in Mirzapūr, to ninety-seven sicca rupees; in Benares it is equal to seventy-two rupees. In Aazim Abād the sēr equals seventy-six sicca rupees; in Mursahed Abād it equals eighty-one rupees, minus one-fourth; in Dakka eighty-one rupees, minus one-fourth; and in Calcutta, the sēr equals eighty-two sicca rupees. In the South, the sēr is, for the most part, equal to eighty sicca rupees. But in country places it is taken as a measure, not as a weight. In the North also it varies in weight, and is also used as a measure. In the country places of those parts (Farakh Abād) also the weights vary, no one having been established. According to Mr. Shakespeare, the Calcutta rupee was by an order of the English government in India, in 1793, fixed to the weight of 179½ grains (troy): but, whether our writer reckons by this standard or not, it is more than I can positively say: it is most likely that he does, as the work was written for a servant of the Company.

Mr. Robert Bartas? perhaps Patterson) in 1806. of flesh; and of fermented liquors, oil, oil-olive, and the betel-nut, many Ritsls; and also many of the betel-leaf.*

During this time, and in the absence of the Emperor, a daughter of mine happened to die, which the Vizier communicated to him. The Emperor’s distance from Dehli was that of ten stages; nevertheless, the Vizier had an answer from him on the morning of the day, on which the funeral was to take place. His orders were, that what was usually done on the death of any of the children of the nobility, should be done now. On the third day, therefore, the Vizier came with the judges and nobles, who spread a carpet and made the necessary preparations, consisting of incense, rose-water, readers of the koran, and panegyrists. When I proceeded with the funeral, I expected nothing of this; but upon seeing their company I was much gratified. The Vizier, on this occasion, occupied the station of the Emperor, defraying every expense, and distributing victuals to the poor, and others; and giving money to the readers, according to the order which he had received from the Emperor.

After this, the Emperor’s mother sent for the mother of the child, and gave her dresses and ornaments, exceeding one thousand dinars in value. She also gave her a thousand dinars in money, and dismissed her on the second day. During the absence of the Emperor, the Vizier shewed me the greatest kindness, on the part of himself, as well as on that of his master.

Soon after, the news of the Emperor’s approach was received, stating that he was within seven miles of Dehli, and ordering the Vizier to come and meet him. He went out, accordingly, accompanied by those who had arrived for the purpose of being presented; each taking his present with him. In this manner we proceeded till we arrived at the gate of the palace in which he then was. At this place the secretaries took account of the several presents, and also brought them before the Emperor. The presents were then taken away, and the travellers were presented, each according to the order in which he had been arranged. When my turn came, I went in and presented my service in the usual manner, and was very graciously received, the Emperor taking my hand, and promising me every kindness. To each of the travellers he gave a dress of honour, embroidered with gold, which had been worn by himself, and one of these he also gave to me. After this, we met without the palace, and viands were handed about for some time. On this occasion the travellers ate, the Vizier, with the great Emirs, standing over them as servants. We then retired. After this, the Emperor sent to each of us one of the horses of his own stud, adorned and caparisoned with a saddle of silver. He then placed us in his front with the Vizier, and rode on till he arrived at his palace in Dehli. On the third day after our arrival, each of the travellers presented himself at the gate of the palace; when the Emperor sent to inquire, whether there were any among us who wished to take office, either as a writer, a judge, or a magistrate; saying, that he would give such appointments. Each, of course, gave an answer suitable to his wishes. For my own part, I answered, I have no desire either for rule or writership; but the office both of judge and of magistrate, myself and my fathers have filled. These replies were carried to the Emperor, who commanded each person to be brought before him, and he then gave him such appointment as would suit him; bestowing on him, at the same time, a dress of honour, and a horse furnished with an ornamented saddle. He also gave him money, appointing likewise the amount of his salary, which was to be drawn from the treasury. He also appointed a portion of the produce of the villages, which each was to receive annually, according to his rank.

* Of this the King of Oude’s Persian Dictionary says: Warki bashad ke dr: It is a leaf which in Hindustan they call pân, and which they eat with the betel-nut and quick lime.

When I was called, I went in and did homage. The Vizier said: The Lord of the world appoints you to the office of judge in Dehli. He also gives you a dress of honour with a saddled horse, as also twelve thousand dinars for your present support. He has moreover appointed you a yearly salary of twelve thousand dinars, and a portion of lands in the villages, which will produce annually an equal sum. I then did homage according to their custom, and withdrew.

We shall now proceed to give some account of the Emperor Mohammed son of Ghiāth Oddīn Toglik: then of our entering and leaving Hindūstān.

This Emperor was one of the most bountiful and splendidly munificent men (where he took); but in other cases, one of the most impetuous and inexorable: and very seldom indeed did it happen, that pardon followed his anger. On one occasion he took offence at the inhabitants of Dehli, on account of the numbers of its inhabitants who had revolted, and the liberal support which these had received from the rest; and, to such a pitch did the quarrel rise, that the inhabitants wrote a letter consisting of several pages, in which they very much abused him: they then sealed it up, and directed it to the Real Head and Lord of the world, adding, “Let no other person read it.” They then threw it over the gate of the palace. Those who saw it, could do no other than send it to him; and he read it accordingly. The consequence was, he ordered all the inhabitants to quit the place; and, upon some delay being evinced, he made a proclamation stating, that what person soever, being an inhabitant of that city, should be found in any of its houses or streets, should receive condign punishment. Upon this they all went out.* But, his servants finding a blind man in

* We have no mention of this circumstance, either in the Tabakāt Akbārī, Ferishta, or any other history accessible to me. Dow ascribes the intention of making Deogir (afterwards called Dowlatabad) the seat of government, to the Emperor’s being pleased with its situation and strength, of which Ferishta, &c. take no notice. Ferishta, however, states that his reason was its being more central than Dehli, and farther removed from the Persians and Tartars: but of its strength nothing is said, except that the Emperor set about fortifying it as soon as he had settled himself in it. That Dehli was desolated on this occasion all attest, and from the manner in which the author of the Tabakāt Akbārī mentions the migration, there is reason to suppose that something more than the central position of Deogir was the cause. His words are these:

"And this matter (i.e. the arrangements made in the Doab) became the cause of ruin and destruction to the inhabitants. Hence agriculture was neglected; and a drought happening at the same time, a terrible famine appeared in Dehli; so that the greater part of its houses fell off (from their allegiance) and such confusion took place that the kingdom was shaken. Another of his whims was to name Deogir Dowlatabad, and as it was central, to make it the seat of empire. Hence Dehli, which was the rival of Bagdad or Damascus, he entirely ruined, commanding its inhabitants, to whom its air and water had become almost a second nature, to proceed with their families to Deogir, furnishing them with expenses for a house and for travelling out of the treasury." And again, one of the houses, and a bed-ridden one in another, the Emperor commanded the bed-ridden man to be projected from a "balista, and the blind one to be dragged by his feet to "Dawlatābād, which is at the distance of ten days, and he was so dragged; but, his limbs dropping off by the way, only one of his legs was brought to the place intended, and was then thrown into it: for the order had been, that they should go to this place. When I entered Dehli it was almost a desert. Its buildings were very few; in other respects it was quite empty, its houses having been forsaken by its inhabitants. The King, however, had given orders, that any one who wished to leave his own city, may come and reside there. The consequence was, the greatest city in the world had the fewest inhabitants.

Upon a certain occasion, too, the principal of the preachers, who was then keeper of the jewellery, happened to be outwitted by some of the infidel Hindoos, who came by night and stole some jewels. For this he beat the man to death with his own hand.

* The same is said both by Ferishta and the author of the Tabakāti Akbari. See Dow, p. 338.
Upon another occasion, one of the Emīrs of ʿFargāna came to pay him a temporary visit. The Emperor received him very kindly, and bestowed on him some rich presents. After this the Emīr had a wish to return, but was afraid the Emperor would not allow him to do so; he began, therefore, to think of flight. Upon this a whisperer gave intimation of his design, and the Emīr was put to death: the whole of his wealth was then given to the informers. For this is their custom, that when any one gives private intimation of the designs of another, and his information turns out to be true, the person so informed of is put to death, and his property is given to the informer.

There was at that time, in the city of ʿKambāya,* on the shores of India, a Sheikh of considerable power and note, named the Sheikh Ali Haidari,† to whom the merchants and seafaring men made many votive offerings. This Sheikh was in the habit of making manypredictions for them.* But when the Kāzī Jalāl Oddīn Afgānī rebelled against the Emperor, it was told him that the Sheikh Haidari had sent for this Kāzī Jalāl Oddīn, and given him the cap off his own head. Upon this the Emperor set out for the purpose of making war upon the Kāzī Jalāl Oddīn, whom he put to flight. He then returned to his palace, leaving behind him an Emīr, who should make inquiry respecting others who had joined the Kāzī: the inquiry accordingly went on, and those who had done so were put to death. The Sheikh was then brought forward; and when it was proved that he had given his cap to the Kāzī, he was also slain. The Sheikh Hād, son of the Sheikh Bahā Oddīn Zakaryā, was also put to death, on account of some spite which he would wreak upon him. This was one of the greatest Sheikhs. His crime was, that his uncle's son had rebelled against the Emperor, when he was acting as governor in one of the provinces of India. So war was made upon him, and being overcome, his flesh was roasted with some rice, and thrown to the elephants to be devoured: but they refused to touch it.‡

Upon a certain day, when I myself was present, some men were brought

---

* The Cambay of Rennell.  † One of the Haidaree sect, already noticed.
‡ None of the matter given here is to be found in Ferishta, or any other historian to whom I have access.
out who had been accused of having attempted the life of the Vizier. They were ordered, accordingly, to be thrown to the elephants, which had been taught to cut their victims to pieces. Their hoofs were cased with sharp iron instruments, and the extremities of these were like knives. On such occasions the elephant-driver rode upon them: and, when a man was thrown to them, they would wrap the trunk about him and toss him up, then take him with the teeth and throw him between their fore feet upon the breast, and do just as the driver should bid them, and according to the orders of the Emperor. If the order was to cut him to pieces, the elephant would do so with his irons, and then throw the pieces among the assembled multitude: but if the order was to leave him, he would be left lying before the Emperor, until the skin should be taken off, and stuffed with hay, and the flesh given to the dogs.*

On one occasion one of the Emirs, viz. the Ain El Mulk, who had the charge of the elephants and beasts of burden, revolted, and took away the greater part of these beasts and went over the Ganges, at the time the Emperor was on his march towards the Maabar districts, against the Emir Jalāl Oddin. Upon this occasion the people of the country proclaimed the runaway emperor: but an insurrection arising, the matter soon came to an end.†

Another of his Emirs, namely 'Halājūn, also revolted, and sallied out of Dehli with a large army. The Viceroy in the district of "Telingāna also rebelled, and made an effort to obtain the kingdom; and very nearly succeeded, on account of the great number who were then in rebellion, and the weakness of the army of the Emperor; for a pestilence had carried off

---

* Fehishta tells us, on one occasion, of a man having been slain alive, which is mentioned in Dow: but as Fehishta, the Tabakāt Akbari, and perhaps all the rest of the historians of Hindustan, generally follow the accounts of Zia El Barni (ذیا البارنی), who wrote for Firoz Shah, son of this Emperor, it is probable that he did not record half the cruelties of this man.—Knox tells us that the kings of Ceylon also use elephants as executioners, and that on these occasions, "they have sharp iron with a socket with three edges, which they put on their teeth at such times." Ceylon, p. 44.

† An account of this insurrection will be found in Dow, vol. i. pp. 327-8. This happened about A.H. 746.

U 2
the greater part. From his extreme good fortune, however, he got the victory, collected his scattered troops, and subdued the rebellious Emīrs, killing some, torturing others, and pardoning the rest. He then returned to his residence, repaired his affairs, strengthened his empire, and took vengeance on his enemies.—But let me now return to the account of my own affairs with him.

When he had appointed me to the office of Judge of Dehli, had made the necessary arrangements, and given me the presents already mentioned, the horses prepared for me, and for the other Emīrs who were about his person, were sent to each of us, who severally kissed the hoof of the horse of him who brought them, and then led our own to the gate of the palace; we then entered, and each put on a dress of honour; after which we came out, mounted, and returned to our houses.

The Emperor said to me, on this occasion, Do not suppose that our office of Judge of Dehli will cost you little trouble: on the contrary, it will require the greatest attention. I understood what he said, but did not return him a good answer. He understood the Arabic, and was not pleased with my reply. I am, said I, of the sect of Ibn Mālik, but the people of Dehli follow Hanafi;* besides, I am ignorant of their language. He replied, I have appointed two learned men your deputies, who will advise with you. It will be your business to sign the legal instruments:† He then added: If what I have appointed prove not an income sufficient to meet your numerous expenses, I have likewise given you a cell, the bequests appropriated to which you may expend, taking this in addition to what is already appointed. I thanked him for this, and returned to my house.

A few days after this he made me a present of twelve thousand dinars. In a short time, however, I found myself involved in great debts, amounting to about fifty-five thousand dinars, according to the computation of India, which with them amounts to five thousand five hundred ַtankas;* but which, according to the computation of the west, will amount to thirteen thousand dinars. The reason of this debt was, the great expenses incurred in waiting on the Emperor, during his journeys to repress the revolt of the Ain El Mulk (p. 147). About this time, I composed a panegyric in praise of the Emperor, which I wrote in Arabic, and read to him. He translated it for himself,† and was wonderfully pleased with it: for the Indians are fond of Arabic poetry, and are very desirous of (being memorialized in) it. I then informed him of the debt I had incurred; which he ordered to be discharged from his own treasury, and said: Take care, in future, not to exceed the extent of your income. May God reward him.

* Two of the celebrated leaders who are at the head of the four larger sects of the Mohammedians. They differ from one another, however, only in some legal points.

† On the office and requirements of such persons, see the Chrestom. Arabe of M. de Sacy, tom. i. pp. 38-41, edit 2. These officers, which are there called Justice, are styled by Abul Fazl مير عدل officers of justice.

Some time after the Emperor’s return from the Maabar districts, and his ordering my residence in Dehli, his mind happened to change respecting a Sheikh in whom he had placed great confidence, and even visited, and who then resided in a cave without the city. He took him accordingly and imprisoned him, and then interrogated his children as to who had resorted to him. They named the persons who had done so, and myself among the rest; for it happened that I had visited him in the cave. I was consequently ordered to attend at the gate of the palace, and a council to sit within. I attended in this way for four days, and few were those who did so, who escaped death. I betook myself, however, to continued fasting, and tasted nothing but water. On the first day I repeated the sentence,

* On the value of the dinar, direm, &c. of Arabia, see the notes to Professor Carlyle’s Maured Allatafet, p. 3. The king of Oude’s Persian Dictionary tells us, that the tanka (or rather tangah) is a certain quantity of gold or money, according to the technical usage of any place; and that they call two fulūs a tangah: his words are, ַtanka مقداری از زربول باشد بامطاله هرچنی ویژن فلسرا تنگ که کوید. Mr. Shakespear says in his Hindūstāni Dictionary تنگا (see ַtankā) (two paisas.

† According to Ferishta this Emperor either had, or was proud to be thought to have, considerable pretensions to learning in the Arabic and Persian. His words are: ودر تقریب نصیح وکلم شیرین : سرب این بل ودین ورسات عربی وفارسی بر دیوه جیا نوشته ک دیبران ونیشان در آن حیران مانندی. For the encouragement of polite literature he was quite proverbial. His Arabic and Persian letters were so elegant, that the regular scribes and mūnahis were all astonished.
"God is our support, and the most excellent patron," three and thirty thousand times; and after the fourth day, by God's goodness was I delivered; but the Sheikh, and all those who had visited him, except myself, were put to death.

Upon this I gave up the office of Judge, and bidding farewell to the world, attached myself to the holy and pious Sheikh, the saint and phœnix of his age, Kamal Oddin Abd Ullah El Gazi, who had wrought many open miracles. All I had I gave to the Fakeers; and, putting on the tunic of one of them, I attached myself to this Sheikh for five months, until I had kept a fast of five continued days; I then breakfasted on a little rice.

* El Koran, Surat III.

† As the mystical nonsense to which the religious of the East pay so much regard is but little known, and, perhaps, less understood in this country, I have thought it might not be unacceptable here to give some account of it, which I shall do, from a work of great authority by the very celebrated poet Jami, viz. the Nafahat El Ins. The mysticism which is termed by them Sūfism, is treated just like any science. It has its various ranks and degrees, and when one has gone through them all, he is supposed to have become an integral part of the Deity, which they hold, indeed, that he always was; but that now he is not only assured of this, but is endowed with powers sufficient to give proof of it. They generally set out with fasting, mortifications, and silence, just as the ancient Pythagoreans did, which seems to be the state in which our traveller had placed himself; and in these they persevere till they have fully persuaded themselves, that heaven and earth are entirely at their command. According to Jami, then, the degrees of this science (or unity) are four, viz.

أول توحيد إباني دوم توحيد علمي سيم خير

توحيد حالي جهارم توحيد اليف. انا توحيد إباني آنسه كله بغرد وصف الهيئت و تحف

استحقاق معيديه حتى سجعان وتعالي اربضا إشاعات اprzedsiا واصحاب تقدين. كنل ونائز دهد

برزان ومان توحيد نانتهاء تصديق. تخبر إعفاضة مدن خبر اباشد ومستفاه بيد نجاز

حلل الرأي فرعي جالي وأخضراء درسلت إسلام ناده دهد ومعصنه بحكم ضروبت إبان با عموم مواس.

* The first is a oneness of faith; the second, of assurance; the third, a oneness of circumstance; and the fourth, the oneness of the Almighty. The oneness of faith is that, by which the servant of God believes in his heart, and confesses with his tongue, the unity of the divine character of God, and the sole right which he possesses to divine worship, as derived from the intimations of holy writ. This ascription of the divine oneness is the medium whereby belief is placed in the revealer, and faith in the thing revealed, which derives its proof from (the next stage, or) open assurance. The embracing of this, therefore, effectually liberates the believer from manifest idolatry, and hastens his introduction to the true religion. The candidate, however, for Sufism is necessarily situated as CHAPTER XVII.

After this, the Emperor sending for me, I went to him in my tunic, and he received me more graciously than ever. He said, It is my wish to others are in holding the (divine) unity; it is in other respects that he is particular, and stands alone. As to the next degree, it is said: "Atma Tühid mein ansteht, das äussere An und das In is. Atma Tühid mein ansteht, das äussere An und das In is."

The third stage is thus described: "Atma Tühid mein ansteht, das äussere An und das In is. Atma Tühid mein ansteht, das äussere An und das In is."
send you as ambassador to the Emperor of China, for I know you love travelling in various countries. I consented; and he sent dresses of honour, horses, money, &c., with every thing necessary for the journey.

is to be enclosed and concealed in the light acquired by this his state, just as the light of the stars is lost in the light of the sun: verse,

When the bright morn renews its fires,
Every twinkling star expires.

And, at this stage, the essence of the person thus united, witnessing the essential beauty of the only one, becomes so overwhelmed in the very all in all, that nothing but his being and attributes meet his perception, or call forth his testimony, (and this) to such a degree, that he considers this oneness as an attribute of the only one, and not of self. This very perception too he believes to be one of his attributes: and his existence, thus given up to the agitations of the waves of the sea of unity, falls away, and becomes overwhelmed in the all in all.

The last stage is thus described.

The following extract will shew what powers and privileges those are supposed to possess, who arrive at the state of saintship here mentioned.

التل في إصان أرياواب الولاة قدس الله تعالى

سواهم في كتاب كشف اللوموب خدارند سجعانه وتعالي برهان نورنيرا بأي كرذانيه است وولياء

سبيت الاعمال أر ابراهيم تابوت آيات حق ووجبه مفدى صند سلي الله عليه وسلم ظاهر ميام

وشر ايشا وأماين عذ كرذانيه تأ جبر مرخمت ور باكته ان روا ميام شفرا لد نشته

از آمان بارن بيركات الأمام ايشابآيد وارزومي نبات بدم أحوال ايشاب رويد بركات

سلمانان تبرعهم ايشاب بايند ايشاب دلأ دلأ كم كه كوكشنان اند ورد ميام خرافانة تحاسب

رجال حال خير نذانعان واندركل أحوال از خير وخلق مستور باخشاد واخير بايند وارد است

وخيص اريا بدور خاذير (ناظر) ورود خذان اندرخين معي سخند الله غل خيان كشست واما دانه اهل

حلف وتركت ان ورشنكان درکا حلا الحنيد سيدن ان كه مرجا ايشابا اخبار خواناند وجز بيرغر دلأ دلأ كه ايشابا ارش خواناند ورج بيرغر دلأ دلأ كه ايشابا ارش خواناند ورج

دكر ان كه ايشابا نبا خواناند كي كه وبراقطب وشآ خواناند... ماحب كاب فهرحت مك

رضي الله عنه في فلس مي وليم ار باب مد ورود وهمان ار كاب رجل هنكاتم ار ابلد

كفتا اكست ودر آلتا ذكركده كه حق سجعانه وتعالي مسيروا هند ألب كرذانيه وهمت تي ار

بندكن خون بركزبة وايشابا ابلا نام نهاد وروجر رناتيري كي ار ار دفوت تي ناك
The Emperor of China had, at this time, sent presents to the Sultan, consisting of a hundred Mamluks, fifty slave girls, five hundred dresses of El Kamanjah, five hundred maunds of musk, five dresses wrought with jewels, five quivers wrought with 'gold, and five swords set with jewels. His request with the Emperor was, that he should be permitted to rebuild an می دارد ولنته است که من در حرم مکه باشما جمع هندم وبراین سالم کفم وایشان برمن

سالم کفم وما باشمن سخی کفم فما رایب فيما رایب احس اسنا سهام را فما برن کفم بالله

"On the different classes of the Avesta or Saints. The Lord who is the object of worship has, in the revelation, made the proof of Mohammed's mission permanent; and to shew this have the saints been constituted, and that this proof should be constantly apparent. These he has in the Scripture appointed to be Lords of the World, so that they are set apart entirely for his service, and for following up the requirements of the soul. It is to bless their tracks that the rains of heaven descend, and to purify their state that the herbs of the earth spring up; and it is from their care, that the Moslems obtain victory over idolaters. Now these, which are invisible, are four thousand; of each other they know nothing, nor are they aware of the dignity of their own state. In every case, too, they are concealed from one another and from mortals. To this effect have relations been given, and to the same have various saints spoken; and for this, to the praise of God, have sages instructed. But of those who have this power of loosing and binding, and are officers of the court of the true God, there are three hundred whom they style Afinar.

Fifty others of them they call Abdal, seven others Ahbar, four others Awtad, three others Nokara, and one whom they name Koth and Ghauth.... The author of the Fatihati Mecca, chap. 198, sect. 31, calls the seven-stated men Abdal, and goes on to shew, that the Almighty has made the earth consisting of seven climates, and that seven of his choice servants he has named Abdal; and, further, that he takes care of these climates by one or other of these seven persons. He has also stated, that he met them all in the temple at Mecca; that he saluted them, and they returned the salute; and conversed with them, and that he never witnessed any thing more excellent or more devoted to God's service." From what has here been said, I think there cannot remain the least doubt, that the mysteries of Sufism are those of Heathenism. These matured saints agree so perfectly with the Daimones (Δαίμονες) of the Greeks, the Buddhists, the inferior deities of the Hindoos, the angels of the ancient Persians and Chaldeans, and the Powers (Δαιμονες, &c.) of the ancient heretics, that it is scarcely possible, they can have any other than a common origin. The same, perhaps, may be said of the Druzes on Mount Libanus, who worship one of the Sultans of Egypt as their favourite Avatar. And generally, it is impossible to read the works of Ireneus and Epiphanius on the heresies, with the accounts given of Sufism by the Arabs and Persians, without being convinced that Gnosticism and Sufism present one and the same thing, a mere continuation of the idolatry of Chaldee and Egypt, wrapped up just as that was, in the scarcely intelligible jargon of a wretched philosophy; and I may perhaps here remark, that wherever a similar mysticism presents itself, we are to look for its origin in the same source.
idol-temple in the country about the mountain of Ḍurā, on which infidel Hindoos resided, on the top of which and on the heights was a plain of three months' journey, and to which there was no approach. Here, too, resided many infidel Hindoo kings. The extremities of these parts extend to the confines of Thibet, where the musk gazelles are found. There are also mines of gold on these mountains, and poisonous grass growing, such, that when the rains fall upon it, and run in torrents to the neighbouring rivers, no one dares in consequence drink of the water during the time of their rising: and should any one do so, he dies immediately. This idol-temple they usually called the Ḍūr Khānā. It stood at the foot of the mountain, and was destroyed by the Mussulmāns, when they became masters of these parts. Nor were the inhabitants of the mountain in a condition to fight the Mohammedans upon the plain. But the plain was necessary to them for the purposes of agriculture; they had, therefore, requested the Emperor of China to send presents to the King of India, and to ask this favour for them. Besides, to this temple the people of China also made pilgrimages. It was situated in a place called Ṣamhal. The reply of the Emperor was, that this could not be permitted among a people who were Mohammedans; nor could there exist any church whatsoever, in countries subject to them, except only where tribute was paid; but if they chose to do this, their request would be complied with: for the place in which this idol-temple was situated had been conquered, and had, in consequence, become a district of the Mohammedans. The Emperor also sent presents much more valuable than those he had received, which were these following, namely: one hundred horses of the best breed saddled and bridled; one hundred Mamlūks; one hundred Hindoo singing slave-girls; one hundred Ḍairāmī dresses, the value of each of which was a hundred dinars; one hundred silken dresses; five hundred saffron coloured dresses; one hundred pieces of the best cotton cloth; one thousand dresses of the various clothing of India; with numerous instruments of gold and * according to Meninski, is a species of silk; and in the King of Oude's Persian Dictionary it is said to be a sort of thread-cloth like the Methkāli of Irak, but finer and softer than it. I find no mention whatever of this kind of cloth among those given in the A-ni Akbar.

---

silver, swords and quivers set with jewels, and ten robes of honour wrought with gold, of the Sultan's own dresses, with various other articles.

The Emperor appointed the Emir 'Zahir Oddin El Zanjānī one of the Ulemā, with 'El Fati Kāfūr, with whom the present was entrusted, to accompany me. These were favourite officers with the Emperor. He also sent with us a thousand cavalry; who were to conduct us to the place at which we were to take shipping. The servants of the Emperor of China, who amounted to about one hundred, and with whom there was a great Emir, also returned with us. So we left the presence of the Emperor on the 17th day of the month Safar, in the year seven hundred and forty-three (A.D. 1342), and, after a few days, arrived at the city of 'Biāna, which is large. We next arrived at 'Kūl,† which is a beautiful city, the greatest part of the trees of which are vines. When we had arrived here, we were informed that the inful Hindoos had besieged the city 'El Jalāli, which is seven days from Kūl. The intention of these infulds was, to destroy the inhabitants; and this they nearly effected. We made such a vigorous attack upon them, however, that not one of them was left alive. But many of our companions suffered martyrdom in the onset, and among them was El Fati Kāfūr, the person to whom the presents had been confided. We immediately transmitted an account of this affair to the Emperor, and waited for his answer. During this interval, whenever any of the inful Hindoos made an attack on the places in the neighbourhood of El Jalāli, either all or a part of us, gave assistance to the Moslems. Upon a certain day, however, I turned into a garden just without the city of Kūl, when the heat of the sun was excessive: and while we were in the garden, some one cried out, that the Hindoos were making an attack upon one of the villages: I accordingly rode off with some of my companions to their assistance. When the infidels saw this they fled; but the Moslems were so scattered in pursuing them, that myself and only five others were left. Some of their people saw this, and the consequence was, a considerable number of cavalry made an attack.

* The Biāna of Rennell.
† No trace of this place is to be found in any of the maps, although frequently occurring in books written in Hindustan. According to the A-ini Akbari it is a sircār, and has a citadel built of brick.
upon us. When we perceived their strength we retreated, while they pursued us, and in this we persevered. I observed three of them coming after me, when I was left quite alone. It happened at the same time that the fore-feet of my horse had stuck fast between two stones, so that I was obliged to dismount and set him at liberty. I was now in a way that led into a valley between two hills, and here I lost sight of the infidels. I was so circumstanced, however, that I knew neither the country, nor the roads. I then set my horse at liberty to go where he would.

While I was in a valley closely interwoven with trees, behold! a party of cavalry, about forty in number, rushed upon me and took me prisoner, before I was well aware of their being there. I was much afraid they would shoot me with their arrows. I alighted from my horse, therefore, and gave myself up as their prisoner. They then stripped me of all I had, bound me, and took me with them for two days, intending to kill me. Of their language I was quite ignorant: but God delivered me from them; for they left me, and I took my course I knew not whither. I was much afraid they would take it into their heads to kill me; I therefore hid myself in a forest thickly interwoven with trees and thorns, so much so, that a person wishing to hide himself could not be discovered. Whenever I ventured upon the roads, I found they always led, either to one of the villages of the infidels, or to some ruined village. I was always, therefore, under the necessity of returning; and thus I passed seven whole days, during which I experienced the greatest horrors. My food was the fruit and leaves of the mountain trees. At the end of the seventh day, however, I got sight of a black man; who had with him a "walking-staff" shod with iron, and a small water vessel. He saluted me, and I returned the salute. He then said, What is your name? I answered, Mohammed. I then asked him his name: he replied, "El Kalb El Karîh (i.e. the wounded heart)." He then gave me some water, which he had with him, and some water to drink. He asked me whether I would accompany him. I did so; but I soon found myself unable to move, and I sunk on the earth. He then carried me on his shoulders; and as he walked on with me, I fell asleep. I awoke, however, about the time of dawn, and found myself at the Emperor's palace-gate. A courier had already brought the news of what had happened, and of my loss, to the Emperor, who now asked me of all the particulars, and these I told him. He then gave me ten thousand dinars, and furnished me for my return. He also appointed one of his Emirs "El Malik Sumbul* to present the gift. So we returned to the city of Kül. From this we proceeded to the city of 'Yūḥ Būrah; and then descended to the shores of a lake, called "the water of life." After this we proceeded to Kinoj, which is but a small town. Here I met the aged Sheikh Sālīḥ of Fargānāh. He was at this time sick. He told me, that he was then one hundred and fifty years old. I was informed that he would constantly fast, and that for many successive days.

We next arrived at the city of 'Merwa, which is a large place, inhabited for the most part by infidels, who pay tribute to the Emperor. We next arrived at the city of 'Kālyūr,† which is large, and which has a fortress on the top of a high mountain. In this the Emperor imprisons those of whom he entertains any fear. We next arrived at the city of 'Barūn, which is small, and inhabited by Moslems: it is situated in the midst of the infidel districts. In these parts are many wild beasts, which enter the town and tear the inhabitants. I was told, however, that such as enter the streets of the town are not wild beasts really, but only some of the magicians called "Jogees, who can assume the shape of wild beasts, and appear as such to the mind. These are a people who can work miracles, of which one is, that any one of them can keep an entire fast for several months.‡

* This is probably a name of office. In the beginning of the reign of Shahāb Oskān Khilījī, as given by Ferishta, speaking of the promotions, it is said: وز أول ملك في دار بار بكي دان بار بكي دان

† Gwalior of Rennell, of which some account has already been given.

‡ We are often told of the wonders done by the Jogeas in the popular tales of Hindūstan, of which some specimens may be seen in the tales published in the Nāgari character by Mr. Professor Shakoosper (in his Manuskabātī Hind). The author of the Dabstān gives, perhaps,
Many of them will dig houses for themselves under ground, over which any one may build, leaving them only a place for the air to pass through.
In this the Jogeel will reside for months without eating or drinking any thing. I heard, that one of them remained thus for a whole year. I saw twelve Pantas, as follows, &c., and Pant signifies a class or tribe. According to their persuasion, the authors of every religion, sect, and belief, whether prophets or saints, were disciples of Kürkhanat; and that whatever these persons might have known, they must have known from him. It is also their belief, that Mohammed was brought up by a disciple of Kürkhanat. Many of them will, when with the Mohammedans, attend to prayer and fasting, which they also do with the Hindoos. None of the things forbidden for food, are considered so among them; for they will eat swine's flesh after the manner of the Hindoos and Christians, as well as beef, as the Mohammedans and others do. They will also kill and eat a man ...... and will drink wine like the Guebres. There are too among them, those who will mix their urine and dung together, which they will then pass through a cloth and drink. The person who does this, they say, will be able to perform great feats, and to know wonderful things. Such persons they term Anil. In the belief of this people, although they hold all to be derived from Kürkhanat, and that those of every religion may finally be united with Kürk, still they proceed in the path of one of those persons, who have been united by one or other of the twelve links of Jogeism. In their belief it is considered of great importance to be able to hold the breath; just as it is among the Parsees of Adhar Hoosenk: for the kings among them would constantly hold their breath ...... When one draws (his breath), he will picture the moon towards the left, i.e. he will consider the moon's disk as visible on his left side, and that of the sun on his right. Some of the Sanâi in each of the seven stages, will thus picture one or other of the planets, which, with the Hindoos, exceeds every other species of worship or alma; for they say, that he who does this will be able to fly, never to be sick, to free himself from death, and never to be subject to either hunger, or thirst...... Those who have been thoroughly initiated, say, that when this work is perfectly performed, the fear of death is no more felt; and that as long as such an one is in the body, he will be able to put it off, and again to put it on, never to be sick, and to have power to do all things...... Among the Jogeel, it is constant, that when disease runs high, they bury themselves alive. It is also one of their practices, to open the eyes, and fix them in a direction between the eyebrows, until they see a figure. If the image appear without a hand or foot, or any other member, for each one of these they lay it down, that he has now a sign how many years, months, or days, he shall live. But if it appear without a head, they have no doubt, that little of life remains: and on the strength of this, they will bury themselves alive; &c.—These Jogeel will, according to some, commit themselves occasionally to the flames, for no other end, perhaps, than to gratify the strongest of all passions, vanity. The following statement is taken from the Heft Besch (ヘフテアンリーム), a very interesting collection of geographical and biographical notices in the Persic. This extract is taken from the notice of Hindustan, and is there given on the authority of one Mohammed Yüsuf of Herat.

too, in the city of \(^b\)Sanjarūr, one of the Moslems who had been taught by them, and who had set up for himself a lofty cell like an obelisk. Upon the top of this he stood for five and twenty days, during which time he neither ate nor drank. In this situation I left him, nor do I know how long he continued there after I had left the place. People say, that they mix certain seeds, one of which is destined for a certain number of days or months, and that they stand in need of no other support during all this time. They also foretell events.

The Emperor of Hindūstān very much respects them, and occasionally sits in their company. Some of them will eat nothing but herbs: and it is clear from their circumstances, that they accustom themselves to abstinence, and feel no desire either for the world or its show. Some of them will kill a man with a look: but this is most frequently done by the women. The woman who can do so is termed a \(^c\)Gofṭār. It happened when I was Judge of Dehli, and the Emperor was upon one of his journies, that a famine took place.* On this occasion, the Emperor ordered, that

---

\(^5\)Statement.

\(^6\)Pers. speech, perhaps.

کوف نا در برگول ترک بر برای راهج آمد و رازم تعظیم ولوازم تسلیم چا آورد و راهج وار
لب از تکلم بسته و رزک مسلم حتم بریست پا داشته به ایسناد و بارشان و بالمان راهج فضللا
کوسکند و کاو نرم مامت .... بدیع بارکه کسکند تا آن تا از همه طرف دست به دارن و هنگامه
کرم کریم در ونی که شمع وار آئش تا کلیب آن ویسته ریده جداب راهج توجه چند و حرف چند برزیان رادند ، &c. "I was (says he) in one of the purgannas of India, when I heard that a Jogee had appeared, and wished to burn himself in the presence of one of the Rājas of that district. The Raja employed three days in banqueting and pleasure (upon this occasion). On the morning of the fourth, when the sun of the Jogee had arisen, having left the regions of the west, and risen in power over the carpet of the dust, a great company of the professors of Islamism, as well as of the followers of idolatry, came together, when the afore-mentioned Jogee escaping from the instability of being, clung to the annihilation which is incorruptible. Having the eclipse of annihilation on his breast, and the cap of retirement upon his head, he came up to the Raja; and having paid his respects with lips closed like the rose-bud, and with eyes on his feet like the narcissus, he stood still; and then, by his signal, the Raja’s servants collecting sheep and cow’s dung set it on fire, until the flames arose from every part. When he grew warm, and the fire, like the flame of a taper, approached his neck, he turned towards the Raja and uttered something."—A similar account of men burning themselves is given in the Commentary of Abu Zaid El Hasan, in the two Arabian Travellers,

* Perhaps the famine noticed by Dow, vol. i. pp. 322-3.
the poor should be divided among the nobles for support, until the famine should cease. My portion, as affixed by the Vizier, amounted to five hundred. These I sustained in a house which I built for the purpose. On a certain day, during this time, a number of them came to me, bringing a woman with them, who, as they said, was a Gofīr, and had killed a child, which happened to be near her. I sent her, however, to the Vizier, who ordered four large water vessels to be filled with water, and tied to her. She was then thrown into the great river (the Jumna). She did not sink in the water, but remained "unhurt: so they knew that she was a Gofīr. The Vizier then ordered her to be burnt, which was done; and the people distributed her ashes among themselves, believing that if any one would fumigate himself with them, he would be secure from the fascinations of a Gofīr for that year. But if she had sunk, they would have taken her out of the water: for then they would have known that she was not a Gofīr.

I was once in the presence of the Emperor of Hindūstān, when two of these Jogees, wrapt up in cloaks, with their heads covered (for they take out all their hairs, both of their heads and arm-pits, with powder), came in.

* Fumigations for the purpose of driving away, or otherwise invalidating the power of evil spirits, seem to have been used in very ancient times, and hence, perhaps, Tobit's use of the fish. See Tobit, vi. 8, 18; and the use of perfumes, &c., as alluded to by Pliny, for performing cures. Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. 34 cap. xi.

‡ That some of our own supposed witches have been treated very nearly in the same manner, is too well known to need proof. There has generally been a story current in Europe, too, that Mohammed's coffin was suspended in a temple at Medina, by a leadstone placed in the roof for that purpose. It is curious enough to remark, that they have a similar story in the East relating to St. Peter. It is thus told by El Harawi: Sمعون الصفا في مدينة رومية الكبرى في كنيسة:...警旨 the rock... من الفصة معلقة بسلسل في سقف البسект والله اعلم. “SimonCephas(therock) is in the city of great Rome, in its largest church, within an ark of silver which is suspended by chains to the roof. But God knows best.” The following account of "the man in the moon," I had from the mouth of a New Zealander: “A man named Celano once happened to be thirsty, and coming near a well by moonlight he intended to drink, but a cloud coming over the moon prevented him. He then cursed the moon, because it refused to give him its light; but upon this the moon came down and took him up forcibly, together with a tree on which he had laid hold; and there he is now seen, continued the Zealander, with the tree, just as he was taken up! I would merely remark, that it is by no means surprising that vulgar credulity should be much the same all the world over; but, that it should arrive at almost precisely the same results, is curious enough.
The Emperor caressed them and said, pointing to me, This is a stranger, shew him what he has never yet seen. They said, we will. One of them then assumed the form of a cube and arose from the earth, and in this cubic shape he occupied a place in the air over our heads. I was so much astonished and terrified at this, that I fainted and fell to the earth. The Emperor then ordered me some medicine which he had with him, and upon taking this I recovered and sat up: this cubic figure still remaining in the air just as it had been. His companion then took a sandal belonging to one of those who had come out with him, and struck it upon the ground, as if he had been angry. The sandal then ascended, until it became opposite in situation with the cube. It then struck it upon the neck, and the cube descended gradually to the earth, and at last rested in the place which it had left. The Emperor then told me, that the man who took the form of a cube was a disciple to the owner of the sandal: and, continued he, had I not entertained fears for the safety of thy intellect, I should have ordered them to show thee greater things than these. From this, however, I took a palpitation at the heart, until the Emperor ordered me a medicine which restored me.

We then proceeded from the city of Barūn to the stage of 'Kajwarā,' at which there is a lake about a mile in length; and round this are temples, in which there are idols. At this place resides a tribe of Jogees, with long and clotted hair. Their colour inclines to yellow, which arises from their fasting. Many of the Moslems of these parts attend on them, and learn (magic) from them.

We next came to the city of Genderi,† which is large; after this to that of Tahār, between which and Dehli is a distance of twenty-four days; and from which leaves of the betel-nut are carried to Dehli. From this place we went to the city of 'Ajbal, then to Dawlatābād, which is a place of great splendour, and not inferior to Dehli. The lieutenancy of Dawlatābād extends through a distance of three months. Its citadel is called

---

* The Kitchwara of Rennell is a province, and seems to be too far to the south-west to be the place here intended. Gajara, or Kurerra, seems more immediately in the route of our traveller.

† Perhaps the Chanderey of Rennell, and of the Tabakāti Akbārī.
'El Dawigir. It is one of the greatest and strongest forts (in India). It is situated on the top of a rock which stands in the plain. The extremities are depressed, so that the rock appears elevated like a mile-stone, and upon this the fort is built. In it is a ladder made of hides; and this is taken up by night, and let down by day. In this fortress the Emperor imprisons such persons as have been guilty of serious crimes. The Emir of Dawlatábád had been tutor to the Emperor. He is the great Emír Katlúkhán.† In this city are vines and pomegranates which bear fruit twice in the year. It is, moreover, one of the greatest districts as to revenue. Its yearly taxes and fines amount to seventeen karórs. A karór is one hundred lak; and a lak one hundred thousand Indian dinars. This was collected by a man (appointed to do so) before the government of Katlúkhán; but, as he had been killed, on account of the treasure which

* This citadel is mentioned by Dow, vol. i. p. 520. The word here used is, no doubt, the Deogir of the Persian historians, the author of the Tabakátí Akbarí, Feraísha, &c. An extract from the history of this fortress (Gwalior) has already been given.

† This person is named in the Tabakátí Akbarí, which last is read by Dow "Cuttihich Chan" (vol. i. p. 313) Feraísha says on this subject قتلح خان which پیش اور محصص وبعث کتاب فارسی خواندہ بود وخط از آموخته بود وکلدری ارزانی فروه Cuttihich Khan (adopting the orthography of Dow), who had read the Korán and some Persian books to him, and from whom he had learned to write, he appointed to the office of deputy Visier. It is curious enough, however, that Feraísha gives the name of a tank called after him قتلح, where he tells us, that the last letter has been changed to j. His words are کتالح که در حین عصر محصص قلمونی شریعت است تبدیل الحس (النحو)، تبدیل اول. We are not quite certain, therefore, whether as given by Ibn Batíta, is not the correct mode of writing this name, as it is not so likely that the name given to a place would change in the mouths of the inhabitants, as that the scribes should vary in their mode of writing out the copies of Feraísha, &c. in Hindústán. It seems certain, however, that this word did in Feraísha's time end in خ, otherwise, he could not have said, that بیش had been changed into خ; but even this change might have been made before his time, and the true pronunciation of the word have been retained in the name of the place, as given above. As no good explanation of the term کتالح is given in the common dictionaries, I shall here give one from the King of Oude's. After giving the vowels it is said, رنه کتالح کتالح رنه آمده و نایب مناسبی نیز کتالح. It is used in the sense of minister of the court, whom they also call the Nábi Munáb, or deputy of the deputed (i.e. of the prime minister). Meninski, indeed, gives us "administrator, governor, prefectus," but this only leaves us where it found us.

Y 2
was with him, and this taken out of his effects after his death, the government fell to Katlūkhān. The most beautiful market-place here is called the Ṭarab Abād, in the shops of which sit the singing women ready dressed out, with their slave girls in attendance; over these is an Emīr, whose particular business it is to regulate their income.

We next came to the city of ṢNazar Abād. It is small, and inhabited by the ṬMahrattas, a people well skilled in the arts, medicine, and astrology: their nobles are Brahmins. The food of the Mahrattas consists of rice, green vegetables, and oil of sesame. They do not allow either the punishing or sacrificing of animals. They carefully wash all their food, just as one washes after other impurities; and never intermarry with their relations, unless separated by the interval of seven generations at least. They also abstain from the use of urine.

Our next place of arrival was the city of ṢSāgar which is large, and is situated on a river of the same name. Near it are mills which are worked for their orchards, i.e. to supply water. The inhabitants of this place are religious and peaceable.

We next arrived at the city of ṬKambāya, which is situated at a mouth of the sea which resembles a valley, and into which the ships ride: here also the flux and reflux of the tide is felt. The greatest part of its inhabitants are foreign merchants. We next came to ṬGoa, which is subject to the infidel king ṢJālansī, king of ṢCandahār who is also subject to the Emperor of Hindūstān, and to whom he sends an annual present. We next came to a large city situated at a mouth of the sea, and from this we took shipping and came to the island of ṢBairam, which is without inhabitants. We next arrived at the city of ṢKūka, the king of which is an infidel, named ṢDankūl, and subject to the Emperor of Hindūstān.

After some days we came to the island of ṢSindabūr, in the interior of which are six and thirty villages. By this we passed, however, and dropped anchor at a small island near it, in which is a temple and a tank of water. On this island we landed, and here I saw a Jogee leaning against the wall of the temple, and placed between two idols; he had some marks about him of a religious warfare. I addressed him, but he gave me no answer. We looked too, but could see no food near him. When we looked at him, he gave a loud shout, and a cocoa-nut fell upon him from a tree that was there. This nut he threw to us: to me he threw ten dinars, after I had offered him a few, of which he would not accept.† I supposed him to be a Moslem; for, when I addressed him, he looked towards heaven, and then towards the temple at Mecca, intimating that he acknowledged God, and believed in Mohammed as his prophet.

We next came to the city of 'Hinaur, which is situated at an estuary of the sea, and which receives large vessels. The inhabitants of this place are Moslems of the sect of 'Shāfī, a peaceable and religious people. They carry on, however, a warfare for the faith by sea, and for this they are noted. The women of this city, and indeed of all the Indian districts situated on the sea-shores, never dress in clothes that have been stitched, but the contrary. One of them, for example, will tie one part of a piece of cloth round her waist, while the remaining part will be placed upon her head and breast. They are chaste and handsome. The greater part of the inhabitants, both males and females, have committed the Korān to memory.

---

* Mr. Apetz translates this passage, "cui castigationum vestigia impressa erant. The original is "و عليه آثر الفصفاعلة" in his copy and mine. Mr. Apetz seems to have thought, that this Jogee had felt the effects of the religious wars of the Mohammedans. It is my opinion, that, as Ibn Batūta believed him to be a Mohammedan, as he says he did, he thought he recognized in him those characters or marks, which are common to those who are thus engaged. It is not necessary, however, that there should be scars, wounds, or the like, but a promptness, fitness, &c. to contend for the faith, as well by argument as by the sword: and hence, Mohammedan professors of theology are sometimes termed Mujtahids. This word, too, is occasionally used in the same connexion with abstinence, as in the Tarikh-i Aīlam Arūqi, when speaking of the education of the Sheikh Sa'd Oddin it is said, "قدم در در وادي مجااهدة وياست نهاد" and he placed his foot in the valley of abstinence and religious warfare. See also M. de Sacy, Chrest. Arab. tom. i. p. 169, edit. 2. I think, therefore, that Mr. Apetz is wrong.

† According to the author of the Dabistān, it is a rule with the Jogees to accept of no presents whatever. His words are: "آپیزی از کسی خواستن و نکنید خواسته آپید نکردنی: not to ask any thing of any one, and when offered unsaked, not to accept of it."
The inhabitants of 'Malabar* generally pay tribute to the King of Hinaur, fearing as they do his bravery by sea. His army too, consists of about six thousand men. They are, nevertheless, a brave and warlike race. The present king is Jamal Oddin Mohammed Ibn Hasan. He is one of the best of princes; but is himself subject to an infidel king, whose name is Horaib.

We next came into the country of Malabar, which is the country of black pepper. Its length is a journey of two months along the shore from Sin-dabur to Kawlam. The whole of the way by land lies under the shade of trees, and at the distance of every half mile, there is a house made of wood, in which there are chambers fitted up for the reception of comers and goers, whether they be Moslems or infidels. To each of these there is a well, out of which they drink; and over each is an infidel appointed to give drink. To the infidels he supplies this in vessels; to the Moslems he pours it in their hands. They do not allow the Moslems to touch their vessels, or to enter into their apartments; but if any one should happen to eat out of one of their vessels, they break it to pieces. But, in most of their districts, the Mussulman merchants have houses, and are greatly respected. So that Moslems who are strangers, whether they are merchants or poor, may lodge among them. But at any town in which no Moslem resides, upon any one's arriving they cook, and pour out drink for him, upon the leaf of the 'banana; and, whatever he happens to leave, is given to the dogs. And in all this space of two months' journey, there is not a span free from

* In the account of Malabar translated and published by Mr. Apetz, we have this word written مَلَايِبَر. In the King of Oude's Persian Dictionary, however, it is directed to be read مِلَايِبَر. Malibar, after which we have this account of it and its inhabitants.

It is a country situated on the shore of the sea of Aamn, all the men of which have no respect whatever for the chastity of their wives, every one of whom will have more than ten husbands. When a child is born, and has arrived at the age of one year, they all assemble in one place, each taking something in his hand; they then call the child, and that man towards whom he first turns is considered as his father, and therefore undertakes the charge of his bringing up.
cultivation. For every body has here a garden, and his house is placed in the middle of it; and round the whole of this there is a fence of wood, up to which the ground of each inhabitant comes. No one travels in these parts upon beasts of burden; nor is there any horse found, except with the King, who is therefore the only person who rides. When, however, any merchant has to sell or buy goods, they are carried upon the backs of men, who are always ready to do so (for hire.)

Every one of these men has a long staff, which is shod with iron at its extremity, and at the top has a hook. When, therefore, he is tired with his burden, he sets up his staff in the earth like a pillar, and places the burden upon it; and when he has rested, he again takes up his burden without the assistance of another. With one merchant, you will see one or two hundred of these carriers, the merchant himself walking. But when the nobles pass from place to place, they ride in a dūla* made of wood, something like a box, and which is carried upon the shoulders of slaves and hirelings. They put a thief to death for stealing a single nut, or even a grain of seed of any fruit, hence thieves are unknown among them; and, should any thing fall from a tree, none, except its proper owner, would attempt to touch it.

In the country of Malabar are twelve kings, the greatest of whom has fifty thousand troops at his command; the least, five thousand or thereabouts. That which separates the district of one king from that of another, is a wooden gate upon which is written: "The gate of safety of such an one." For when any criminal escapes from the district of one king, and gets safely into that of another, he is quite safe; so that no one has the least desire to take him, so long as he remains there.†

Each of their kings succeeds to rule, as being sister's son, not the son

---

* Mr. Apes says, دولة per farculum redidi. In Lexicon non repetitur, &c. The word is Hindustāni, and therefore not very likely to occur in the Arabic Lexicons. Dow says, Hind. vol. i. p. 280 ...... "concealed themselves in dooies or close chairs, in which women are always carried." And, in Gilchrist's Vocabulary we have, "Dola (es) litter, and in Mr. Shakespeare's Dictionary دلو dola, and دله dofi, a kind of sedan (for women)." Mr. Apes is very right, therefore, for it is a mere palanquin, or, as it is called in Hindustani, a فلک or dofi.

† This custom seems nearly allied to that which obtained among the Israelites, by which the man who happened to kill another accidentally, saved his life by escaping to one of the cities of refuge, and remaining there until the death of the high priest.
to the last. Their country is that from which black pepper is brought; and this is the far greater part of their produce and culture. The pepper tree resembles that of the dark grape. They plant it near that of the cocoa-nut, and make frame-work for it, just as they do for the grape tree. It has, however, no tendrils, and the tree itself resembles a bunch of grapes. The leaves are like the ears of a horse; but some of them resemble the leaves of a "bramble. When the autumn arrives, it is ripe; they then cut it, and spread it just as they do grapes, and thus it is dried by the sun. As to what some have said, that they boil it in order to dry it, it is without foundation.

I also saw, in their country and on the sea-shores, aloes like the seed-aloë, sold by measure, just as meal and millet is.*

* This passage is very imperfect in the edition of Apetz. The words are: وتُرْدُ رأْسٍ في بلادهم وسواحلهم صربا كسيب الصوبي نباصر بالكيل كال mogą المدة صربا نوع أسْم. Of the aloe, according to the Medical Dictionary of Ibn El Hosain of Bagdad, there are three sorts. His words are "Of the aloe there are three sorts, the Socotrine, the Arabic, and the Humjana." The two first are well known, but what the last is, it is out of my power to say. I suspect, however, that the proper word has been omitted by the transcriber, and the المدة Wهمهنا far and thus; for he goes on to say, the Socotrine is the best. We are then told, that Alexander colonized this island from Greece, for the purpose of cultivating the aloe, by people who are horribly addicted to magic, &c. We are then told, that the best of the Socotrine is that which is of the colour of liver, and which smells like myrrh, and is shining. ونيكوترين صرب استقوتري وآن بوده لون آن مانند جکرون وبي مانند شر وبراق باشد. We then have the methods of making up and using it, which need not be detailed here.

Of the millet he says: فرَهُ جاورس هندیست وشيرازی آنآ زرنج خوانند وآن دو نوع است Dhora is the Indian millet, which, in the dialect of Shirás, they call sorat. It is of two sorts, the white and black; but the white is the best.
CHAPTER XVIII.

Arrival at Abi Sardar—Kākanwar—Manjarūn—Mohammedan merchants here—Hili—Jurkhānān—Dakkanān—Miraculous Tree—Fattan—Fandarainā—Kālikūt—Chinese Junks—Embassy goes on board, and is wrecked—Proceeds to Koulam after his property; arrives at Kanzakardā; returns to Kālikūt—Joins an expedition against Sindābūr—The place carried by assault—Arrives at Hīnāu—Fahanaur—Manjarūn—Hili—Jarafattan—Badafattan—Fandarainā—Skālūt; returns to Sindābūr, and sets out for the Maldive Islands.

The first town we entered in the country of Malabar was that of "Abi Sardar which is small, and is situated on a large estuary of the sea. We next came to the city of "Kākanwar, which is large, and also upon an estuary of the sea. It abounds in the sugar-cane. The Sultan is an infidel. He sent his son as a pledge to our vessel, and we landed accordingly, and were honourably received. He also sent presents to the ship, as marks of respect to the Emperor of India. It is a custom with them, that every vessel which passes by one of their ports shall enter it, and give a present to its Sultan; in this case they let it pass, but otherwise they make war upon it with their vessels, they then board it out of contempt, and impose a double fine upon the cargo, just in proportion to the advantage they usually gain from merchants entering their country.

We next arrived at the city of "Manjarūn, which is situated upon a large estuary of the sea, called the "*estuary of the wolf," and which is the greatest estuary in the country of Malabar. In this place are some of the greatest merchants of Persia and Yemen. Ginger and black pepper are here in great abundance. The king of this place is the greatest of the kings of Malabar, and in it are about four thousand Mohammedan merchants. The king made us land, and sent us a present.

We next came to the town of "Hili, which is large and situated upon an estuary of the sea. As far as this place come the ships of China, but they do not go beyond it; nor do they enter any harbour, except that of this place, of "Kālikūt, and of "Koulam.*

* This name often appears in our MSS. as well as in that of Mr. Apets, thus: كاواسم Koulam. It is given correctly by Abulfeda كولم, and in the long ١٣٨٠° ٠', lat. ١٤° ٠'; نلب.
The city of Hili is much revered both by the Mohammedans and infidels, on account of a mosque, the source of light and of blessings, which is found in it. To this seafaring persons make and pay their vows, whence its treasury is derived, which is placed under the control of the principal Moslem. The mosque maintains a preacher, and has within it several students, as well as readers of the Korān, and persons who teach writing.

We next arrived at the city of "Jurkannan, the king of which is one of the greatest on these coasts. We next came to "Dadkannan, which is a large city abounding with gardens, and situated upon a mouth of the sea. In this are found the betel leaf and ↑ nut, the cocoa-nut and colocasia. Without the city is a large pond for retaining water; about which are gardens. The king is an infidel. His grandfather, who had become Mohammedan, built its mosque and made the pond. The cause of the grandfather's receiving Islamism was a tree, over which he had built the mosque. This tree is a very great wonder; its leaves are green, and like those of the fig, except only that they are soft. The tree is called Daarakht Shāhādet (the tree of testimony), daarakht meaning tree. I was told in these by Ibn Said; and in the Atwal: " ل رج ه ج " i.e. long. 110° 8'; lat. 16° 30'. It is the Coulan of the maps.

* I am not at all satisfied with my own translation of this passage. It stands thus in the original: "بسبب جامع بها مشرق الدور والبركة". Nothing of this occurs in the edition by Mr. Apetz. I have given, however, the only tolerable sense I can find in it.

† This, according to the Medical Dictionary of Ibn El Hosain, صدل سرخ درخت وي مانند درخت تازکل بد وی سردن بقوت وپایه. It is a fruit in power something like the red sandal-wood. Its tree is like that of the cocoa-nut; it is in its nature cold and dry, &c.

‡ "I am still under the impression of the banyan tree here; his words are: " arborem istam vere singularem jam veteres mirati sunt;" after which we have a citation from Strabo in the words of Onesicritus, and another from Pliny, and then we are told, that it is the Bengal fig-tree (Ficus Bengalensis), &c. How Mr. Apetz got to this conclusion it is extremely difficult to say, unless he supposed the wonder of our traveller to have arisen from the same cause with that of the ancients: but, as the ground of his wonder is explained to be the leaf's changing its colour, &c. there appears to be very little reason for supposing, that this is the tree mentioned by Onesicritus and Pliny."
parts, that this tree does not generally drop its leaves; but, at the season of autumn in every year, one of them changes its colour, first to yellow, then to red; and that upon this is written, with the pen of power, "There is no God but God; Mohammed is the Prophet of God;" and that this leaf alone falls. Very many Mohammedans, who were worthy of belief, told me this; and said, that they had witnessed its fall, and had read the writing; and further, that every year, at the time of the fall, credible persons among the Mohammedans, as well as others of the infidels, sat beneath the tree waiting for the fall of the leaf: and when this took place, that the one half was taken by the Mohammedans, as a blessing, and for the purpose of curing their diseases; and the other, by the king of the infidel city, and laid up in his treasury as a blessing; and that this is constantly received among them. Now the grandfather of the present king could read the Arabic; he witnessed, therefore, the fall of the leaf, read the inscription, and, understanding its import, became a Mohammedan accordingly. At the time of his death he appointed his son, who was a violent infidel, to succeed him. This man adhered to his own religion, cut down the tree, tore up its roots, and effaced every vestige of it. After two years the tree grew, and regained its original state, and in this it now is. This king died suddenly; and none of his infidel descendants, since his time, has done any thing to the tree.

We next came to the city of 'Fattan (Pattan), the greater part of the inhabitants of which are Brahmins, who are held in great estimation among the Hindoos. In this place there was not one Mohammedan. Without it was a mosque, to which the Mohammedan strangers resort. It is said to have been built by certain merchants, and afterwards to have been destroyed by one of the Brahmins, who had removed the roof of it to his own house. On the following night, however, this house was entirely burnt, and in it the Brahmin, his followers, and all his children. They then restored the mosque, and in future abstained from injuring it; whence it became the resort of the Mohammedan strangers.

After this we came to the city of 'Fandarainâ, a beautiful and large place, abounding with gardens and markets. In this the Mohammedans have three districts, in each of which is a mosque, with a judge and preacher.
We next came to Kālikūt, one of the great ports of the district of Malabar; and in which merchants from all parts are found. The king of this place is an infidel; who shaves his chin just as the Ḥaidarī Fakeers of Rūm do: When we approached this place, the people came out to meet us, and with a large concourse brought us into the port. The greatest part of the Mohammedan merchants of this place are so wealthy, that one of them can purchase the whole freightage of such vessels as put in here; and fit out others like them. Here we waited three months for the season to set sail for China: for there is only one season in the year in which the sea of China is navigable. Nor then is the voyage undertaken, except in vessels of the three descriptions following: the greatest is called a 'junk, the middling sized a 'zaw, the least a 'kakam. The sails of these vessels are made of cane-reeds, woven together like a mat; which, when they put into port, they leave standing in the wind. In some of these vessels there will be employed a thousand men, six hundred of these sailors, and four hundred soldiers. Each of the larger ships is followed by three others, a middle-sized, a third, and a fourth sized. These vessels are no where made except in the city of El Zaitūn in China, or in Sin Kilān, which is Sin El Sin. They row† in these ships with large oars, which may be compared to great masts, over some of which five and twenty men will be stationed, who work standing. The commander of each vessel is a great Emīr. In the large ships too they sow garden herbs and

---

* This place, according to the Arabic geographers, is situated on the eastern coast of China. Edrisī says, that the tenth part of the second climate (الحُرْطَاء العاشِرَم من التَّقْلِيم الثَّالِث) contains the eastern districts of China, the city Süsat El Sin....... and Siniat El Sin (يضمن البلد الصينية الشرقية مدينة سوسة الصين .... وسينات الصينية العبرة في الشرق وليس وراء الايبحر العيب). As to Sin El Sin, it is the extreme eastern part which is inhabited, and beyond which there is nothing but the ocean.

† The verb حذف seems here to be used in rather an unusual sense: and were it not repeated, it might be supposed to be an error of the copyists for جذف, which is generally taken in this sense. The passage is: وتحذفون في هذه المراتب جذف الاصواري الكبير يقف عليها المعاذف, &c.
ginger, which they cultivate in cisterns (made for that purpose), and placed on the sides of them. In these also are houses constructed of wood, in which the higher officers reside with their wives: but these they do not hire out to the merchants. Every vessel, therefore, is like an independent city. Of such ships as these, Chinese individuals will sometimes have large numbers: and, generally, the Chinese are the richest people in the world.

Now, when the season for setting out had arrived, the Emperor of Hindustan appointed one of the junks, of the thirteen that were in the port, for our voyage. El Malik Sambul, therefore, who had been commissioned to present the gift, and Zahir Oddin, went on board: and to the former was the present carried. I also sent my baggage, servants, and slave-girls on board, but was told by one of them, before I could leave the shore, that the cabin which had been assigned to me was so small, that it would not take the baggage and slave girls. I went, therefore to the commander, who said, There is no remedy for this; if you wish to have a larger, you had better get into one of the kakams (third-sized vessels): there you will find larger cabins, and such as you want. I accordingly ordered my property to be put into the kakam. This was in the afternoon of Thursday, and I myself remained on shore for the purpose of attending divine service on the Friday. During the night, however, the sea arose, when some of the junks struck upon the shore, and the greatest part of those on board were drowned; and the rest were saved by swimming. Some of the junks, too, sailed off, and what became of them I know not. The vessel in which the present was stowed, kept on the sea till morning, when it struck on the shore, and all on board perished, and the wealth was lost. I had, indeed, seen from the shore, the Emperor's servants, with El Malik Sambul and Zahir Oddin, prostrating themselves almost distracted: for the terror of the sea was such as not to be got rid of. I myself had remained on shore, having with me my prostration carpet and ten dinars, which had been given me by some holy men. These I kept as a blessing, for the kakam had sailed off with my property and followers. The missionaries of the King of China were on board another junk, which struck upon the shore also. Some of them were saved and brought to land, and afterwards clothed by the Chinese merchants.

I was told that the kakam in which my property was, must have put into Kawlam. I proceeded, therefore, to that place by the river. It is situated at the distance of ten days from Kālikūt. After five days I came to Kanjarkarā, which stands on the top of a hill, is inhabited by Jews, and governed by an Emir who pays tribute to the King of Kawlam. All the trees (we saw) upon the banks of this river, as well as upon the seashores, were those of the cinnamon and bakam,* which constitute the fuel of the inhabitants: and with this we cooked our food. Upon the tenth day we arrived at Kawlam, which is the last city on the Malabar coast. In this place is a large number of Mohammedan merchants; but the king is an infidel. In this place I remained a considerable time, but heard nothing of the kacam and my property. I was afraid to return to the Emperor, who would have said, How came you to leave the present, and stay upon the shore? for I knew what sort of a man he was, in cases of this kind. I also advised with some of the Mohammedans, who dissuaded me from returning, and said: He will condemn you because you left the present; you had better, therefore, return by the river to Kālikūt.

I then betook myself to Jamāl Oddin, King of Hinaur, by sea, who, when I came near, met me and received me honourably, and then appointed me a house with a suitable maintenance. He was about to attend on divine service in the mosque, and commanded me to accompany him. I then became attached to the mosque, and read daily a khatma or two.† At this time the King was preparing an expedition against the island of Sindābūr. For this purpose he had prepared two and fifty vessels, which,

---

* Mr. Apetz translates this passage, "arbores cinnamomi et Cessalpiniae Sappan." The original is, "Asbarsa," which means cinnamon and Cinnamomum zeylanicum. That the first signifies cinnamon there is perhaps little doubt; but I know not whether Mr. Apetz is right or not in his interpretation of the second. It may not be amiss, however, to give an extract respecting it from the medical dictionary already cited. Ammonium nitricum, "barkまたは巴木", is a herb that grows on the shores of India. It is used by dyers in dyeing black. It is in its nature warm and dry.

† The passage is, "أنا في كل يوم عامة أو اثنين", which means that he daily read the Koran through once or twice.
CHAPTER XIX.

Description of the Maldive Islands—Natural productions—People—Customs—Trade—Currency—
Origin of Mohammedanism here—A Queen governing the principal island—They write generally on palm leaves, with an iron style—Power of the Judge: his revenue—Isle of Kalnūs—Voyage to the principal isle—Introduced to the husband and visier of the Queen—Food of the islanders—Takes the office of Judge—Marries three wives—Suspected by the Visier—Divorces his wives, and visits the other islands—Mulāk Island—Its fertility—Distance from the coast of Coromandel.

These islands constitute one of the wonders of the world; for their number is about two thousand, nearly a hundred of which are so close to each other as to form a sort of ring; each of which, nevertheless, is surrounded by the sea. When vessels approach any one of them, they are obliged to show who they have on board; if not, a passage is not permitted between them; for such is their proximity to each other, that the people of one are recognized by those of another.

The greatest trees on these islands are those of the cocoa-nut, the fruit of which they eat with fish. Of this sort of trees the palm will produce fruit twelve times in the year, each month supplying a fresh crop: so that you will see upon the trees, the fruit of some large, of others small, of others dry, and of others green. And this is the case always. From these they make palm-wine, and oil olive; and from their honey, sweetmeats, which they eat with the dried fruits. This is a strong incentive to venery.
I had some slave girls and four wives during my residence here;*......The people are religious, chaste, and peaceable. They eat what is lawful, and their prayers are answered. Their bodies are weak. They make no war;
and their weapons are prayers. They are by no means terrified at the robbers and thieves of India, nor do they punish them; from the experience

* The passage, which will not bear translating, is this: وقد كان لي بها جواري واربع نسوة و كنت أطوف عليهن في الليلة الواحدة مدة مثالي بها. This tree is, no doubt, the kettule of Knox, who says, "It growth straight, but not so tall or big as the cocoa-nut tree. It yieldeth a sort of liquor, which they call tellegie: it is rarely sweet and pleasing to the palate, and is wholesome to the body, but no stronger than water: they take it down from the tree twice, and from some good trees thrice in a day. An ordinary tree will yield some three, some four gallons in a day—the which liquor they boil, and make a kind of brown sugar, called jaggory; but if they use their skill, they can make it as white as the second-best sugar, and fit for any use, &c.
—Knox's Ceylon, p. 30, edit. 1817.
CHAPTER XIX.

Description of the Maldive Islands—Natural productions—People—Customs—Trade—Currency—
Origin of Mohammedanism here—A Queen governing the principal island—They write generally on palm leaves, with an iron style—Power of the Judge: his revenue—Isle of Kalmūs—Voyage to the principal isle—Introduced to the husband and visier of the Queen—Food of the islanders—Takes the office of Judge—Marries three wives—Suspected by the Visier—Divorces his wives, and visits the other islands—Mulūk Island—Its fertility—Distance from the coast of Coromandel.

These islands constitute one of the wonders of the world; for their number is about two thousand, nearly a hundred of which are so close to each other as to form a sort of ring; each of which, nevertheless, is surrounded by the sea. When vessels approach any one of them, they are obliged to show who they have on board; if not, a passage is not permitted between them; for such is their proximity to each other, that the people of one are recognized by those of another.

The greatest trees on these islands are those of the cocoa-nut, the fruit of which they eat with fish. Of this sort of trees the palm will produce fruit twelve times in the year, each month supplying a fresh crop: so that you will see upon the trees, the fruit of some large, of others small, of others dry, and of others green. And this is the case always. From these they make palm-wine, and oil olive; and from their honey, sweetmeats, which they eat with the dried fruits. This is a strong incentive to venery.
I had some slave girls and four wives during my residence here;*......The people are religious, chaste, and peaceable. They eat what is lawful, and their prayers are answered. Their bodies are weak. They make no war;
and their weapons are prayers. They are by no means terrified at the robbers and thieves of India, nor do they punish them; from the experience

---

* The passage, which will not bear translating, is this:
وَتَدَّكَّانُ عِيْبًا جَوَارِيٍّ وَأَرْيَانَ نَصْرَةٍ وَكَتَّلَ الْعَلِيهِنَّ فِي الْلَّيْلَةِ الْوَاحِدَةِ مُدَةً مَبْتَغَى بِهَا.
This tree is, no doubt, the kettl of Knox, who says, "It growth straight, but not so tall or big as the cocoa-nut tree. It yieldeth
a sort of liquor, which they call tellegie: it is rarely sweet and pleasing to the palate, and is wholesome to the body, but no stronger than water: they take it down from the tree twice, and
from some good trees thrice in a day. An ordinary tree will yield some three, some four gallons in a day—the which liquor they boil, and make a kind of brown sugar, called jaggory; but if they use their skill, they can make it as white as the second-best sugar, and fit for any use, &c.
—Knox's Ceylon, p. 30, edit. 1817.
that every one who steals, will be exposed to some sudden and grievous calamity. When any of the war-vessels of the infidel Hindoos pass by these islands, they take whatsoever they find, without being resisted by any one. But if one of these infidels should take for himself (surreptitiously) but a single lemon, his chief* will not only severely punish him, but will impress most seriously upon his mind, the fear of some horrible consequence to follow. Excepting this one case only, they are the most gentle people possible towards those who visit them: the reason probably is, the delicacy of their persons, and their ignorance of the art of war.

In each of these islands are several mosques, which, with the rest of their buildings, are constructed of wood. They are a cleanly people, each individual washing himself twice daily, on account of the great heat of the sun. They very much use perfumes, such as the gâlia,† and scented oils. Every woman must, as soon as her husband has arisen and said his prayers, bring him the box of colyrium for his eyes, with the perfumes, and with these he anoints and perfumes himself. Both the rich and poor walk barefoot. The whole country is shaded with trees, so that a person walking along, is just as if he were walking in a garden. The water of their wells is not more than two cubits from the surface of the earth.

Whenever a traveller enters these islands, he may marry for a very small dowry one of the handsomest women for any specific period, upon this condition, that he shall divorce her when he leaves the place; because the women never leave their respective districts. But, if he does not wish to marry, the woman in whose house he lodges will cook for him, and otherwise attend on him, for a very small consideration: The greatest part of their trade consists in a sort of hemp, that is, thread made of the fibres of the cocoa-nut. It is made by macerating the nut in water, then by beating

---

* The Maldive chief governor is probably here meant.
† According to Golius, "odoramenti genus: hinc galia dictum, et vulgo galia moscata." Gi. The Medical Dictionary of Ibn Hosain ascribes to it the properties of reducing hard swellings, and, when mixed with oil, particularly that of the ban seed, is effectual in removing the earache: he states that its scent is delightful, and that when mixed with any drink, has the property of intoxicating; that it is good for the epilepsy, and to cure barrenness. The words are:

بکداراند (بکداراند) وبر کوش جکاند دز زابل کرداند ونیشیس بی مشروع را نافع بود وچوری در شراب حبل کند وچخور کسی دهد نست شرد وبیتیس وی مفرح دل برد وانستیرا پاری دهد.
it with large mallets till it is quite soft; they then spin it out, and afterwards twist it into ropes. With this thread the ships of India and Yemen are sewn together, of which, when they happen to strike against a rock, the thread will yield a little, but will not soon break, contrary to what happens when put together with iron nails. This is the best sort of hemp. Each population catches the fish of its own island only, which they salt, and send to India and China. The currency used instead of coin, is the Wada. This is sea shell-fish, which they take upon the shore, and then bury in the earth till the flesh is entirely wasted away, the hard part still remaining. This is the Wada which is so abundant in India: it is carried from these islands to the province of Bengal; and there also passes instead of coin.

* Knox, speaking of the kettule tree of Ceylon, says, "it bears a leaf like to that of a betel-nut tree, which is fastened to a skin as the betel-nut leaves were; only this skin is hard and stubborn, like a piece of board. The skin is full of strings as strong as wire; they use them to make ropes withal."—Ceylon, p. 30.

† We have the following account respecting these islands in the two Mohammedan travellers of the ninth century (Pinkerton, vol. vii. p. 182). "Between this sea and that of Delarowi are many islands, to the number, as they say, of nineteen hundred, which divide those two seas from each other, and are governed by a queen." To this last particular the editor objects in a note; yet it is curious enough, that a queen held the supreme power when our traveller resided there. It is also remarkable, that our traveller makes the islands two thousand in number; but he mentions nothing about the ambergris, said to be found there in the ninth century; while both agree in stating, that a sort of palm-tree bearing cocoa-nuts is found, and that the fibres of these are used as hemp. We are told, in a note by the editor, that these islands are, by the best writers, made to amount to about twelve thousand; and it is then said, that Male dive means in the Malabar tongue a thousand islands. That Dweep, means an island in the Sanscrit there can be no doubt; but it is very doubtful whether the other etymology is true. Ibn Batūta derives their name from the principal island, Mohl, as a proper name; and if this be true, the meaning of their name will be the Mohl islands. That the Lakadives are so called from their number is highly probable, Lakkha or Lakka meaning a hundred thousand in Sanscrit, and Dweep an island, as before: and the name implying an indefinitely large number of isles generally.

‡ According to Golius, the Concha Veneris, but according to the author of the Kāmoos, which is taken out of the sea, the fissure of which is white like that of the date-stone. It is hung (about the neck) to avert the evil eye.
The women of the islands of India cover their faces, and also their bodies, from the navel downwards: this they all do, even to the wives of their kings. When I held the office of judge among them, I was quite unable to get them covered entirely. In these islands the women never eat with the men, but in their own society only. I endeavoured, while I was judge, to get my wives to eat with me, but I could never prevail. Their conversation is very pleasing; and they, themselves, are exceedingly beautiful.

The cause of these islands becoming Mohammedan was, as it is generally received among them, and as some learned and respectable persons among them informed me, as follows. When they were in a state of infidelity, there appeared to them every month a spectre from among the genii. This came from the sea. Its appearance was that of a ship filled with candles. When they saw him, it was their custom to take and dress up a young woman who was a virgin, and place her in the ‘idol-temple which stood on the sea-shore, and had windows looking towards him. Here they left her for the night. When they came in the morning, they found her vitiated and dead. This they continued doing month after month, casting lots among themselves, and each, to whom the lot fell, giving up and dressing out his daughter for the spectre. After this there came to them a western Arab, named ‘Abu’l Barakāt the Berber. This was a holy man, and one who had committed the Korān to memory. He happened to lodge in the house of an old woman in the ‘island of Mohl.* One day, when he entered the house, he saw her with a company of her female inmates weeping and lamenting, and asked them what was the matter. A person who acted as interpreter between him and them said, that the lot had fallen upon this old woman, who was now adorning her daughter for the spectre: for this it was she was crying: this too was her only child. The Mogrebine, who was a beardless man, said to her: I will go to the spectre to-night instead of thy daughter. If he takes me, then I shall redeem her: but if I come off safe, then that will be to the praise of God. They carried him accordingly to the idol-house that night, as if he had been the daughter of the old woman, the magistrate knowing nothing whatever of the matter. The Mogrebine entered, and sitting down in the window, began to read the Korān. By and bye the spectre came, with eyes flaming like fire; but when he had got near enough to hear the Korān, he plunged into the sea. In this manner the Mogrebine remained till morning, reading his Korān, when the old woman came with her household, and the great personages of the district, in order to fetch out the young woman and burn her, as it was their custom. But when they saw the old man reading the Korān, just as they had left him, they were greatly astonished. The old woman then told them what she had done, and why she had desired him to do this. They then carried the Mogrebine to their King, whose name was "Shanwān, and told him the whole of the affair; and he was much astonished at the Arab. Upon this the Mogrebine presented the doctrine of Islamism to the King, and pressed him to receive it; who replied: Stay with us another month, and then, if you will do as you now have done, and escape from the spectre with safety, I will become a Mohammedan. So God opened the heart of the King for the reception of Islamism before the completion of the month,—of himself, of his household, his children, and his nobles. When, however, the second month came, they went with the Mogrebine to the idol-house, according to former custom, the King himself being also present; and when the following morning had arrived, they found the Mogrebine sitting and reading his Korān; having had the same rencontre with the spectre that he had on the former occasion. They then broke the images, rased the idol-house to the ground, and all became Mohammedans. The sect into which they entered was that of the Mogrebine; namely, that of Ibn Mālik. Till this very day they make much of the Mogrebines, on account of this man. I was residing for some time in these islands, without having any knowledge of this circumstance; upon a certain night, however, when I saw them exulting and praising God, as they were proceeding towards the sea, with Korāns on their heads, I asked them what they were about; when they told me of the spectre. They then said: Look towards the sea, and you will see him. I looked, and behold, he resembled a ship filled with candles and torches. This, said they, is the spectre; which, when we do as you have seen us doing, goes away and does us no injury.

* The principal island of the group.
When I first came to the island of Mohl, a woman was sovereign, because the King mentioned above had left no male issue; the inhabitants therefore gave to his eldest daughter, Khodija, the supreme rule. Her husband, Jamāl Oddin, the preacher, then became her prime minister.

It is a custom with them to write out copies of the Korān and other books on paper only. Letters, orders, and legal decisions, they inscribe on palm leaves of the cocoa-nut tree, with a crooked sharp-pointed instrument somewhat like a knife. The army of this Princess consists of foreigners, to the number of about one thousand men. Their laws mostly originate with the judge, who, for the authority with which his orders are obeyed, is more like a king. He enjoys, by right of his office, the revenue of three islands: a custom which originated with their king, Shanwāza, whose proper name was Ahmed, and this still remains in force.

When I first arrived at these islands, the ship in which I was, put into port in the island of Kalnūs, which is a beautiful place, containing several mosques. Upon this occasion some of the learned and pious inhabitants took me to their houses, and entertained me with great hospitality. The commander of the ship in which I had been, then went with me to the island in which the Queen resided; and after which, the other islands of these parts are named. I sailed with him in order to see her; and after passing by many of the islands, came to it. Our practice was, to sail in a large boat during the morning; about the middle of the day we said our prayers, and then dined in the boat. And thus, after ten days, we came to the island of Zabiah El Mohl, i.e. the Maldivian island. In this I landed, and a report was made to the Queen's vizier, Jamāl Oddin, who was also her husband. Upon this he sent for me. I went to him, and was very honourably received and entertained. He also appointed a house for my residence, sent me a present of victuals, fruits, clothing, and an alms-gift of the Wada (or shells), which are the currency of these parts, and used instead of coin.

The food of the greater part of the inhabitants of these parts is rice, which they cook and lay up in saucers, and small potted plates, with spiced flesh, fowl, and fish. Upon this, in order to assist digestion, they drink El Kurbāni; that is, the honey of the cocoa-nut made into spiced wine; this easily digests, excites the appetite, and communicates strength to the frame.

After this the Vizier desired me to take the office of Judge, and to remain among them. He gave me a house, and a large garden, in which were built many other houses. He also sent me a carpet, vessels, a dress of honour, and made me ride upon a horse; although it is a custom with them, that none except the Vizier should thus ride. The rest of the nobles and others either ride in a "palanquin, a machine formerly described, or walk on foot. He also sent female slaves for my service; and I married three wives. The Vizier also frequently came himself and conferred his favours upon me: for which may God reward him.

When, however, I had married my wives, and my relations became, through them, numerous and powerful in the island, the Vizier began to be afraid of me, lest I should get the upper hand of him, when no such thought had entered my mind. This resulted purely from their weakness, the fewness of their troops, and their inexperience in the art of war, as already noticed. He hated me mortally in his own mind, began to inquire into my affairs, and to watch my proceedings. This was all known to me, and it became my intention to leave the place; but this was also a matter of dread with him, because I might then possibly bring an army upon him from the Maabar districts of Hindūstān, the king of those parts, "Gīāth Oddin, having married a sister to one of my wives when I resided in Dehli, and with whom I was on terms of friendship.

I then divorced all my wives except one, who had a young child, and I left that island for those which stretch out before it. These form numerous groups, each group containing many islands. In some of these I saw women who had only one breast, which much astonished me. Of these islands, one is named Mulūk. In this, large ships destined for the districts of Maabar put into harbour. It is an island exceedingly rich in vegetation and soil, so that when you cut a branch from any of its trees, and plant it either on the road or on a wall, it will grow, throw out leaves, and become a tree. In this island I saw a pomegranate tree, the fruit of which ceased not to shoot during the whole year. Between the Maldive islands and the Maabar districts there is a distance of three days, with a moderate wind.

CHAPTER XX.

Arrival in Ceylon—Visits the King at Battâla—Natural productions—Pearls—Obtains permission to visit Adam’s Peak—Arrives at Manâr Mandali—Port of Salâwût—Kanhar, the capital of Ceylon, described—Mosque of the Sheikh Othmân—The Emperor Kinâr: his white elephant—large rubies found all over Ceylon—Description of the cave Îsta Mahmûd—Bûzâta—Monkeys—Estuary of reeds—Old woman’s house—Cave of Baba Tâhir—Qâf Sibak—The fierce leech—The seven caves—Ridge of Alexander—Description of Adam’s Peak—Customs of Pilgrims—Fish Port—Village of Karkûn—Qâf Dildinûh—Qâf At Kalanja—City of Dinaur—Great Idol-Temple, with Brahmins, Jovees, and daughters of the Nobility—Kâli—Kalambâ—Battâla.

When we sailed, however, the wind changed upon us, and we were near being lost; but arrived at last at the island of Ceylon, a place well known, and in which is situated the mountain of Serendib. This appeared to us like a pillar of smoke, when we were at a distance of nine days from it.* When we got near the land, we saw a harbour, into which we endeavoured to put, but were threatened by the Reis, who was in a ship. The reason of this was, the harbour was in a district belonging to an infidel prince, who had no intercourse with the captains of Mohammedan vessels, as other infidel princes had. He was likewise a very stupid being. He had also ships with which he occasionally transported his troops against the Mohammedans. Beside all this, we were in danger of drowning, unless we could enter the port: I said to the Reis, therefore, Allow me to come on shore, and I will ensure thy safety, and that of those about thee, with the King. To this he consented, and myself, with some of my followers only, were brought on shore. The infidels then came about us and said: What are you? I answered, I am a relation of the King of the Maabar districts, and am on a voyage to visit him: whatever is in the ship, is a present for the King of the Maabar. They then went to their king, and told him this. He therefore sent for me, and I went to him. He is king of the city of 'Bättäla,* which is small, and surrounded by two wooden fences. The whole of its shore abounds with 'cinnamon wood, bakam, and the 'kalanji aloe;† which, however, is not equal to the 'Kamārī, or the 'Kākuli, in scent. The merchants of Malabar and the Maabar districts transport it without any other price than a few articles of clothing, which are given as presents to the king. This may be attributed to the circumstance, that it is brought down by the mountain torrents, and left in great heaps upon the shore. Between this city and the Maabar districts, there is a voyage of one day and night. The king of Ceylon, 'Ayari Shakarti, by name, has considerable forces by sea. When I was first admitted to his presence, he rose and received me honourably, and

* Knox says, “it is sharp like a sugar-loaf.”—Ceylon, p. 5.

* Perhaps the Batticalaw of Knox, which he expressly tells us lies to the westward of the island, while the maps place Batticaloa (which I suppose must mean the same place) to the eastward.—Ceylon, p. 9.

† The Medical Dictionary of Ibn Hosain speaks of the Kākuli in the following terms: قلالي نبات مست من نبات حوالي يوم شورى، بدو، كما أخشى أن ابن عمران كود مانند. The Kākuli is a plant like the Alkali. In taste it is salt and astrigent; its stone, as Ibn Imrān says, is like the Dodder plant in operation: it is of a warm and dry nature: and Edrisi, speaking of Fandaraina says (8th part of the 2d climate), تحت به مراكب التجار من جزر الهند ومركبات السيد إياها وبسمال هذه المدينة وعلى جبل ساي العلوم كثير أصحاب عالماً بالفراى وال مواضى وبسيط في حواره الفائقه ومها تحمل إلى ساير اثاث الأزمن ونواة الفائقه تكون أشبه الأشياء نباتات المهرات. Into this place put the merchant vessels from the islands of India and Sindia. On the north of it is a very high hill, abounding in trees, with villages and cattle: about the skirts of it grows the kākula, and hence is transported to other parts of the earth. This plant is of all things the most like to the shahrān (place) genun? Castell). The tree Kamārī or Kimārī, is, according to Golius, so called from a place named Tamar Kimār in India. Ibn Batūta tells us, a little farther on, that both Kākula and Tamar Kamārā, the places where these plants are produced, are situated in Java (مل جاوة) Mūl Jāva).

Knox tells us, that the cinnamon-tree grows wild in the woods as other trees, and by them no more esteemed. It is as much in plenty as hazel in England, &c.—Ceylon, p. 31. On the ales, &c., see Knox, pp. 36, &c.; edition by Philalethes, p. 5 and 7, &c.
said: You are to be my guest for three days. Security shall be forwarded to the people of the ship, because your relation, the King of the Maabar, is my friend. After thanking him, I remained with him, and was treated with increasing respect.

One day, when I was admitted to his presence, he had with him a great number of pearls, which had been brought from the pearl-fishery, and these his companions were sorting. He asked me, whether I had ever seen pearl-diving, in any country which I had visited. I said, yes, I had, in the island of "Finas. / He said: Do not be shy; ask for what you wish. I answered: My only desire in coming to this island was, to visit the blessed foot of our forefather Adam;" whom these people call Bābā, while they style Eve, Māmā. This, replied he, is easy enough. We will send some one with you, who shall conduct you thither. The ship (said I) which brought me here, shall return to the Maabar; and when I return, you shall send me there in one of your ships. He answered, It shall be so. When I told this to the commander of the ship, he refused to accede to it; and said, I will wait for you, should you be absent a whole year. This I told to the King, who said: He may stay at my charge until you return. He then gave me a palanquin, which his servants carried upon their shoulders. He also sent with me four Jogees, who were in the habit of visiting the foot-mark every year; with these went four Brahmins, and ten of the King’s companions, with fifteen men carrying provisions. As to water, there is plenty of it to be found on the road. We then proceeded on our journey; and on the first day crossed a river in a boat made of reeds, and entered the city of ʻManār Mandali, which is handsome, and situated at the extremity of the territory of the infidel king, who had entertained and sent us out. We then proceeded to the port of ʻSalāwāt,

* This is, without doubt, the foot of some Buddha, as already noticed, p. 30. Knox says of this hill, "On the south side of Conde Uda is a hill, supposed to be the highest on this island, called in the Chingualay language Hamalell, but by the Portuguese and European nations Adam’s Peak. It is sharp like a sugar-loaf, and on the top a flat stone, with the print of a foot like a man’s on it, but far bigger, being about two feet long. The people of this land count it meritorious to go and worship this impression," &c.,—Ceylon, p. 5. The Cingalese assert, that the foot-mark is that of Buddha. Ib. p. 144; Addition, pp. 210, 215.
which is a small town. The roads, however, over which we travelled; were rough and abounding with water. In these there were many elephants: but they never touched either pilgrims or strangers, in consequence of the blessing obtained by the Sheikh Abu Abd Allah Ibn Khafif, the first who opened this road of pilgrimage to the foot. The infidels would not formerly allow the Mohammedans to make this pilgrimage, but injured them; nor would they either sell, or give them any thing to eat. But when it happened that the elephants killed all the companions of this Sheikh, one of them sparing and carrying him on his back from among the mountains to an inhabited district, the infidels ever after thought highly of the Mohammedans, admitted them into their houses, and fed them. And to this very day they speak of the Sheikh in the most extravagant terms of respect, and call him "the greatest Sheikh." After this we arrived at the city of Kankanar, which is the seat of the Emperor of Ceylon. It is built in a valley between two hills, upon an estuary called the estuary of rubies, and in which rubies are found. Without the city is the mosque of the great Othman of Shiraz, which both the Emperor and the people of the city visit, and for which they have great respect.

The Emperor is an infidel, and is known by the name of Kinar. He has a white elephant, upon which he rides on feast days, having first placed on his head some very large rubies. This is the only white elephant of the world.

---

* Knox says, "the king careth not to make his country easy to travel, but desires to keep it intricate."—Ceylon, p. 5.

† According to Knox, a certain former king granted permission to the Mohammedans to build a mosque at Candy, with other privileges.—Ceylon, p. 171. See the notes, p. 42.

‡ This is, perhaps, a corruption of the Tattanour of Knox, "in which," he says, "stands the royal and chief city Candid."—Ceylon, p. 3. The district of Candelacrre (which approaches nearer in sound to our word), might, indeed, have been the seat of royalty in his times.

§ According to the list of Emperors subjoined to Knox’s Ceylon, p. 310, Dalam Agali Raja must have ruled Ceylon at this time; his reign continuing from A.D. 1327 to 1347. The name Agali, however, seems much nearer in sound to our Ayari (أياري). In that case, either our traveller or the author of that list has mistaken a Governor for the Emperor. All that can be said, perhaps, is that the coincidence in the name is curious. Knox tells us, however, that this country formerly consisted of nine kingdoms.—Ceylon, p. 63.
I had ever seen.* The ruby and čarbuncle are found only in this country. These are not allowed to be exported, on account of the great estimation in which they are held: nor are they elsewhere dug up. But the ruby is found all over Ceylon. It is considered as property, and is sold by the inhabitants. When they dig for the ruby, they find a white stone abound- ing with fissures. Within this the ruby is placed. They cut it out, and give it to the polishers, who polish it until the ruby is separated from the stone. Of this there is the red, the yellow, and the cerulean. They call it the čManikam. † It is a custom among them, that every ruby amounting in value to six of the golden dinars current in those parts, shall go the Emperor, who gives its value and takes it. What falls short of this goes to his attendants. All the women in the island of Ceylon have traces of coloured rubies, which they put upon their hands and legs as chains, in the place of bracelets and ancle-rings. I once saw upon the head of the white elephant seven rubies, each of which was larger than a hen’s egg. I also saw in the possession of the king ČAyari Shakarti, a saucer made of ruby, as large as the palm of the hand, in which he kept oil of aloes. I was much surprised at it, when the King said to me, We have them much larger than this.

We then proceeded from Kankär, and came to a cave known by the name of ČIstā Mahmūd, then to the estuary of ČBüzūta, ‡ which in their language signifies monkies, animals which are in great numbers in the mountains of these parts. These monkies are black, and have long tails: the beard of the males is like that of a man. I was told by the Sheikh Othmān and his son, two pious and credible persons, that the monkies have a leader, whom they follow as if he were their king. About his head is tied a turban com-

---

* Knox saw an elephant in the king’s possession “spotted or speckled all the body over.” Ceylon, p. 41.

† This is most likely a Sanscrit or Pali word, although we do not find it in Mr. Wilson’s Sanscrit Dictionary. It is to be found, however, in the Bengali Vocabulary of Mr. Forster, as well as in the Bengali Dictionary of Dr. Carey, the latter of whom gives it in the two following forms, viz. মানিক and মানিকো māniko and mānikyo, a precious stone, a ruby. Every traveller, I believe, bears testimony to the production of precious stones of this sort in this island, but I believe they are not very valuable.

‡ This appears to me to be a corruption of the Persian word بژن būza, a monkey. See Knox’s Ceylon, pp. 49-50, who describes them as exceedingly daring and mischievous.
posed of the leaves of trees; and he reclines upon a staff. At his right and left hand are four monkies, with rods in their hands, all of which stand at his head whenever the leading monkey sits. His wives and children are daily brought in on these occasions, who sit down before him; then comes a number of monkeys, which sit and form a sort of assembly about him. One of the four monkeys then addresses them, and they disperse. After this each of them comes with a *nut, a lemon, or some of the mountain fruit, which he throws down before the leader. He then eats, together with his wives, children, and the four principal monkeys; they then all disperse. One of the Jogees also told me, that he once saw the four monkeys standing in the presence of the leader, and beating another monkey with rods; after this they plucked off all his hair. I was also told by respectable persons, that if one of these monkeys happens to attack, and be too strong for a young woman, he will ravish her.

We next proceeded to the *estuary of reeds, where rubies are also found. The next place we arrived at is known by "The house of the old woman," which is the farthest inhabited part of the island of Ceylon. Our next stage was the cave of 'Bábá Táhir, who was one of the pious: the next, the cave of 'Sibak, an infidel king, who retired to this place for the purposes of devotion. Here we saw the *fierce leech, which they call the "zalaw. It remains in trees, or in the grass near water. When any one comes near to it, it springs upon him, and the part of the body attacked will bleed profusely. People generally provide themselves with a lemon for this occasion, which they squeeze over him, and then he drops off. The place upon which the leech has fastened they cut out with a wooden knife made for that purpose.

It is told of a pilgrim who passed by this place, that a leech fastened upon him, so that the skin swelled; and, as he did not squeeze the lemon on him, the blood flowed out and he died.*

---

* Knox describes these leeches as being rather troublesome than dangerous; his words are:
"There is a sort of leeches of the nature of ours, only differing in colour and bigness; for they are of a dark reddish colour like the skin of bacon, and as big as a goose-quill; in length some two or three inches. At first, when they are young, they are no bigger than a horse-hair, so that We next came to a place called the seven caves, and after this to the ridge of Alexander, in which is a cave and a well of water. At this place is the entrance to the mountain. This mountain of Serendib is one of the highest in the world: we saw it from the sea at the distance of nine days. When we ascended it, we saw the clouds passing between us and its foot. On it is a great number of trees, the leaves of which never fall. There are also flowers of various colours, with the red rose, about the size of the palm of the hand, upon the leaves of which they think they can read the name of God and of his Prophet. There are two roads on the mountain leading to the foot (of Adam); the one is known by "the way of Bābā," the other, by "the way of Māmā," by which they mean Adam and Eve. The way called that of Māmā is easy: to it the travellers come upon their first visiting the place; but every one who has travelled only upon this, is considered as if he had not made the pilgrimage at all. The way named Bābā is rough, and difficult of ascent. At the foot of the mountain where the entrance is, there is a minaret named after Alexander, and a fountain of water. The ancients have cut something like steps, upon which one may ascend, and have fixed in iron pins, to which chains are appended; and upon these those who ascend take hold. Of these chains there are ten in number, the last of which is termed "the chain of witness," because, when one has arrived at this, and looks down, the frightful notion seizes him that he shall fall. After the tenth chain is the cave of Khizr; in which there is a large space; and at the entrance a they can scarce be seen. In dry weather none of them appear, but immediately upon the fall of rains, the grass and woods are full of them. These leeches seize upon the legs of travellers. Some will tie a piece of lemon and salt in a rag, and fasten it unto a stick, and ever and anon strike it upon their legs to make the leeches drop off: others will scrape them off with a reed, cut flat and sharp in the fashion of a knife," &c.—Ceylon, pp. 48-9. See also the addition by Philalethes, p. 264.

* "There are roses red and white, and several sorts of sweet smelling flowers."—Ceylon, p. 38.
† "Pilgrims and travellers climb to the sacred summit of Adam's Peak by means of an iron chain, which is fastened to the rock, and the links of which serve as footsteps."—Knox's Ceylon, Add. p. 210.
‡ Various are the opinions of the Orientals as to this personage, whether he was a prophet, a saint, or an angel; whether he was Moses, Jeremiah, Elias, Elisha, St. George, &c. &c. However, all agree in thinking very highly of him; some believing him to be in heaven, others well of water,* full of fish, which is also called after his name. Of those, however, no one takes any. Near this, and on each side of the path, is a cistern cut in the rock. (In this cave of Khizr the pilgrims leave their provisions, and whatever else they have, and then ascend about two miles to the top of the mountain, to the place of (Adam’s) foot. The holy foot (mark) is in a stone, so that its place is depressed. The length of the impression is eleven spans. The Chinese came here at some former time, and cut out from this stone the place of the great toe, together with the stone about it, and placed it in a temple in the city of Zaitūn: and pilgrimages are made to it from the most distant parts of China. In the rock, too, in which the impression of the foot is, there are nine excavations which have been cut out: into these the infidel pilgrims put gold, rubies, and other jewels: and hence you will see the Fakeers, who have come as pilgrims to the well of Khizr, (racing to get first to the excavations, in order to obtain what may be in them. We, however, found nothing but a little gold with some rubies, which we gave to our guide.

It is customary for the pilgrims to remain in the cave of Khizr for three days; and during this time to visit the foot both morning and evening. This we did; and when the three days were expired we returned by the path of Māmā, and came down to the cave of ʻShīsham, who is ʻSheth, the son of Adam. After this we arrived at the fish port, then at the village of ʻKarkūn, then at the village of ʻDīdīnūh, then at the village of ʻAt Kalanja, where the tomb of ʻAbū Abd Allah Ibn Khafṣīf is situated. All these villages and tilled lands are upon the mountain. At its foot, and near the path, is a 'cypress, which is large and never drops the leaf. But as to its leaves, there is no getting to them by any means; and these people’s heads are turned with some strange and false notions respecting still on the earth, but invisible. Mr. Hamaker, in his notes on the “Liber de expugnatione Memphidis et Alexandriam,” has perhaps given the greatest and most authentic variety of opinions about him. See pp. 161-2, with the authorities there cited; and the Kāmoos, sub voce خضر, which he has not noticed.

* This is, probably, the well mentioned by Philalethes in his Additions to Knox’s Ceylan; p. 212.
them. I saw a number of Jogees about the tree, waiting for the falling of one; for they suppose that any person eating one of them, will grow young again, however old he may be. Beneath this mountain is the great estuary at which the rubies are obtained; its water appears wonderfully blue to the eye.

From this place we proceeded, and in two days arrived at the city of *Dinaur, which is large, and inhabited by merchants. In this is an idol, known by the same name, placed in a large temple; and in which there are about a thousand Brahmins and Jogees, and five hundred young women, daughters of the nobility of India, who sing and dance all night before the image. The officers of the city revenue attend upon the image. The idol is of gold, and as large as a man. In the place of eyes it has two large rubies; which, as I was told, shine in the night-time like two lighted candles.

From this place we travelled to *Kāli, which is a large town; then to *Kolambū (Colombo), which is the finest and largest city in Serendib. After three days we arrived at the city of *Battāla, from which we had been sent by its king, with his servants, to visit (Adam’s) foot. This we entered, and were received honourably by the king, who furnished us with provisions.

* This is, probably, the Bagaukah, or god-tree of Knox, which, he says, “is very great and spreading; they have a very great veneration for these trees, worshipping them upon a tradition that the Budhou, a great god among them, when he was upon the earth, did use to sit under this kind of trees.” It is held meritorious to plant them, which they say he that does, shall die within a short while after, and go to heaven. That is, as our traveller, perhaps, understood it, shall be re-born into another and better state of being: the Buddhists holding the metempsychosis.
CHAPTER XXI.

Return to the coast of Coromandel—Arrival at the palace of Ghīāth Oddīn—Short account of the governors of those parts—War with the Hindūs—The Hindū king taken and slain—Fattan—Different animals kept in the same cage—Matarāh—Ghīāth Oddīn dies—Succeeded by his brother's son, Nāṣir Oddīn—Fattan—Kawām—Hīnaur—Taken prisoner by the Hindūs—Kālīkū—Arrival at the Maldives islands—Bengal—Sadākōwān—Mountains of Kāmrū—The Sheikh Telbīā—Miracles ascribed to him—Jebnak—Blue River—Satarkōwān—Barahnakār—Produce—Character of the people—Customs.

After this, we sailed with the vessel, which had waited for us, to the Maabar districts. But when we had made half the voyage, the wind rose upon us, and we were near drowning. We then cut down our mast, and every moment expected death. Providence, however, was favourable to us; for there came boats from the infidel inhabitants of the Maabar, which brought us to land. I then told them, that I was the messenger of their King, and that he was my relation; upon which they landed us, and treated us very honourably. They wrote to the King on this, as I also did, telling him what had happened. After three days came an Emir from the Sultan, with a number of cavalry; for me they brought a palanquin and ten horses, to carry me. We then set out for the presence of the King.

Ghīāth Oddīn El Dāmgānī, who at this time enjoyed the supreme power in the Maabar districts. These parts formerly belonged to the Emperor of Hindūstān, the Sultan Mohammed. They were then seized by the Sherif, Jalāl Oddīn Hasan Shāh, who held them for five years. After this he appointed 'Alāā Oddīn, one of his Emīrs, as his successor; but he was killed in a warlike excursion by an accidental arrow. After this, his brother's son, Koth Oddīn, came to the supreme rule; but he was killed, in consequence of his bad conduct. After this, one of the Emīrs of the Sherīf Jalāl Oddīn came into power, that is, this Ghīāth Oddīn, who married a daughter of Jalāl Oddīn; the mother of which daughter was sister to my wife when I was Judge in Dehli.

When I had got near his house, he sent one of his chamberlains to meet me; and, when I entered, he received me graciously, and gave me a seat. He was at this time in his camp; so he erected three tents for me opposite those of his Judge, "Sadar El Zamān. He also sent me a carpet, provisions, and presents.

This was a very warlike prince; and as he happened to be in the neighbourhood of an infidel, whose army amounted to one hundred and twenty thousand men, an attempt was made to take these Maabar districts out of the hands of the Mohammedans. This infidel prince accordingly made an attack on the town of "Kiān, which belongs to the Maabar, and in which there were six thousand soldiers, put them to the rout, and besieged it. This was reported to the Sultan, and that the town was nearly lost. He then marched out with his forces, which amounted to seven thousand, every man of whom took off his turban, and hung it upon the neck of his horse, which is, in India, an intimation that they are bent upon death. They then made a charge upon the infidel king, while his men were taking their mid-day repose and besieging "Kiān, and put them to the rout. The greater part of them was killed; nor did one, except the cavalry, or those who concealed themselves in the woods, escape. The Sultan was taken prisoner, his wealth seized, himself afterwards killed, and I saw his body hanging against a wall in the town.

I then left the King’s station, until he should return from his expedition, and came to the city of "Fattan, which is large and beautiful, and situated upon the sea-shore. Its harbour is truly wonderful. In this city there are grapes and good "pomegranates. I saw in this place the "Sheikh Sālih Mohammed of Nisābūr, one of the fanatical Fakeers who suffer their hair to flow down loosely upon their shoulders. This man had seven foxes with him, all of which ate and sat with the Fakeers. There were also with him thirty other Fakeers, one of whom had a gazelle with a lion in the same place, which was unmolested by the lion. I then proceeded for the purpose of presenting myself to the Sultan at the city of "Maturāb, which is large, and not unlike Dehli. In this I found a great mortality, which had destroyed the greatest part of the inhabitants. The King, Ghiāth Oddin returned at this time to his palace sick, and soon after died. He appointed his brother’s son, "Nāsir Oddin, to be his successor. In this place, too, I caught a fever which nearly destroyed me; but, as Providence restored me to health, I requested permission of the King Nāṣir Oddin to proceed on my journey, which was granted. I then returned to the city of Pattan (Pattan), and thence by sea to Kawkam, one of the cities of Malabar, where I remained three months, on account of the sickness which had happened to me. From this place I set out to visit the Sultan ⁴Jamāl Oddin of Hinaur, who had received a promise from me to return. The infidel Hindoos, however, came out against us in twelve war vessels between (the last place mentioned and) Fākanūn; and, giving us severe battle, at length overcame us, and took our ship. They then stripped us of all. From me they took all the jewels and rubies given me by the King of Battāla, as well as the additional presents of the pious Sheikhs, leaving me only one pair of trousers: and thus were we landed nearly naked. I then returned to Kālikūt, and entered one of the mosques. When some of the lawyers and merchants, who had known me in Dehli, heard of my situation, they clothed and received me honourably. I then thought of returning to the Emperor of Hindustan: but I was afraid of his severity, and that he might ask me, why I had separated from the present. I then went on board another ship, and this pleased me, and returned to the Maldive Islands, on account of the little boy I had left there. When I had seen him, however, I left him in kindness to his mother. The Vizier then furnished me with provisions, and I sailed for Bengal, which is an extensive and plentiful country. I never saw a country in which provisions were so cheap. I there saw one of the religious of the west, who told me, that he had bought provisions for himself and his family for a whole year with eight dirhems. The first town I entered here was Sadkāwān, which is large and situated on the sea-shore.

* The name of this place is variously written; in some cases we have Sutirkāwān, in others Sūtrakāwān according to our MSS. In the Tārīkh Bada'ī'ī, we have Surtakāwān and Sūtrakāwān. It was, no doubt, the name of a place then in Bengal; but whether it is still in existence or not the geographers do not inform us. We are told, in the author just mentioned, that Mohammed Shah made an expedition, in A.H. 741, A.D. 1340, to this place, and took Fakhr Oddin, the king
HINDUSTAN.

The king of Bengal was at this time *Fakhr Oddin: he was an eminent man, kind to strangers and persons of the Sūfi persuasion: but I did not present myself to him, nor did I see him, because he was opposed to the Emperor, and was then in open rebellion against him. From *Sad-kāwān I travelled for the mountains of *Kāmrū, which are at the distance of one month from this place. These are extensive mountains, and they join the mountains of Thibet, where there are musk gazelles. The inhabitants of these mountains are, like the Turks, famous for their attention to 'magic.' My object in visiting these mountains was, to meet one of the saints, namely, the Sheikh *Jālāl Oddin of Tebriz. This Sheikh was one of the greatest saints, and one of those singular individuals who had the power of working great and notable miracles. He had also lived to a remarkably great age. He told me, that he had seen *El Mostaasim the Calif in Bagdad: and his companions told me afterwards that he died at the age of one hundred and fifty years; that he fasted through a space of about forty years, never breaking his fast till he had fasted throughout ten successive days. He had a cow, on the milk of which he usually breakfasted; and his practice was to sit up all night. It was by his means that the people of these mountains became Mohammedans; and on this account it was, that he resided among them. One of his companions told me, that on the day before his death he invited them all to come to him; he then said to them: To-morrow I depart from you, Deo volente, and my vicegerent with you is God besides whom there is no other God. When the evening of the following day had arrived, and he had performed the last prostration of the evening prayer, he was taken by God. On the side of the cave in which he had resided was found a grave ready dug, and by it a winding sheet and burial spices. The people then washed and buried him in them, and said their prayers over him. When I was on my jour-

mentioned by our traveller, prisoner, carried him to Laknoutt, and there put him to death. The words are: در سنه احدي واربعين وسبع مايه سالان محمد بقصد گلری سارگاران رفته فخر الدين زا پاسرکي كرده در لکنوتی آورده و قتل رسانيد. There must be a trifling error in one or both of these dates.

2 C 2
ney to see this Sheikh, four of his companions met me at the distance of two days, and told me, that the Sheikh had said to the Fakeers who were with them, A western religious traveller is coming to you: go out and meet him. It was, said they, by the order of the Sheikh that we came to you; notwithstanding the fact, that he had no knowledge whatever of my circumstances, except what he had by divine revelation. I went with them accordingly to his cell without the cave, near which there was no building whatever. The people of this country are partly Mohammedans, and partly infidels; both of whom visit the Sheikh and bring valuable presents. On these the Fakeers, and other persons who arrive here, subsist. As for the Sheikh himself, he confines himself to the milk of his cow, as already mentioned. When I presented myself to him, he arose and embraced me. He then asked me of my country and travels, of which I informed him. He then said to the Fakeers: Treat him honourably. They accordingly carried me to the cell, and kept me as their guest for three days. On the day I presented myself to the Sheikh he had on a religious garment, made of fine goat's hair. I was astonished at it, and said to myself, I wish the Sheikh would give it me. When I went in to bid him farewell, he arose and went to the side of the cave, took off the goat's hair garment, as well as the fillet of his head and his sleeves, and put them on me.

The Fakeers then told me, that it was not his practice to put on this garment: and that he had put it on only on the occasion of my coming, for he had said to them: This garment will be wished for by a Mogrebine; but an infidel king shall take it from him, and shall give it to our brother Borhân Oddin of Sāgīrj, whose it is, and for whose use it has been made. When I was told this by the Fakeers, I said: As I have a blessing from the Sheikh, and as he has clothed me with his own clothes, I will never enter with them into the presence of any king either infidel or Moslem."

After this I left the Sheikh. It happened, however, after a considerable time, that I entered the country of China, and went as far as the city of Khansū. Upon a certain occasion, when my companions had all left me on account of the press of the multitude, and I had this garment on, and was on the road, I met the Vizier with a large body. He happened to cast his eyes upon me, and called me to him. He then took me by the hand, and asked me why I had come to this country; nor did he leave me until we came to the King’s palace. I wished to go, but he would not allow me to do so, but took me in to the King, who interrogated me about the Mohammedan sovereigns; to all which I gave answers. He then cast his eyes upon the garment, and began to praise it, and said to the Vizier: Take it off him. To this I could offer no resistance, so he took it; but ordered me ten dresses of honour, and a horse with its furniture, and money for my necessities. This changed my mind. I then called to mind the words of the Sheikh, that an infidel king should take it; and my wonder was increased.

After a year had elapsed, I entered the palace of the King of China at "Khān Bālik," my object was to visit the cell of the Sheikh Borhān Oddin of Sāgirj. I did so, and found him reading, and the very goat’s-hair garment I have been mentioning was on him. I was surprised at this, and was turning the garment over in my hand, when he said, Why do you turn the garment over, do you know it? I said, I do; it is the garment which the King of Khansā took from me. He answered: This garment was made for me by my brother Jalāl Oddin, for my own use, who also wrote to me to say that the garment would come to me by such a person. He then produced the letter, which I read, and could not help wondering at the exactness of the Sheikh. I then told him of the origin of the story. He answered, My brother Jalāl Oddin was superior to all this: he had a perfect control over human nature; but now he has been taken to God’s mercy. He then said, I have been told, that he performed the morning prayer every day in Mecca; that he went on the pilgrimage annually, because he was never to be seen on the two days of Arafat and the feast, no one knowing whither he had gone.

When, however, I had bid farewell to the Sheikh Jalāl Oddin, I travelled to the city of ʻJabnak, which is very large and beautiful; it is divided by

---

Cambalu, or Pekin, as will be shewn hereafter.

هو يصرّف في الكورين See the note at page 64.
the river which descends from the mountains of Kāmrū, called the 'Blue River. By this one may travel to Bengal and the countries of 'Laknouti. Upon it are gardens, mills, and villages, which it refreshes and gladdens like the Nile of Egypt. The inhabitants of these parts are infidels, tributary to the Mohammedans. By this river I travelled for fifteen days, proceeding from road to road, till I came to the city of 'Sutirkāwān.* Here I found a junk which was proceeding to 6Jāva (Sumatra), between which and this place there is a distance of forty days. I proceeded, therefore, and after a voyage of fifty days, came to the countries of the 4Barahnakār,† a people who have mouths like those of dogs. This is a vile race. They have no religion, neither that of the Hindoos nor any other. They live in houses made of reeds upon the sea-shore. Their trees are those of the 'banana, the 3fawfel and the 1betel-nut. Their men are of the same form with ourselves, except that their mouths are like those of dogs;‡ but the women have mouths like other folks. The men go naked, without the least covering whatever: one only among them (I saw) who had put his virilia into a painted hollow reed, which was hung to his belly. The women cover themselves with the leaves of trees. One who had had much intercourse with them, told me that they copulate like beasts, without the least concealment. The men will have thirty or more wives; but adultery is not committed. Should any one, however, be convicted of this crime, his punishment is, to be hanged till he is dead, unless he brings either a friend or slave who is willing to be hanged for him: he may then go free. The sentence for the woman is, that the King shall command all his servants to trample upon † Nearest in sound to this, as far as I can see, appears to be the Carnacobar of our maps; but then we must by rather a violent metathesis make the ƙ and ƙ change places, and otherwise vary the orthography. The description, however, seems to answer sufficiently near to suit the inhabitants of the Nicobar islands, of which this is one: if, indeed, our Barahnakār is not the Barnagul or Barnagar of Hamilton, chap. xxxiv.; but this seems scarcely possible.

---

* See the note at p. 194.

‡ Among some of the inhabitants of the Eastern Archipelago, I believe, they have a custom of making their lips project outwards, by means of a stick so fixed in their teeth as always to keep its place. Not long ago a family thus disfigured was exhibited in London.
her one after another, till she dies: she is then thrown into the sea. The women resist the men to a degree beyond their nature. But the men, from their baseness of character, and fear about the women, will not allow any one of the merchants to proceed on the sea in the front of their houses. They will merely consult and trade with them, carrying them fresh water on the backs of elephants. When we put into their port, their King came to us riding upon an elephant, upon which there was something like a saddle-cloth made of skin. The King himself was dressed in goat-skin, the hairy part of which he had turned outwards; upon his head was a turban of coloured silk, and in his hand a short silver spear. With him was a number of his relations riding upon elephants, and using a language which no one could understand, unless he had been some time among them. We sent him the usual present: for every ship putting into any port of India is expected to send a present to the magistrate of the place. Now these people buy and receive as presents, she elephants, over which they put their saddle-cloth, but do not completely clothe them. But any ship not giving them their present, they will so work upon with their magic that the sea will rise upon it, and it will perish; or they will return upon and injure it.

CHAPTER XXII.

Arrival at Sumatra—Fruits—Currency—City of Sumatra—Introduction to the King—Royal bounty—Religion—Shi'a sect of Mohammedans—Provisions for a voyage to China—Arrival at Java—Natural productions—Camphor—Cloves—Aloes—Frankincense—Superstitious custom for the production of good Camphor—Description of Nutmeg—Mace—Arrival at Káculo—Customs in Java—Voyage in the Pacific—Arrival at the country of Tawáfas—Warlike character of its inhabitants; and of the Women in particular—Kalúka—Reigning Queen—Apparently of Turkish extraction—Regiment of Women.

We then left this place, and in fifteen days arrived at the island of 'Java,' the place from which the incense of Java receives its name.* This is a

* We are told in Crawfurd's History of the Islands of the Indian Archipelago, vol. i. p. 517, &c. that the frankincense or benzoin is produced only in Sumatra and Borneo, and (p. 516) that green and blooming island. The greater part of its trees are, the cocoa, the cawf, and the betel-nut, cloves, the Indian aloe, the ḍshakī, the ḍbaransakī (barkī?),* grapes, the sweet orange, and the camphor reed. The inhabitants traffic with pieces of tin and gold, not melted, but in the ore (as coin). They have not many rich perfumes. More of these are to be found in the countries of the infidels (Hindoos perhaps). Nor are there many in the Mohammedan countries.

When we had arrived at the shores of this place we put into the port, which is a small village, in which there are some houses, as well as maga-azines for the merchants; and from this the city of Sumatra† is at the distance of four miles. At that place resides the King. When we had got into port the magistrature of the place wrote to the King, informing him of my arrival, who sent one of his nobles, and the judge who attended the presence, to meet me. With them was sent one of the King’s own saddle horses for myself, and other horses for my companions: I mounted, therefore, and set out for Sumatra. The King, at that time, was ‘El Malik El Zahir Jalal Oddin, one of the most eminent and generous of princes;‡ of the sect of Shāfī, and a lover of the professors of Mohammedan law.
The learned are admitted to his society, and hold free converse with him, while he proposes questions for their discussion. He is a great hero for the faith; and so humble, that he walks to his prayers on the Friday. He is too strong for his infidel neighbours; they therefore pay tribute to him.
The inhabitants of his districts are of the sect of Shāfī; and they attend the camphor is found only in the same places, if we except Japan. In another part of his work, vol. ii. p. 481, &c. we find that no Mohammedan prince reigned in Java so early as the times of our traveller; and from the mention of Sumatra in our next paragraph, it seems reasonable to conclude, that the Java here mentioned must be Sumatra. A little farther on we have some account of Mul Java (ملا جاوا) which must be the Java of our maps. See also the Histoire des Mongols, tom. i. p. 612-13, note. Mr. Maraden tells us, Hist. Sumat., p. 148, that the camphor is produced in Sumatra only.

---

* These have already been described as growing in Hindūstān, see p. 105, where a passage is adduced from Mr. Crawfurd to shew that they are also produced in these islands.

† Sometimes written in our MS. شمَّار Shumārakh.

him willingly on his warlike expeditions. When I came to his residence, his Viceroy met me in an obliging manner, bringing with him dresses of honour,* which he put upon me and upon my companions. They then brought us victuals, with the fawzel-nut and betel-leaf. After this, I returned to the lodgings which they had prepared for me in a garden, and had completely furnished with couches, and every necessary utensil. Morning and evening they brought us the tamarisk and other fruits from the Vizier. On the third day, which was the Friday, they told me that the King was coming to the mosque, and that my first interview with him would be there. I accordingly went thither; and at last the Sultan came. I saluted him; he then took me by the hand, and asked me of the King of India, and of my travels; and I answered him accordingly. After prayers he sat and discussed religious questions with the professors of divinity, being dressed as they were, until the evening. This is his and their usual practice; nor does he ever come to the mosque, except in the garb of a ‘professor of divinity. When the evening is past, he enters a vestry in the mosque, and there changes his robes for those of royalty, with an upper garment of richly embroidered silk. He then rides to his residence.

I remained partaking of his hospitality for fifteen days, and then requested permission to pursue my journey to China: a thing which he is not always prepared to grant. He gave me permission, however, and fitted me out with provisions, fruit, and money. May God reward him. He also put me on board a junk bound for China.

I then proceeded for one and twenty days through his dominions, after which we arrived at the city of ‘Mul Jāva,† which is the first part of the territories of the infidels. The extent of these territories is that of two months’ journey. In these is found almost every sort of perfume. They produce the ‘aloe, the ‘kākulī, and the ‘kamāri, ‘Kākula and ‘Kamāra being situated in these countries.‡ But in the territories of ‘El Malik El Zāhir

* واحضر بقیمه فيها أعظمان تكسانی واسحابی
† This is, no doubt, the Java of our maps.
‡ See notes to page 184. Mr. Crawfurd, in his History of the Indian Archipelago, vol. i. p. 519, says, speaking of the lignum aloes, "if it be a native of the Indian islands, the countries in Java, there is only the frankincense of Java, camphor, some cloves, and Indian aloes. But we will now say what perfumes we ourselves witnessed, in the territories both of the Moslems and the infidels. Of this is the frankincense, the tree of which is small, and about the height of a man: its branches are like those of the artichoke. The leaves are small and thin; and the incense is a gum which is formed in the branches. More of this, however, is found in the territories of the Mohammedans than in those of the infidels. As to the camphor, its tree is a reed, like the reed of our own countries, except only that it is thicker, and the knots are longer. The camphor is formed within it; and when the reed is broken, both camphor and myrrh are found within the knot, and of the same form with it.* But the camphor will not form within the reed until some animal be sacrificed at the root. The best camphor is exceedingly cooling, and one dram of it will kill by bringing on suffocation. This is called with them the Khar-

* I have some doubts whether this is correctly translated. The passage stands thus:

which produce it have not yet been ascertained." In Abu Zaid El Hasan's Commentary on the two Arab Travellers translated by Renaudot, this place is termed the "country of Komar," from whence, it is said, they bring the wood-aloes called hud al komari.—Pinkerton's Voyages, &c. vol. vii. p. 208.

* Of the camphor there are various sorts, the Elkansuri, the Riājī, in the next place the Asād, the Aspharak, and the Azrak. It is mixed with its wood, and is extracted by being sublimed. Some say that its tree is large, and will shade many men. The leopard is found near it. People do not go near it except at a certain time of the year. This is what some think. This tree grows in parts of China." Dr. Darwin tells us that criminals are employed to get the gum, and that they can get it only when the wind is in certain quarters. Now, if there is a superstitious belief that men must be sacrificed in order to produce the camphor, it is probable that criminals are selected for that purpose: and if the tree can be frequented only at certain times of the year, on account of the wild beasts, this may have furnished the other part of the story; but, as the Arabs say on occasions like this, واللّه أعلم, but God knows best.
dāna; it is that, at the roots of which a man has been sacrificed. Young elephants, however, are sometimes sacrificed instead of a man.* As to the Indian 'aloe, its tree resembles that of the 'oak, except only that its bark is thin. Its leaves are like those of the oak, but it has no fruit; nor does the tree grow large. Its roots are long and extended, and are scented within. The leaves and trunk, however, have no perfume within them. Among the Moslems this tree is considered property; but, among the infidels, the greatest part of it is not so considered. That which is private property is found at Kākula, and is the best sort. This they sell to the inhabitants of Java for clothing. Of the Kamāri species, some is soft enough to receive an impression like wax. With regard to the 'Atās, when one cuts off any of its roots, and buries it in the earth for some months, none of its strength will be lost: this is the most wonderful property of it. As to the clove, it is a thick and high tree. It is found in greater numbers in the countries of the infidels than of the Moslems. It is not claimed as property, on account of its great abundance. That part of it which is taken into different countries is the 'idān (wood)† What is called the *flowers of the clove in our countries, is that which drops from its blossom, and is like the blossom of the orange. The fruit of the clove is the *nutmeg, which is known by *the scented nut; the *bark which forms upon it is the *mace.‡ All that has here been related, I saw with my own eyes.

* The MSS. differ in this place; the only one which is intelligible gives it thus:

هو الذي يذهب عند اصل قسمه اللذي ويقوم مقام اللذي في ذلكbis الصفار Mr. Crawfurd, however, describes the tree as being very large, just as Avicenna has done. See his History of the Indian Archipelago, vol. i. p. 515, iii. p. 418.

† It is said in a note in the margin of one of the MSS. أقول لعل ذات الذي يسميه آبلة فرنة التفونل الذي يتجه إنه التفونل ابنه إنه كبرى النازع El Babass, of which our word mace is no doubt a corruption. Mr. Crawfurd describes the nutmeg-tree as resembling that of the clove (vol. i. p. 503), and hence, perhaps, our traveller has been mistaken. “Appearing through the interstices of the mace,” says Mr. Crawfurd, “is the nutmeg, which is loosely enclosed in a thin shell of a black glossy appearance, not difficultly broken.”—P. 504, ib.

2 D 2
From this place we went on to the port of Kākula: it is a beautiful city surrounded with a stone wall of such a breadth, that three elephants may walk abreast upon it. The first thing I saw upon its shores was the wood of the Indian aloe, placed upon the backs of elephants; this they lay up in their houses, just as we do fire-wood, except that it is cheaper among them. The merchants will purchase a whole elephant-load of it for one cotton dress, which is, with these people, more precious than silk.* Elephants are in very great abundance here, and are used for riding and burden. Each man ties his elephant to his door. The shopkeepers tie them to their shops; and in the evening they will ride out, purchase, and bring home, any thing they may want, upon them. This is the custom of all the people of China and 'Khotā.

The King of 'Mul Jāva† is an infidel. I was introduced to him without his palace; he was then sitting on the bare ground, and his nobles were standing before him. His troops are presented before him on foot, no one in these parts having a horse except the King, for they ride on elephants generally. The King, on this occasion, called me to him, and I went. He then ordered a carpet to be spread for me to sit upon. I said to his interpreter, how can I sit upon a carpet, while the Sultan sits upon the ground? He answered: This is his custom, and he practises it for the sake of humility: but you are a guest; and, besides, you come from a great Prince. It is, therefore, right that you should be distinguished. I then sat, and he asked me about the King Jamāl Oddūn; to which I gave suitable replies. He then said: You are now my guest for three days; you may then return. I one day saw, in the assembly of this prince, a man with a knife in his hand, which he placed upon his own neck; he then made a long speech, not a word of which I could understand; he then firmly grasped the knife, and its sharpness and the force with which he urged it were such, that he severed his head from his body, and it fell on the ground.‡ I was wonder-

---

* According to Mr. Crawfurd, China at this time affords one of the best markets for cotton in the world.—Vol. iii. p. 350, &c.
† It appears from Mr. Crawfurd's work, vol. ii. p. 481, &c. that the reigning princes of Java must have been Pagans at this time.
‡ A similar act is recorded by Mr. Crawfurd, but ascribed to a different cause, vol. i. p. 41.

"About ten years ago," says he, "the son of a chief of the province of Jipang, possessed ing much at the circumstance, when the King said to me: Does any among you do such a thing as this? I answered, I never saw one do so. He smiled, and said: These our servants do so, out of their love to us. He then ordered the body to be taken up and burnt. He next went out in procession to the burning, in front of his prime minister, the rest of his nobles, his army, and the peasantry; and on this occasion he made provision for the family and relations of the deceased, whose memory is greatly honoured in consequence of this act. One who had been present at the assembly, told me that the speech he made was a declaration of his love to the Sultan, and that on this account he had killed himself, just as his father had done for the father of the present King, and his grandfather for the King's grandfather. I then returned; but was sent for by the King, to be his guest for the three days. After this I proceeded by sea; and after a voyage of four and thirty days, came into the "calm," that is, the still, "sea." It has a red appearance, which is thought to be occasioned by the lands near it. This sea has neither wind, wave, nor motion, notwithstanding its extent. It is on account of the calm state of this sea, that three other vessels are attached to each of the Chinese junks, by which these junks, together with their own cargoes, are carried forward by oars. Of these there are twenty large ones, which may be compared to the masts of ships. To each one thirty men are appointed, and stand in two rows. By this means they draw the junks along, being connected by strong ropes like "cables. This sea we passed in seven and thirty days, which we did with the greatest with a belief of his own invulnerability, put the matter to the test, and drawing his kris, killed himself on the spot."

* The MSS. have here, as well as in the former description given of these vessels.

From the description here given of this sea, there can be no doubt that it received its name from the Arabian merchants (i.e. the still sea) for the same reason that Magellan called it the Pacific. What the island was at which our traveller touched, it is impossible to say with certainty. I suppose, however, it might have been that of the Celebes, as the distance and situation seems sufficiently to answer the time and description of his voyage. Of the word Tawallah I can make nothing, because, as this seems to have been the name of the king then reigning, that name may have died with him. I leave it to others, however, to determine what place this is.
ease. We then came to the country of 'Tawālisi, which is thus named after its King, as is also his whole country. It is extensive; and the King will oppose the Emperor of China. He possesses a great number of junks; and with these he will fight the Chinese, until they offer conditions of peace. The people are all idolaters; handsome in appearance, and resembling the Turks. They are much inclined to a copper colour. They have great bravery and strength. Their women ride on horseback, they excel in throwing the javelin, and will fight like men in battle. We put into one of their ports which is near 'Kailūka, one of their largest and most beautiful cities. The magistrate of this place is a daughter of the King 'Wahi Ardūjā.

She sent for the persons who were in the ship, and entertained them; and when she was informed of my being there, she also sent for me. I went to her, and saw her upon the throne of government. Before her were her women with papers in their hands on the affairs of state, which they presented to her. She saluted and welcomed me in Turkish; she then called for ink and paper in my presence, and wrote with her own hand the 'Bismilla, and shewed it to me. She then inquired about the countries I had seen; and of these I gave her suitable information. She said, I wonder at the great wealth of India: but, I must conquer it for myself. She then ordered me some dresses with money and provisions for my journey, and treated me with great politeness.

I was told that in the army of this Queen there is a regiment of women, who fight with her like men: that she made war upon a certain king, who was her enemy; and that, when her army was near being put to the rout, she made so furious an onset upon the king with her regiment, that she overcame him, put him to death, and routed his whole force. She then took possession of all he had, and brought the slaughtered king's head to her father, who accordingly gave her the government of these parts. The neighbouring princes have made her offers of marriage, which she has refused to accept, except on one condition only, namely, that such person shall overcome her in the tournament. Of this, however, they have always been afraid, dreading the reproach of being vanquished by her.
CHAPTER XXIII.

Arrival in China—Its great River: its course—Culture—Population—Plenty—Porcelain—Idolaters—Reigning Monarch a descendant of Jengiz Khân—Mohammedan Colleges, &c.
—Luxury of the Chinese—Wealth—Paper Money—Revenue—How the Porcelain is made—Skill of Chinese Artificers—Painters—Pictures of Travellers—Registry of Ships' Crews—Care taken of Merchants' Property at Inns, &c.—Female Slaves cheap—Inns subject to the Magistrate—
The Port El Zaitûn—Meets an Officer of the Emperor of Dehli—Provided with a House, &c.—Sets out to visit the King—Sin Kilân—Mohammedan Town—Meets with a Jogee; return to El Zaitûn—Arrives at Fanjanfûr: Description of it—Bairam Kaillâ—El Khânâ—Jews and Christians here—Jugglers—The Khân killed in battle—Funeral—Successor—Disaffection—Return.

We then left the countries of 'Tïlîsi, and arrived, after a voyage of seven days with a favourable wind, at the first of the Chinese provinces. This is a most extensive country, and abounds in good things (of every description) fruits, agriculture, gold, and silver: and in these it is without a parallel. It is divided by a river called the 'water of life. It is also called the 'river of Sibar,' like the name of a river in India. It has its rise in the mountains which are in the neighbourhood of the city Khân Bâlik,†

* This river, according to the lexicon of Bandrandius cited by Asseman, is called "Fluvius Caramoranus."

† This is, as Asseman has shewn (Biblioth. Oriental, tom. iii. P. II. p. 512-13) the Câmbalu of Marco Polo, and the Pekin of the Chinese. At this place, according to a citation made by Nicolaus Trigantius, from the Commentaries of Mathæus Ricius, was the usual residence of the Tartar Khân, after they had obtained the supreme power in China. Our traveller, as we shall presently see, also makes this place the residence of the Emperor in his times. The extract is as follows: "Hoc nostrorum in hanc urbem regiam (Pekinum) adventu constare denique certo cepit, quod jamdi opinari fuenter, hoc regnum illud ipsum esse, quod munum Chatajum apud reliquis auctores appellatur; et hanc urbem Pechinensem regiam esse illius, quem magnum Can vocant, qui nunc est rex Sinarum, que urbs ab iisdem Cambalu nominatur...
Sine quiunque scriptis libris quoties Tartaros nominabant, Là dicunt, et septentrioris plagam Pâ, nec solum Pâ. Tartaris vero Cam, à nobis magnus redditur: quam vocem ne ipsi quidem Sine ignorant: et quoniam eo tempore, quo se Tartari in Sinarum regnum intruerunt, rex Tartarum sedem Pechini fixit, ideò Câmbalu appellavit; et quoniam apud varios p consonans in b commutatur, ideò Câmbalu cepit appellari." And, in the next page, "Apud Aytosum in lib. de Tartaris, cap. 19. Jons appellari his verbis: Iste Cobiâ Can quadranginta duobus annis tenuit imperium Tartarorum: Christianus fuit, et fundavit civitatem que vocatur Jons in regno called the "mountain of the apes. It then proceeds through the middle of China, for a distance of six months, until it passes by Sin El Sin, both banks of which are covered with villages and farms, just like the Nile of Egypt, except that this is much more populous. In China grows the sugar-cane, and is much better than that of Egypt. All the fruits of our countries are found in China, but they are much more plentiful and cheap than they are with us.

As to the China earthenware, it is made only in the districts of El Zaitún, and Sin Kilân. It is made of earth of the mountains of those parts, which is burnt through like charcoal. To this they add a stone, which they keep in the fire for three days. They then pour water upon it, and it becomes like dust: it is then fermented for some days: the best of it, for five and thirty days; that which is inferior, for fifteen, ten, or fewer. Of this ware, some is transported to other countries. The Chinese hen is large, but the cock is still larger, and greater than (our) goose: its eggs are proportionately large.

The Chinese are all infidels: they worship images, and burn their dead just like the Hindoos. ¹ The King of China is a Tartar, and one of the descendants of Jengiz Khân, who entered the Mohammedan countries, and desolated many of them. In all the Chinese provinces, there is a town for the Mohammedans, and in this they reside. They also have cells, colleges, and mosques, and are made much of by the Kings of China. The Chinese, generally, will eat the flesh of dogs and swine, both of which are sold in their markets. They are much addicted to the comforts and pleasures of life: but they do not much differ, either in their luxuries or their dress: for you will see one of their merchants, whose wealth is almost immense, clothed in the coarsest cotton. The only difference generally observable among the inhabitants of China, consists in the gold and silver plate which they severally possess. In the hand of every one of them is

¹ I mean the mountains of the apes. ² Sin Kilân. ³ Jengiz Khan. ⁴ CATHAY.

Cathay, quæ major est Româ, ut dicitur; et in illâ civitate moram traxit Cobila Can Imperator Tartarorum usque ad ultimum diem vitae sua. ⁴ Asseman adds that Cobila renewed rather than repaired this city, and then cites Marco Polo to shew that the Khan resided here, and that the city was situated upon the great river.
a staff, upon which he supports himself in walking; and this they call the third leg.

Silk is most plentiful among them, for the silkworm is found sticking and feeding upon the trees in all their districts; and hence they make their silk, which is the clothing of the poorest among them. Were it not for the merchants, it would bring no price whatever, and still, a cotton dress will purchase many silken ones.

It is a custom with their merchants, for one to melt down all the gold and silver he may have, into pieces, each of which will weigh a talent or more, and to lay this up over the door of his house. Any one who happens to have five such pieces will put a ring upon his finger; if he have ten, he will put on two. He who possesses fifteen such, is named 1 El Sashi; and the piece itself they call a Rakila. Their transactions are carried on with paper: they do not buy or sell either with the dirhem or the dinar; but, should any one get any of these into his possession, he would melt them down into pieces. As to the paper, every piece of it is in extent about the measure of the palm of the hand, and is stamped with the King’s stamp. Five and twenty of such notes are termed a shat; which means the same thing as a dinar with us. But when these papers happen to be torn, or worn out by use, they are carried to their house, which is just like the mint with us, and new ones are given in place of them by the King. This is done without interest; the profit arising from their circulation accruing to the King. When any one goes to the market with a dinar or a dirhem in his hand, no one will take it until it has been changed for these notes.

With respect to the earth which they lay up, it is mere tempered clay, like the dry clay with us. It is carried upon elephants, and then cut into pieces just like charcoal; they then harden it with fire, but in a more intense heat than that of charcoal. When it is reduced to ashes they knead it with water, dry it, and again burn it in the same manner, until the particles entirely disappear. Of this they make the china vessels, as we have formerly stated. The people of China are, in other respects, the most skilful artificers. In painting, none come near to them. Of what I myself witnessed was the following: I once scarcely entered one of their cities: some time after, I had occasion again to visit it; and what should I see upon its walls, and upon papers stuck up in the streets, but pictures of myself and my companions! This is constantly done with all who pass through their towns. And should any such stranger do any thing to make flight necessary, they would then send out his picture to the other provinces; and wherever he might happen to be, he would be taken.

It is also a practice with them, that when a vessel leaves China, an account, as well of the names, as of the forms of the men in it, is taken and laid up. When the vessel returns, the servants of the magistrates board it, and compare the persons in it with the descriptions taken; and if one should happen to be missing, the commander of the vessel is taken, unless he can prove that the man has died by some sickness or other circumstance, or that he has left him, with his own consent, in some other of the Chinese provinces. After this, they require of the commander a register of all the goods in the vessel, which they obtain. The people of the vessel then leave it, and the King's servants take possession of, and clear it; and if they find any thing in it not entered in the register, the vessel, together with its freightage, is forfeited to the King. This is a species of oppression which I witnessed no where else.

When any Mohammedan merchant visits those Mohammedan towns which are among the Chinese, it is left to his choice whether he will take up his lodgings with a native merchant, or whether he will go to an 'inn. If he prefers lodging with a merchant, an account of all he has is taken, and the native merchant is made surety for the amount, who spends upon his guest just as much as is proper. When the foreign merchant wishes to go, an inquiry is set on foot with respect to his property, and if any thing is found to have been made away with, the merchant who was made surety makes it good by fine. But should the stranger prefer going to an inn, his property is delivered up to the inn-keeper, who is made surety for it. He then expends what is necessary upon him, and this is put down to account. When he wishes to leave, an account of the property is taken, and should any thing be missing, the inn-keeper who is surety is forced to make it good. ‘If however, he wishes to have a concubine, he may buy a female slave and reside with her in the inn. Female slaves are very cheap in China; because the inhabitants consider it no crime to sell their children, both male and female.’ They do not, however, force them to travel with their purchasers; nor, on the other hand, do they hinder them from doing so, should they prefer it. In like manner, if one wishes to marry, he may do so; but, in any case, he is not allowed wantonly to destroy his own property: for they say, we are unwilling that it should be reported among the Mahommedans, that our country is a place of wantonness and profligacy; or, that merchants lose their wealth among us.

The care they take of travellers among them is truly surprising; and hence their country is to travellers the best and the safest: for here a man may travel alone for nine months together, with a great quantity of wealth, without the least fear. The reason of this is, there is in every district an inn, over which the magistrate of the place has control. Every evening the magistrate comes with his secretary to the inn, and registers in a book the names of all the inmates who are strangers: he then locks them up. In the morning he comes again with his secretary, and compares the name written down, with the person of every one in the inn. The register so made out he sends by a messenger to the presiding magistrate at the next station: from whom he also brings back vouchers that such and such persons have safely arrived with their property. This is done at every station. When any person happens to be lost, or any thing is stolen, and this is discovered, the magistrate who has the control over the inn in which the loss is sustained, is taken into custody on that account. In all the inns every thing that a traveller can want is provided.

The first city I came to in China was 'El Zaitūn; there are, however, no olives here,* nor indeed in all China or India; this is merely the name of the place. It is a large city, and in it they make the best flowered and

---

* As this word in Arabic signifies the olive, the writer, perhaps, thought it necessary to warn his reader against mistaking it. The longitude and latitude of this place are according to Abulfeda 114° 8', 17° 8'. Mr. A petz thinks it is the same with the "Saunt yo Tawn," mentioned in Lord Macartney's voyage.
coloured silks,* as well as satins, which are therefore preferred to those made in other places. Its port is one of the finest in the world. I saw in it about one hundred large junks; the small vessels were innumerable. It is a large estuary of the sea, running into the land until it meets the great river. In this, and other Chinese towns, each inhabitant has a garden and some land, in the centre of which is his house; and on this account it is that their cities are so large.†

On the day of my arrival at this place, I saw the Emīr who had been sent ambassador to the Emperor of India, and who returned with us (to Malabar) when the junk foundered and went down; he, however, escaped with his life. He told the officer of the Dīwān of me, who placed me in a very handsome house. I was afterwards visited in this by the Mohamme- dan judge, the Sheikh El Islām, and a number of the Mohammedan merchants, who treated me with great respect, and made a feast for me. These merchants are, on account of their residing in an infidel country, extremely glad whenever a Mohammedan comes among them: on such occasions they give him alms of their wealth, so that he returns rich like themselves.

When the magistrate of the city heard of my arrival, he wrote immediately to the Khān, who is their Emperor, to acquaint him of my having come from India. I requested of him, however, that he would send a person to bring me to 9 Sin Kilān, to the Emīr of that place, until he should receive the Khān’s answer. To this the magistrate agreed, and sent a person with me, who conducted me to him. I embarked, therefore, in a vessel on the river, and made a voyage of twenty-seven days, in each of which we put into some village about noon, bought what we happened to want, then said our prayers, and proceeded on in the evening. On the next this was repeated, and so on till we got to Sin Kilân. At this place, as well as El Zaitûn, the earthenware is made: at the latter of which, the river called the 'water of life enters the sea; and which they, therefore, call the 'conjunction of two seas.

---

* As the word here used, كَمَحَّا, does not occur in the common dictionaries, it may not be amiss to give an explanation of it. The following is taken from the King of Oude’s Persian Dictionary, entitled the Seven Seas: كَمَحَّا بِكَسَر أَوْلُ وَسُوْكُ مُمْ مَعْنَى مِنْ خَيْرَ بَأْسَ السَّيْدُ مَعْنَى جَامِعَةُ مَشْقَةً آمَدُهُ كَبَالوْنِ مَخْتَلِفُ بَاقْهَهُ بَأْشِدُ وَبَقْتُ أَوْلُ هُمْ كَفَّهُ أَنْدُ مَعْنَى جَامِعَةُ مَشْقَةٍ مَّكِنَّت i. e. Kimkhā, &c. meaning a flowered garment, which they weave with various colours. When pronounced kamkhā it means a flowered garment of one colour only.

† Such seems to have been ancient Babylon, with its hanging gardens and grazing lands. See Rennell’s Geography of Herodotus.

This Sin Kilân is one of their greatest and best formed cities. In the middle of it is a great temple, which was built by one of their kings. This he endowed with the revenue of the city and of the surrounding villages. In this are apartments for the sick, the aged, the blind, and the great Fakeer Sheikhs, and the endowment affords them provisions in great plenty. A picture of this king is painted in the temple, and worshipped by the inmates. In a certain part of this province is a town in which the Mohammedans reside. It has a market, a mosque, and a cell for the poor. Here is also a Judge and a Sheikh El Islâm: nor is there any doubt that there must be, in all the towns of China, Mohammedan merchants who have a Judge and a Sheikh El Islâm, to whom their matters are referred. In this place I resided with one of the merchants, and remained among them for fourteen days; during which time, not a day passed without my receiving presents from them. Beyond this city, neither the Mohammedans nor infidels of China have another. Between it and the obstruction of Gog and Magog* there is, as I was told, a distance of sixty days. The people who inhabit that place eat all the men they can overcome: and hence it is that no one goes to those parts. I did not see any one, however, in these parts, who had either seen the obstruction himself, or who had seen one who had seen it.

I was also told in 'Sin Kilân, that a considerable personage was in that neighbourhood, who was upwards of two hundred years old; that he never ate, drank, spoke, or took any delight whatever in the world; his powers were so great and so perfect; and that he lived in a cave without the city, in which also his devotions were carried on. I went to the cave, and saw him at the door; he was exceedingly thin, and of copper colour. He had marks of a devotional character about him; but had no beard. When I saluted him, he seized my hand and smelt it. He then said to the interpreter: This man is just as much attached to this world, as we are to the next. He said to me: You have seen a wonder. Do you remember when you came to an island in which there was a temple, and a man sitting among the images, who gave you ten dinars of gold? I answered, I do. He rejoined: I am the man. I then kissed his hand. He then considered for a little time, and went into the cave, seeming to repent of what he had said. And as he did not come out again, we forced ourselves, and went in after him. Him, however, we did not find; but there was one of his companions, who had before him a number of the paper notes.

* Some have thought that by this expression is meant the great wall. See Asseman, Bib. Orient. tom. iii. P. 2, p. dxiv.
These, said he, are your feast; so go back. I said, We wait for the old man. He replied: If you stay here for ten years, you will not see him; for it is his practice, that when he has exhibited one of his mysteries to any one, that man sees him no more. Nor suppose that he is absent; the fact is, he is now present. I much wondered at this, and returned. I have, on a former occasion, related the affair of the Jogee, who gave us the dinars, when among the images in the temple of a certain island.*

After this, I told the story of the old man to the Judge of the town, and the Sheikh El Islâm, who said: Such is his general practice with those strangers who go to see him; but no one knows what religion he is of.
The person, continued he, that you supposed to be one of his companions, was the old man himself. I have been told, too, that he had disappeared for about fifty years, but returned to this place within the last year; that the Sultan and others beneath him, visit the old man, and that he gives each of them presents suitable to his station. He gives presents, in like manner, to the poor who visit him. In the cave in which he lives there is nothing to attract the attention; and his discourse is of times that are past.
He will occasionally speak of the Prophet, and say: Had I been with him, I would have assisted him. He also speaks of "Omar Ibn Khatâb, and with peculiar respect of 'Ali son of Abu Talib. I was told by 'Auhad Oddîn of Sanjar, the head of the merchants, that he one day entered the cave, when the old man took him by the hand. I had, said he, immediately the idea that I was in a large palace, that the Sheikh was sitting in it upon a throne, with a crown on his head, and his servants standing before him. I thought I saw the fruits falling into streams there; and taking one to eat, I found myself in the cave standing before him, and him laughing at me. I had, however, a severe fit of sickness in consequence of this, which did not leave me for some months. After this I visited him no more. The people of this country think he is a Mohammedan, but no one has seen him pray, though he is constantly fasting:

I now returned to the city of El Zaitūn by the river; and, soon after my arrival, came the answer of the Khān to his Lieutenant there, in which it was ordered, that I should be honourably provided for, and sent to the presence, either by land or by the river, as I might choose. They accordingly provided me with vessels and servants, and I proceeded at the charge of the Sultan by the river, leaving one village in the morning, and arriving at another in the evening. This we did for ten days, and then arrived at the city of Fanjanfur, which is a large and handsome place situated in a plain, and surrounded with gardens, something like the plain of Damascus. Here I was met by the Judge, the *Presbyters of Islamism, and the merchants, with the Emir of the city and the officers of his forces, by whom the Emperor is entertained in the most honourable manner. I accordingly entered the city. It has four walls. Between the first and second of these are the Emperor’s servants, who watch the city; between the second and the third, are the troops of cavalry, and the city magistrate; between the third and fourth are the Mohammedans; where also I took up my residence with their Sheikh, *Zahir Oddin. Within the fourth wall are the Chinese; and this is the largest part of the city. It was strange enough that, one day, when I was at a feast which they had made for me, in came one of the great Mohammedan Fakeers, whom they welcomed by the title of the *Sheikh Kawām Oddin. After the salutation, and his joining our society, I was wondering at his appearance, and had looked on him for some time, when he said: Why do you continue looking at me, unless you know me? I then asked him of his native place. He said, it was *Subta (Ceuta). I said: Well, I am from Tanjiers. He then renewed his salute and wept; and at this I wept too. I then asked, whether he had been in India. He

* We here recognize something like the simple and affecting scene between Jacob and Rachel said: Yes; at the palace in Dehli. When he said this, he came to my recollection; and I said, are you El Bashiri? He said: Yes. He had come to Dehli with my uncle, Abul Kāsim El Mursī, when he was young and before a beard had appeared on his cheek. He was then one of the most clever at retaining the Korān by memory, and of those termed benchers. I had mentioned him to the Emperor of India, who accordingly wished to retain him in office. But this he did not accept of. His wish was to go to China. The Emperor had given him three thousand dinars, and he had then set out for China. In China he was put in office among the Mohammedans, and became possessed of great wealth. After this, he sent me several presents. His brother I met, some time after, in Südān; what a distance between these two brothers! In 'Kanjūrā I resided fifteen days; I then proceeded by the river, and after four days arrived at the city of 'Bairam Katlü, which is a small place, the inhabitants of which are very hospitable. In this place there were not more than four Mohammedans, with one of whom I resided for three days, and then proceeded by the river a voyage of ten days, and arrived at the city of 'El Khansā. The name of this place is similar to that of the poetess "El Khansā,† but I do not know whether the word is Arabic or not, or whether the Arabic has any agreement or not with their language.

This is the largest city I had ever seen on the face of the earth: its length is a journey of three days, in which a traveller may proceed on and find lodgings. It is, as we have already said of the manner of building among the Chinese, so constructed, that each inhabitant has his house in the middle of his land and garden-ground. This city is divided into six cities: all of which are surrounded by a wall, and of which we shall presently say more.

---

at the well. Gen. 29, 10–12: "And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban, his mother's brother, &c. he lifted up his voice and wept."

* According to Ferihta and others, this should seem to be the name of an office in the court of Dehli.

† For some account of this poetess, see M. de Sacy's Chrestomathie Arabe, tom. ii. p. 413, edit. 2. The place is probably the Chens of the maps. See also Assemani, Biblio. Orient. tom. iii. P. ii. p. 512.
When we approached this city we were met by its judge, the presbyters of Islamism, and the great merchants. The Mohammedans are exceedingly numerous here. This whole city is surrounded by a wall: each of the six cities is also surrounded by a wall. In the first reside the guards, with their commander. I was told that, in the muster-rolls, these amount to twelve thousand. I lodged one night in the house of the commander. In the second division are the Jews, Christians, and the Turks who worship the sun: these are numerous, their number is not known: and theirs is the most beautiful city. Their streets are well disposed, and their great men are exceeding wealthy. There are in the city a great number of Mohammedans, with some of whom I resided for fifteen days; and was treated most honourably. The third division is the seat of the government. In this resides the chief "commander of all China, with the forces. When I entered its gate, my companions were separated from me, on account of the press, and I remained alone. I was here met by the prime minister, who carried me to

* It does not seem possible, without positive history on the subject, to ascertain at what period the Jews entered China. Some fix upon the year 224 before Christ: others on other periods less ancient: but, as far as I can see, not much reliance is to be placed on any one of them. The reader may, however, consult the tract by Christop. Theop. de Murr, containing the Noticia S.S. Bibliorum Judæorum in Imperio Sinensi, with the Diatribe de Sinicis S.S. Bibliorum Versionibus, Haæ ad Salam, 1805, and the works there mentioned.

† These were, probably, some of the Nestorian Syrian Christians, who seem to have been first sent into China for the purpose of propagating the Christian faith, from the churches in Malabar, commonly styled the Christians of St. Thomas, &c. See the Bibliotheca Orientalis of Asseman, tom. iii. P. II. pp. 512-552, where every particular relating to the history of these Christians is discussed in a very able and interesting manner. We are told, in p. 519, that the Chinese call the Christians Terasi or Terai, which, according to a conjecture of Trigautius, must be either Arabic or Persic, not Armenian. The truth is, it is the Persic ترا: a general name given to Christians by the Persians, as may be seen in the Dabistan, the Gulistan of Sadir, &c.; and if it be true that the Chinese so term them, one would be led to suppose, that Christianity must first have gone from Persia to China. Asseman concludes upon the words of Trigautius: "Christianos in Sinarum regno Nestorianos fuisset, non Armenios, neque ex Armenia, sed partim ex Assyria et Mesopotamia, partim ex Sogdiâ, Bactriâ et India illuc convolasse, eo maxime tempore, quo Tartari in illud regnum invaserunt, ipse Marcus Paulus Venetus, qui a Trigautio citatur, pluribus in locis affirmat, ubi quoties Christianorum in Sinis meminit, eos Nestorianos vocat." Asseman argues, however, that Christianity was not originally Nestorianism in China. But his interesting article should be read throughout.
the house of the commander of the forces, the Emīr *Kartī. This was the person of whom I have already given some account, who cast his eyes upon the goat's-hair garment which had been given me by the friend of God, the *Sheikh Jalāl Oddin of Shirāz. This fourth city is the most beautiful of all the six. It is intersected by three rivers. I was entertained by the Emīr Kartī, in his own house, in a most splendid manner: he had brought together to this feast the great men of both the Mohammedans and Chinese. We had also musicians and singers. I stayed with him one night. At the banquet were present the Khān's jugglers, the chief of whom was ordered to shew some of his wonders. He then took a wooden sphere, in which there were holes, and in these long straps, and threw it up into the air till it went out of sight, as I myself witnessed, while the strap remained in his hand. He then commanded one of his disciples to take hold of, and to ascend by, this strap, which he did until he also went out of sight. His master then called him three times, but no answer came: he then took a knife in his hand, apparently in anger, which he applied to the strap. This also ascended till it went quite out of sight: he then threw the hand of the boy upon the ground, then his foot; then his other hand, then his other foot; then his body, then his head. He then came down, panting for breath, and his clothes stained with blood. The man then kissed the ground before the General, who addressed him in Chinese, and gave him some other order. The juggler then took the limbs of the boy and applied them one to another: he then stamped upon them, and it stood up complete and erect. I was astonished, and was seized in consequence by a palpitation at the heart: but they gave me some drink, and I recovered. The judge of the Mohammedans was sitting by my side, who swore, that there was neither ascent, descent, nor cutting away of limbs, but the whole was mere juggling.\footnote{Terzî. جلال الدين الشيرازي. النياب الغنوارة.}

On this very night I entered the fifth city, which is the largest of them. It is inhabited by the common Chinese people, among whom are the most ingenious artificers. In this place are made the *Khansāwīa garments. The most wonderful things they make, are dishes composed of reeds glued together, and painted over with colours, such that when hot meat is put into them they do not change their colour. Ten of these may be put into one another; and the person seeing them would suppose them to be only one. For these they have a cover, which contains them all; and their softness is such, that should they fall from a height they would not break. They are wonderful productions.

After this, I entered the sixth city, which is inhabited by sailors, fishermen, ship-caulkers, and carpenters. I was told after this by the wealthy Mohammedans, that some of the relations of the great 'Khān had revolted, and that they had collected an army, and gone out to give him battle; they had collected an hundred companies of cavalry, each company of which amounted to ten thousand. The Sultan had on this occasion, of his own particular friends and stipendiaries, fifty thousand cavalry; and of foot soldiers, five hundred thousand. He was also opposed by the greater part of the nobles, who agreed that he ought to abdicate the throne, because he disregarded the regulations of the Yasāk, * laid down by his ancestor Jengiz Khān. They accordingly went over to the side of his uncle's son, who had set up a claim against him. They also wrote to the Khān, advising him to abdicate the throne; and promising that the province of 'El Khansā should be apportioned to him. This he refused to accede to, and gave them battle; but after a few days he was put to the rout and killed, before I had arrived at his palace.† The news of this soon came to the city, and drums

* لانه كان غير حكاماً يماثكل. See p. 91, note.
† I can find no account whatever in De Guignes or others of the death of this Emperor; but, as no change seems to have happened in the dynasty, and, according to our traveller, the uncle's son succeeded to the throne, no notice might generally have been taken of the circumstance. The dynasty of Yuen seems to have reigned from the latter end of the thirteenth century of our era to 1369, during which period nine Emperors of the descendants of Jengiz Khān are said to have held the supreme power in China. Now, it is very remarkable, that, of the first eight of these the longest reign is only thirteen years, while the ninth is made to continue through a period of thirty-six, i.e. from 1333 to 1369. It strikes me, therefore, that this reign is too long, and that the reign of another Emperor ought to be inserted between the eighth and ninth of them, in order to make the account probable; and if the relation of our traveller be true, such reign actually took place: and with the close of this the Yuen dynasty ceased. See Assman, Biblioth. Orient. tom. iii. P. II. p. 535. De Guignes, tom. i. P. I. p. 279. In the last of which we are informed of several rebellions having taken place.
and trumpets were sounded accordingly during the space of two months, for joy at the accession of the new Khân. The Khân who had been killed, with about a hundred of his relatives, was then brought, and a large sepulchre was dug for him under the earth, in which a most beautiful couch was spread, and the Khân was with his weapons laid upon it. With him they placed all the gold and silver vessels he had in his house, together with four female slaves, and six of his favourite Mamlûks, with a few vessels of drink. They were then all closed up, and the earth heaped upon them to the height of a large hill. They then brought four horses, which they pierced through at the hill, until all motion in them ceased; they then forced a piece of wood into the hinder part of the animal till it came out at his neck, and this they fixed in the earth, leaving the horses thus impaled upon the hill.

The relatives of the Khân they buried in the same manner, putting all their vessels of gold and silver in the grave with them. At the door of the sepulchres of ten of these, they impaled three horses in the manner just mentioned. At the graves of each of the rest, only one horse was impaled. This was a notable day; all the people of the city, Chinese, Mohammedians, and others, were present on the occasion, and had on their mourning, which consists of a sort of white hood. I know of no other people who do so on such occasions.

When, however, the former Emperor was killed, and Firûn, the son of his uncle who had made war against him, had been put in power, he chose to fix his residence at 'Kora Karûm,† on account of its nearness to the

---

* See a very curious note on this subject in Mr. Marsden's Translation of Marco Polo, n. 878, p. 451, whence it appears that the Russians found great quantities of plate, arms, &c. in the graves of the Tartar chiefs; and Bell's Travels in Asia, Pinkerton, vol. vii. pp. 335-6.

† According to D'Herbelot, Caracoram, ville qui Octai Kaan fils de Genghizkhan bâtît dans le pays de Cathai après qu'il l'eut subjugué: elle fut aussi nommée Ordu Balik, et c'est peut-être la même que Marc Paul appelle Cambalu. Mungaca ou Mangu Caan, fils de Tuh Kan, et petit fils de Genghizkhan, quatrième Empereur des Moguls, faisait son séjour ordinaire dans cette ville. Voir le titre de Cara Khotân. See also Histoire des Mongols, Liv. II. chap. i. p. 347.
territories of his uncle the "King of Turkistan and ʿMāwarā El Nahr. But those nobles, who had not been present at the death of the former Khān, revolted. Upon this occasion they stopped up the roads, and the disaffection spread itself like a flame. The leading men among the Mohammedans advised me to return to the city of El Zaitūn, before the confusion should become general: and accordingly, they petitioned the minister of King Firūn to give me permission, which he did, with an order for my maintenance, according to custom.

CHAPTER XXIV.

I then returned by the river, descending from El Khānsā to Ḥanjanfūr, and thence to the city of El Zaitūn. When I got there I found some junks bound for India, and got into one belonging to El Malik El Zāhir King of Sumatra, whose servants are Mohammedans. In this we sailed with a good wind for ten days. The sky then became obscure and dark, and a storm arose, in consequence of which the vessel got into a sea unknown to the sailors. The people in the junk were all terribly afraid, and wished to put back: but it was impossible. After this we saw, one morning at day-break, a mountain in the sea, at the distance of about twenty miles, and towards this the wind was carrying us. The sailors wondered at this, because we were far from land; and because no mountain had been observed in that part of the sea. It was certain that, if the wind should force us to it, we should be lost. We then betook ourselves to repentance and prayer to Almighty God, with all our hearts; and, in addition to this, the merchants made many vows. The wind then became calmed in some degree: when, after sun-rise, we perceived that the mountain we had seen was in the air, and that we could see light between it and the sea. I was much astonished at this: but, seeing the sailors in the utmost perturbation, and bidding farewell to one another, I said, Pray what is the matter? They said, What we supposed to be a mountain, is really a Rokh, and if he sees us, we shall assuredly perish, there being now between us and him a distance of ten miles only. But God, in his goodness, gave us a good wind, and we steered our course in a direction from him, so that we saw no more of him; nor had we any knowledge of the particulars of his shape.

After two months from this day, we got to Java, and shortly after landed at Sumatra. Here we met with the King of the place El Malik El Zahir, just returning from a victory, and bringing many captives with him. He received us very honourably, and supplied us with every thing necessary. He was then about to marry his son and heir. I was present at the wedding, and witnessed the closeting. It was a strange ceremony;

* The name of a bird so large that he is able to take up and fly away with a whole rhinoceros at once. The King of Oude’s Persian Dictionary (sub voce ُعْجَرُ) gives the following account of it: نام جانوریست که از نزدیکه دار خارچ و جرد ندارد و آن که معروف است که فیل و کدنی زا طمعه بچه‌هاي خون می‌کند غلاف و درو غ معروف می‌شود. It is the name of an animal, which like the Ankā (or Smurgh, the fabulous bird said to be on the mountain Kaf) has no external existence. The one, commonly believed to feed its young with the elephant and rhinoceros, is known to exist only in error and falsehood.

In Mr. Maraden’s interesting edition of the Travels of Marco Polo, we have a similar, but more particular, account of this bird. “Persons,” says the traveller, “who have seen this bird assert, that when the wings are spread they measure sixteen paces in extent from point to point; and that the feathers are eight paces in length, and thick in proportion.” We are told, a little lower down, that the Grand Khan having heard of this extraordinary bird, sent messengers to the island of Magastar, or San Lorenzo, to inquire about it, and that they brought back a feather of it, which highly gratified his majesty. This, however, the traveller states on the report of others (p. 707). Mr. Maraden’s opinion on the subject is stated in note 1440, where he says, he believes it to be the albatross magnified into a monster. The bird, he thinks, might occasionally migrate from more southern latitudes to the island of Madagascar. What Ibn Batūta saw was, probably, a real mountain; the light he saw under it, might perhaps have been occasioned by what is termed the mirage.
I never saw any thing like it elsewhere. It was this: They set up a large sort of pulpit in the court-yard of the palace, and covered it with silk. The bride then came from the inner apartments on foot; with her were about forty ladies, carrying her train; these were the ladies of the Sultan, his nobles, and ministers. They were all unveiled and exposed to the gaze of high and low. This, however, is not customary among them, except on the occasion of some noble marriage. The bride now ascended the pulpit, preceded by musicians and singers, male and female, who danced and sang. After this came the bridegroom, who was the King’s son, mounted on an elephant, and sitting on a throne placed on the back of the animal. Over his head was an awning. He had a crown on; and on his right and left were about a hundred young men, sons of Governors, Ministers, and Generals. These were all clothed in white, and riding on horses caparisoned. On their heads were caps set with gold and jewels; and every one of them was beardless. When the prince came in, dirhems and dinars were scattered among the people. The Sultan himself sat and witnessed the whole. The prince then alighted and walked to his father; and taking hold of his foot kissed it. He then ascended the pulpit to the bride, who rose to him and kissed his hand. He then sat by her side; the ladies standing before them richly dressed out. The fawfel-nut and betel-leaf were then brought in, and the bridegroom taking some in his hand put it into her mouth. The bride next took some, and put it into his mouth. The bridegroom then took a betel-leaf, and put it into his mouth, then into her’s. The bride did the same to him. The covering of the pulpit was then let down upon them, and the whole was carried into the interior of the palace.* When the people had feasted themselves, they all dispersed.

I remained in this island for two months as the King’s guest. I then was put on board one of the junk, the Sultan having presented me with some lignum aloes, camphor, cloves, sandal-wood,† and provisions. I then set sail for Kaulam, where I arrived after a voyage of forty days. After

---

* See Marshen’s History of Sumatra, p. 266, &c.; Crawford’s description of marriage ceremonies in Java, vol. i. pp. 88-93.

† On this wood as found in the islands of the Indian Archipelago see Mr. Crawford’s work, vol. i. pp. 519-20.
this I went to Kālikūt in Malabar. I then went aboard a vessel, and after a voyage of eight and twenty days came to Zafār. This was in the month of Moharram, in the year forty-eight (i. e. A. H. 748; April, A. D. 1347.)
At this time I found its King, ʻEl Malik El Nāsir, son of El Malik El Moghīth, the same person who reigned when I formerly visited this place.∗
From this place I sailed to Maskit El Torayāt, then to the port of ʻShiah, then to the port of Ṣelba, the name of which is the feminine form of Kelb (a dog); then to ʻTelhān; all which places are subject to the government of Hormuz, but are considered as belonging to Ammān. I then proceeded to Ṣuruz, and stayed there three days. From this place I went to Kuristan (Kūzistān), and from thence to ʻLār, then to ʻJanja Bāl, from this place to Kaldūn, where I remained three days. I then proceeded to Ḥakān; then to ʻSaman, then to the city of ʻSabā, and thence to ʻShirāz, when I found ʻAbū Is-hāk, the reigning king;† but who was then absent from Shirāz.
I then went on to ʻMāin, then to Ḑazdkhāsh (Yezdkhās), then to Kalil, then to ʻKansak, then to Ḑispahān, then to Ḑostar, then to El Hawāir, (Ha-wāiza?) then to Ḑasra, then to Meshhed Ali Ibn Abī Tālib, then to Ḑūf, then to Ḑarsar, then to Ḑagdad, where I arrived in the month of Shawāl in the year 48 (i. e. 748), the King of which was at that time the Ṣheikh Hasan, son of the aunt of the Sultan Abu Sa’d. After this I proceeded to the city of Ḑambār, then to Ḑit, then to Ḑadhitha, then to Ḑana, then to Ḑel Rahba,‡ then to Ḑel Sakhna, then to Ḑadmor, then to Ḑamascus of ∗ See p. 54.

† ʻAbū Is-hāk was, according to Mirkhond, the reigning King in Persia at this time; and, in this very year he undertook an expedition against Karmān, see p. 40.
‡ El Harawi, after stating that this was one of the districts belonging to Emess, proceeds to say, that there is in the Meshed of this place, Syria; the whole time of my absence from which had been twenty full years. The chief judge of the sect of Shāfa was now Taki Oddin El Sabki. From this place I went to Aleppo, and then returned to Damascus, then to Jerusalem, and to the city of 'El Khalil (Hebron), then to 'Gaza, then to 'Damietta, then to 'Fariskür, then to 'El Mahalla El Kobra (or the great station), then to 'Damanhūr, then to 'Alexandria, then to 'Cairo. At this time there was a general plague throughout Egypt. I was told that the number of those who died daily in Cairo amounted to one and twenty thousand. The reigning prince at the time I entered Egypt was El Malik El Nāsir Hasan Ibn El Malik El Nāsir Mohammed Ibn Kalāwün. I then proceeded from Cairo on the way to Upper Egypt, for Aidhāb. There I took shipping, and got to 'Juda, then to 'Mecca, may God ennable it! I arrived at this place in the month of 'Shaabān, in the nine and fortieth year (i.e. A. H. 749); and in this year I performed the pilgrimage. I then returned with a Syrian caravan to 'Taiba, the city of the prophet. I visited his grave, and returned with them to Jerusalem. I then hired a passage back to Cairo; but, as a desire of seeing my native country now came upon me, I prepared to take my journey to the west. I travelled, accordingly, to Alexandria; and, in the month Safar, A. H. 750, I set sail and arrived at the island of 'Jarba. From this place I sailed in another vessel to 'Fez, then to 'Safākus, then to 'Milyāna, then to the city of 'Tūnis, then to وعرن مقدار شهرين وقيل وزنه خمسة وتلئتين رطل بالمرج (بالرقمي) وذكر بعض العلماء أن الرحبة لم يكن بها الروم أبداً أحدها ملته بطول وليس بسيم ونها بناها السرماد بكرش وهي مدينة مذكورة في النزارية. A thigh bone of one of the giants, the length of which is three cubits; its width is that of two spans. It is said that its weight is five-and-thirty rats (of Rahba). Some of the learned, however, say that there is no monument of antiquity in Rahba, and that it was first built by Malik Ibn Ta'uk; which is not true: for it was built by Nimrod, son of Kūsh; and it is a city mentioned in the Bible.—It is, probably, the city Reboboth, which we are told, Gen. x. 11, was built by Ashur. This is, no doubt, the truth: and, if so, the historians mentioned here, as well as by Mr. Ewald in his Mesopotamia of El Wâkelt (p. xiii) are to be treated as fabulous.

'Tilimsān: then to the 'palace of Fez, where I arrived in the latter part of the month Shaabān, in the year 750. The reigning king at this time was the Commander of the Faithful, 'Abu Anān. I presented myself to him, and was honoured by a sight of him. The awe that surrounded him, made me forget that of the King of 'Irāk; his elegance, that of the Emperor of India; his politeness, that of the King of ʿYemen; his bravery, that of the King of the Turks; his mildness, that of the Emperor of Constantinople; his religious carriage, that of the Emperor of ʿTurkistān; his knowledge, that of the King of ʿSumatra; for he so overwhelmed me with his favours, that I found myself quite unequal to express my gratitude. In Fez, too, I terminated my travels, after I had assured myself, that it is the most beautiful of countries. The poet has truly said of it:

† Ask me my proof: Why in the west Countries you find the sweetest, best?
'Tis this: Hence rides the full orb'd moon,
And hither hastes the sun at noon.

It was now my wish to visit the tomb of my father; and accordingly I left Fez for Tanjiers. From that place I went to ʿSubta. It then occurred to me, that I should have pleasure in the warfare for the faith; I therefore set sail from Subta to Spain; and the first place I saw was the ʿHill of Victory. This is one of the greatest refuges of Islamism, and one which forced sorrow down the necks of the idolaters. From this place commenced Islamism, in the great victory; for here landed ʿṬārīk Ibn Ẓiād, the slave of ʿAbū ʿMūsā Ibn ʿNāṣir, at the time of his passing over to Spain. From this circumstance it was named after him, and called ʿJabal Ṭārīk.

Spain.

(corrodedly Gibraltar). It is also called the Hill of Victory, because his beginnings had their commencement here. But, a despicable foe had had possession of this place for about twenty years, until our Lord the Sultan Abu El Hasan reduced him, and sent his son with an army, which he strengthened with many reinforcements, and obtained a complete victory. He then rebuilt and strengthened its fortifications and walls, and stored it with cavalry, treasure, and warlike machines. This was one of his good deeds, the effects of which still remain.*

I proceeded from the hill of victory (Gibraltar), which is one of the most extensive and handsome strongholds of Islamism, where I had met its celebrated and learned men, of whom one was my maternal uncle’s son, Abu El Kāсим Ibn Batūta, after I had remained there some days, and then went to the city of Marbella, which is a strong and handsome place. From this place I went to the city of Malaga, one of the chief cities of Andalúsia. Its charming districts lie together, and enjoy the advantages both of sea and land. It abounds with excellent productions, so that eight rats of grapes are sold for a small dinar. Its figs and pomegranates are unequalled.

From this place I travelled to the city of Tabsh, from that to Hama, which is a small town, and in which there are warm springs. I then went to Granada, the chief city of Andalúsia, which, for its structures and

---

* Abu’l Hasan, according to Mr. Conde, mounted the throne of Fez in 1330, and held Gibraltar during the greater part of his reign. At what time he gained possession of it, we are not told; but that he was in the habit of supplying his friends and allies in Spain with troops and ammunition, there can be no doubt. The French translator and editor of Mr. Conde’s work is most likely correct when he says, “Cet Abul Hasan ne fut point roi de Maroc, comme on l’a dit, mais roi de Fez.” Tom. iii. p. 187. But, whether he is so, when he further says, it, “Il n’est pas non plus exact de dire, avec quelques historiens Espagnols, qu’Abul Hasan envoya en Espagne son fils Abdelmélek avec une armée; Abdelmélek n’était point fils, mais général du roi de Fez—” Ibn Batūta has not informed us; for he has said nothing about the name of this son of the King of Fez: he has only told us, that he sent his son: and so far it is probable the Spanish historians are correct. In a note a little lower down (p. 213), we are told that, “Plusieurs historiens Espagnols disent qu’à cette occasions Abul Hasan envoya une armée sous la conduite d’Aly, un de ses fils...Les Arabes affirment positivement un fait bien différent, puis qu’ils disent qu’Abul Hasan n’envoya point de secours.” I merely remark, that Ibn Batūta here agrees with the Spanish historians in the fact of a son of Abul Hasan’s having been sent: and by them he is here named Ali, not Abdelmélek.

2 G 2
suburbs is unequalled in the whole world. It is divided by the well-known river "Shenil; besides this, however, there are many other rivers, as well as cisterns, gardens, orchards, and palaces, surrounding it on all sides. The King of Granada was at this time Abu El Walid Yusuf Ibn Nasir. (I never met him, on account of a disease under which he then laboured. His noble and excellent mother, however, sent me some dinars for my support. I here met some of the learned men of the place, of whom the most surprising was a young man named *Abu Jaafar Ahmed Ibn Rizwân El Jadhâni. His astonishing peculiarity was this, that although he was brought up in a desert, and had never either studied or given himself any trouble about learning, yet he produced poetry so good as scarcely to be equalled by the most accomplished writers. The following is a specimen.†

Friend, from whom 'tis pain to part,
Take thy station in my heart.
Through my eye, its lucid door,
View the structure o'er and o'er;
There enthroned thou'll always see Every chamber filled with thee.
But when from thee, with pain distrest
I feel the void within my breast,
My vacant eyes too well declare Their favourite inmate is not there:
But, when thy charms my spirits fill,
I close my lids to keep thee still.†

* This prince, who is styled by Mr. Conde (tom. iii. p. 229) "le vertueux Jusef Abul Kégag, was assassinated at Granada in 1554, and was succeeded in the throne by his son Mohammed the Fifth.

† One of the MSS. reads, and for the species, that termed, and consists of six feet, of the measure, repeated, with its variations. See Clarke’s Prosody, p. 55, &c.
CHAPTER XXV.

Gibraltar — Subta — Asilâ — Salâ — Morocco — Mklouâa — Fez — Sigilmása — Thagâtâ — Tâs-hâla—
The great Desert—Abu-Lâtîn — Mûli — Zaghari — Kâranjû — Hippopotami — Customs at court
— Tambactû — Kawkawa — Nakda or Tukadda — Hakât — Sigilmása — Fez.

From Granada I went to the Hill of Victory, and from that place took shipping and sailed to 'Subta; then to 'Asilâ, then to 'Salâ.* I then travelled from that place by land to 'Marrâkish (Morocco), which is a most beautiful city, of extensive trade and territory. One of its poets has thus described it.

† Morocco blest, in site, in health,
Brave in nobles, great in wealth:
Here will the homeless wand’rer find,
Welcome to cheer his drooping mind:
One only doubt can now remain,
Such as to give a moment’s pain:
Whether the eye or ear can boast,
The privilege of blessing most.

* This is, according to Abulfeda, an ancient and thickly inhabited city, having on its west the ocean, and on its south a river, with gardens and vineyards. It is said that Abd El Mûmin, its high priest, built a large palace on the bank of the river on its south and adjoining the sea: and, that his followers choosing the parts adjoining, built the city which was called El Mehdîya. Salâ, it is added, is a moderate-sized district of the extreme western division, and the nearest part of it to Spain. Its soil consists mostly of red sand: the river is large, and is subject to the reflux of the tide. The city abounds with provisions. The districts subject to its rule are on its south, and are called Tâmasnâ, abounding with cultivation and pasturage.

† مراکش

Allah مرکش الکرمانی بلد
الله نالفیمنان مصرف لبیا الاراده بالرغم
ابن العدید بها کیهیل

This verse is of the sort termed مستعمل نافع مصنف فعل نفل repeated. See Clarke’s Prosody, p. 53, &c.
From this place I went to "Miknāsa,"* then to the palace of "Fez,"† and presented myself to the Commander of the Faithful, the Sultan "Abu Anān," may God give him happiness.‡ After this I bade him farewell, with an

* This place is near Fez, and situated on its north. It is remarkable for the great number of its olives. Ibn Said has said that Miknāsa consists of two white cities, separated from each other the distance of a horse's course. It is one stage from Fez. Its river is called the Fulfal. وَمَا بُقِّبَ مِنْ فَاس مدِينَت مَكْنَاسة وَهِيَ عَلَى فَاس فِي الشَّرْط وَهِيَ مَيْشَأٍ لَكَهْرُةٍ التَّرَابِينَ وَمِن المملكة مَكْنَاسَة بِكَسَمِيْدم وَكَونَ الكَافِرِينَ وَالْفَحُولِ وَكَانَ مَحْمُوَبَهَا وَهُوَ قَالُ أَبِي سَعِيْدُ ومَكَانَاءُ مدِينَتَانِ بِيْنَهَا شَوْرَةٌ فَرْسُ وَهِيَ عَلَى فَاس عَلَى مَرْحَلَةٍ ومَكَانَاءُ نَهْرِ يَسْمِيَ فَقْلٌ. &c. See also Ulenbroek’s Irraca Descriptio Proleg., p. 15.

† Fez is, according to Abulfeda, placed in the different longitudes and latitudes of 3° 8', 34° 8', 30° 8', 25° 8', 20° 50', 38° 8'. He then describes it: فَاس مَدِينَتَيْنِ يَسِيرَ بَيْنَهَا نَهْرُ فَاس وَمَا عَدَّهَا عَشَرُ بَابًا وَلِيْمَايَةٌ تَجْرَيْنَ بَاشَا تَجْرَيْنَ وَهَدَّيْرَها وَحَوْمَاتُهَا وَلَا بَيْنَهَا. وَكَبْرَتْ هَاذَةَ الْمَدِينَةِ بَيْنَاهَا وَهُمْ لَا شَرْعُوا فِي حَفْرَهَا الْمَدِينَةِ وَجَدُوا فَاسًا فِي مَوْضِعٍ أَطْرَفٍ سَمَّى تَرْكِيلَا وَهُوَ أَنْهَا. دَخَلَ الْمَدِينَةَ سَيْلَا مَجَاهِيَة مَجَاهِيَة تَدُورُ بَيْنَاهَا وَهُوَ وَأَلَّاهُ فَاس مَخْصُوصُ بِقَرَاهَا المَجَاهِي وَالْقَلْعَةَ بَاقِيَ مَكَانُهَا وَهُوَ الْقَلْعَةُ الْهِنُّي فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ فَاسْتَغْلِبُ الْأَرْضَ Fas consists of two cities, between which runs a river, and contains several springs which supply streams. Both cities have in all thirteen gates. The water thus supplied runs into the streets, houses, and baths, a thing witnessed neither in the east nor the west. The place was founded since the times of Islamism. Ibn Said has related after El Hijāżī, that when they began to dig for the foundations they found an axe (Fas) in the excavations, and hence it took its name. It is said, that there are within the city and upon its river about three hundred water-mills constantly worked by the stream. The people are remarkable for the comforts of life which they enjoy. El Fas is its citadel, which is situated on the highest spot in it, and through which the river runs. There are here three mosques, in which there is preaching; and from it to Subta is a distance of ten days. The source of its river is half a day's journey from the city; it then runs through meadows and among flowers until it enters the place. Fez is said, in the Atwāl, to be a village of Tanjiers. See also D'Herbelot, under Fas.

‡ There is so much confusion and error in Mr. Conde's history of these times, that it seems quite impossible to determine from him who this Abu Anān was, or when his reign commenced. The French translator and editor of this work says (p. 339), it is vraisemblable que cet Abu Salem est le même que Fariz; que son frère Omar, élu dans un premier moment de trouble, ne intention to visit 'Südän (Nigritia), and came to 'Sigilmäsā, which is a very handsome city. It produces many very good dates (fruit), and in the abundance of these it may be compared with Basra, except only that those of this place are the best. I lodged at this place with the theologian, "Mohammed El Bashīrī, the brother of him I had seen in the city of 'Kanjanfur, in China. I proceeded from this place in the beginning of the month Moharram, and of the year 753 (February 1352), with a large company of merchants and others; and, after a journey of five and twenty days, arrived at "Thaghārī, a village in which there is nothing good, for its houses and mosque are built with stones of salt, and covered with the hides of camels. There is no tree in the place; it has nothing but sand for its soil; and in this are mines of salt.† For this they dig in the earth, and find thick tables of it, so laid together as if they had been cut and placed under ground.‡ No one, however, resides in these (houses) except conserva point la couronne, et qu'elle passa à Abu Zeyan. Ce qui augmente l'embarras, c'est que d'autres font succéder à Abul Hasan un autre de ces enfants nommé Abu Hanan ou Aluan. M. Conde cite même ce dernier comme regnant à Ceuta," &c. From the work of Ibn Khaldūn, however, the history of the Berbers, which now lies before me, it appears that Abu Anân was a son of the Sultan Abul Hasan, and that he left the lieutenancy of Tilimsān and succeeded to the supreme power in Fez, A.H. 749, A.D. 1348. As it is my intention to edit and translate this work, I shall forbear giving any extracts from it at present, merely stating, that it is full and particular on the circumstances of these times in Africa.

* One of the MSS. has تاغزا constantly, Mr. Kosegarten Tagūzā.

† Edrisi, however, tells us that the only salt mines known in Südän are situated in the island of Awil, which is in the sea; and that from this place ships bring the salt, which is thence carried to the different parts of Südän; that these ships enter the Nile, and pass on to Sali, Takrūr, Bari, Ghana, Nakara, Kūgha, &c. فاما جزيرة أول في البحر وعلى مقرة مجتمعة من الساحل وبها ملح المشهورة لا يعلم في بلد السودان مباشرة غيرها ومنها جمل الملح إلى جميع بلد السودان وذلك ان المركز تأتي في هذه الجزيرة وتتوري بها الملح وتسيمه أي موقع النيل وبيهما مقدار مجرى تجري في النيل على سلي وكوبري ونافع وساحر البلد وتقار وووه وجميع بلد السودان How this can all be true I know not; I merely give it to shew the opinions of the Arabs in the times of Edrisi.—Sect. i. clim. i.

‡ Mr. Kosegarten's copy adds..." quarum binæ (i.e. tabulæ) cameli onus efficiunt" (p. 46). See his notes, p. 50. In Major Denham's Narrative, p. 24, we have an account of some very extensive salt-pits.
the servants of the merchants, who dig for the salt, and live upon the dates and other things which are brought from "Sigilmāsa," as well as upon the flesh of camels. To them come the people of Sudān from their different districts, and load themselves with the salt, which among them passes for money, just as gold and silver does among other nations; and for this purpose they cut it into pieces of a certain weight, and then make their purchases with it.† The water of "Taghārī" is poisonous; we found it injurious. Of this they take, however, to carry them over the desert, which is twenty stages in extent, and is without water.‡ After passing this we arrived at "Tās-hālā" a stage at which the caravans stop and rest.

---

* Abulfeda gives the longitude and latitude of this place from the Kānūn, 20° 5', 31° 30'; from Ibn Said 18° 34', 36° 34'; and describes it thus: "ودريها شرق وشرقي سجلماسة تامة بولاية مشهورة ولا تهريباً من الجرب والشرق وينقسم نوره على سرق سجلماسة وغربيها وعليها الباطين الكبيرة وسجلماسة ميثانه شواب ومنها خرجت شريان النهر والخليج وغير ذلك من النهر وعلي جميع باتانيها وخلها حافيا عند غار الغرب ماحاته أربعون ميلاً وهي مدينة ثالث الأفاساء بين بلد الغرب وبلد السودان وليس في جنوبها ولا غربيها عمارية قال ابن معيد وأهلها يسمون الكلب ويكولونا وازنينه صفين مهل. Sigilmāsa is eastward of Darha, and is the capital of the district so called. It has a river which comes from the south-east, divides, and passes by the east and western parts of the city. It abounds in gardens, and has eight gates; at which gate soever of these you go out, you will see the river, the palms, and other trees. Around all the gardens and palms there is a wall intended to keep off the predatory Arabs, and this encloses a space of forty miles. The city adjoins the desert which divides between the western districts and Sudān. No building is to be seen either to the south or west of it. Ibn Said has said that its inhabitants poison dogs and eat them, and that its soil is soft and easy of culture. See also D’Herbelot, under Segelmessa.

† "A handful of salt (purchased) four or five good-sized fish."—Denham’s Narrative, p. 46.

‡ "Taghārī., as before.

§ Mr. Kosegarten’s MSS. adds here: "وإكمالا بهذه السحر كارهة ويكثر الفيل بها جداً فتجمى الناس في أعماق حيوا فيها النزيف ليس لها. acc. which he translates thus: "Tuberibus vero abundat; magna etiam in eo ricinorum copia, quamobrem homines cervici imponunt virgam argento vivo munitam, qua illos occidant."

|| One of the MSS. reads تاهلا: Mr. Kosegarten’s copy تاهلا.
three days, and then prepare to enter the great desert, in which there is neither water, bird, nor tree; but only sand and hills of sand, which are so blown about by the wind, that no vestige of a road remains among them. People can travel, therefore, only by the guides from among the merchants, of which there are many. The desert is, moreover, exposed to the light, and is dazzling. We passed it in ten days. We then came to the city of Abu Lātin, in the beginning of the month Rebia El

---

* Mr. Kosegarten adds: "Inde etiam litteras dant mercatores ad incolas urbis Eiwelātn, quibus domus sibi conducere jubeat, et aliquem Mesoṣītarum mercede conducunt, qui litteras ferens ipso praecedat," &c. I have no doubt, however, that for Mosītura (in one MS. Mosītura), a word often used for merchants in our MSS. and in some cases where Mr. Kosegarten's has the translation, Instead of "Mesoṣītarum," we shall have Mercatores in the translation, and in the several places in which this word occurs.
See his notes, p. 50. Zena is with us, which, no doubt, correct.
† So in Denham's Narrative, p. 13.
‡ So Major Denham in his journey to Moursuk, Narrative and pp. xix, lii, 28.
§ Mr. Kosegarten's copy has two months, which is probably the true reading. Mr.
Kosegarten has a very extraordinary passage here, which I cannot forbear noticing, it is this:
Whihe he translates (Desertum, &c.): "daemonii frequantatum, quae sepe virum litteras ferentem ita fascinant, ut mortem oveat; quae factio major etiam agminis pars interire solet. Nam si eviv salus ad Eiwelātn pervenit, Eiwelātnis incolarum multis, aquam serentes, ad quatuor dierum iter agminis obviam eunt, si vero perierit, obviam eius fit nemo, et plerique eorum abu-numtur siti." Having met with nothing like this, either in Ibn Batūta or any other Oriental traveller, I very much suspect there is some error in the text. Now if we read instead of the words we shall have all clear and consistent. The translation will then be, Et estas est in eo maxima, ita ut qui iter cum litteris fector sepe errare indicatur atque interesse:
idcirco pars maxima agminis peribit quoque, quippe qui, &c. The want of water being evidently assigned as the cause why numbers of the caravan perish. I have no doubt, therefore, that there is an error in Mr. Kosegarten's MS.

|| One of the MSS. constantly reads Ayūltān, not declining the word, as the others do as if compounded of Abu and Lātin. Mr. Kosegarten has occasionally this word. See Mr.
Kosegarten's notes, p. 50.
AWWAL. This is the first district of 'Südän; which, as they say, belongs to a lieutenant of the Sultan of the countries of 'Farbā (which means a lieutenant). When we had got to this place, the merchants stowed their goods in an open area, and charged some blacks with the custody of them. At this place I lodged with a man from 'Salā. But it was my wish to return from 'Abū Lātin as soon as I had witnessed the vile dispositions of the blacks, and the contempt in which they held the white people. It then occurred to me, however, that I would complete my knowledge of these countries; and accordingly we remained at 'Abū Lātin fifty days. It is an exceedingly hot place, with a few small palm trees in it, under the shade of which they sow the melon. The water of the place is found in pits, having been absorbed by the sand.† Mutton is in great plenty.‡ Their clothing is all brought from Egypt. The greater part of the inhabitants are merchants. Their women are exceedingly beautiful, and more respectable than the men. The character of these merchants is strange enough, for they are quite impervious to jealousy. No one is named after his father, but after his maternal uncle; and the sister's son always succeeds to property in preference to the son: a custom I witnessed no where else, except among the infidel Hindoos of Malabar. But these are Mohammedans, who retain their prayers by memory, study theology, and learn the Korān by rote. As to their women, they are not shy with regard to the men, nor do they veil themselves from them, although they constantly accompany them at prayers.§ Any one who wishes to marry one of them may do so; but he must not take her with him out of the country; and, even if the woman should wish to go, her family will not allow her. It is a custom among them, that a man may have a mistress, of women strangers to him, who may come and associate with him, even in the presence of her own husband and of his wife. In like manner, a

---

* See Mr. Kosegarten's Notes, p. 50, and Major Denham's Narrative, p. 20.
† مَا لا ْأَحْسَنَ
‡ Major Denham frequently speaks of the sheep he saw and partook of in Südän. Narr. p. 107, &c.
§ A similar account is given of the Tuareg women in Major Denham's Narrative, p. 65, as well as of others generally throughout this narrative.
man will enter his own house, and see the friend of his wife with her alone, and talking with her, without the least emotion or attempt to disturb them; he will only come in and sit down on one side, till the man goes. Upon a certain day I went in to the Judge of 'Abu Lātīn, who was an eminent man, at that time my host, and with whom I had formed a friendship. I saw with him a handsome young woman, and wished to leave him: for I knew his wife, and that this was a different person. The woman smiled at me, but did not blush. He said: This is my female friend; she is no stranger. I remonstrated with him, and said: This is a strange woman; you are an eminent Kazī, and Judge of the Mohammedans: how, then, can you be alone with her? He said: This is our custom; nor is there any suspicion from our being in society together. He did not, however, benefit (by my advice), nor did I visit him after this.†

I then proceeded from 'Abu Lātīn ‡ to 'Mālī, § the distance of which is a journey of four and twenty days, made with 'effort. The roads are safe, so I hired a guide and proceeded with three of my companions. These roads abound with trees, which are high, and so large that a caravan may shade itself under one of them.|| As I passed by one of these trees, I saw a weaver weaving cloth within a cleft of its trunk. Some of these will grow so corrupt,¶ that the trunk will become like a well and be filled with

---

† Two of our MSS. differ here from Mr. Kosegarten’s; our passage is.
‡ See Mr. Kosegarten’s notes, p. 50.
§ Mr. Kosegarten’s is sometimes with us ایو لاتین ابی لاتین as the case may require.
In one place Mr. Kosegarten gives ایو لاتین (p. 42, line 9), which I have no doubt is intended for ابی لاتین. It is impossible to say which reading is the true one.
¶ The original, with Mr. Kosegarten, is which he translates, “interiora ita sunt excavata,” &c. With me it is only وبها لبنان است. The last word here is the only the rain-water, and from this the people will drink. Sometimes the bees will be in these in such numbers that they will be filled with honey, which travellers take for their use. It is affirmed by Ibn Jazzi El Kelbi, the Epitomator (of this work), that there are in Andalūsia two chestnut trees such, that a weaver may sit and weave cloth in them. Ibn Battūta proceeds: The gourd grows so large in "Sūdān, that they will cut one into halves, and out of these make two large dishes*. The greatest part of their vessels, moreover, are made of the gourd. After ten days from our leaving Abu Lātīn we came to the village 'Zāghāri which is large, and inhabited by black merchants. Among these lives a number of white people, of the 7Ibāzīa sect of heretics†.

We then left this place and came to the great river, which is the Nile. Upon it is the town of 1Kārsanju, ‡ from which the Nile descends to one about which there can be any difficulty; and, if our MSS. may be relied on, our word must signify became corrupt, taking the root to be أَصَبَت, which Golius gives as equivalent to بنَصَبَت, and prefixing the syllable استآست, to the tenth conjugation, we shall have استآست, fem., which must mean it became corrupt, rotten, &c.; as in استولى, he became or governor, he became vizier, and the like. But Mr. Kosegarten has أَصَبَت, for the root, and then the verb must also mean it became corrupt, and not excavated: the general meaning, however, is tolerably near. But what are we to say to Mr. Burckhardt, who has taken this for the name of the tree, and has called it the Istaset? See Appendix iii. to his Travels in Nubia, p. 536.

* Gourds are in abundance in Sūdān. Denham's Narrative, p. 14, &c.

Mr. Kosegarten has a passage here, which I deem worthy of transcription; it is this:

والصفراء هذه الحمر لا يحمل ما ولا زادة وإنها يحمل قطع الثمار والسلع الطازجة. وكثرما تجمعهم منها الفريك والطيب فادأ ملآية، جما نا السودان بالثمار والغرق والبراز والرغام، وعساها جما بالثواب والتراث ان انرم يبركة بالطيب، &c. His translation is: "qui per hoc desertum iter faciunt, neque aquam neque comatum secum vehunt, nisi frusta salis, et mercimonia aromatica, quorum gratissima incolis sunt Caryophylla et mastichæ. Quum ad urbem accesserint, Nigrorum mulieres afferunt lae, gallinas, oryzam et farinam, (he should have added, atque istis salem et aroma emunt) "oryza eorum vero alborum valetudinis infesta." On the gourd see his note, p. 51, and Major Denham's Narrative, p. 25.

† Mr. Kosegarten adds "et aliquot Sunnītē Malikītē." WRG. من السني مالكا, Kārsanju.

‡ Mr. Kosegarten has 1Kārsanju. See his note on this place, p. 51, who seems to have no doubt that Ibn Battūta's account of the course of the Niger must be the true one. See also Leo Africanus, who doubts this; edit. 1632, p. 7.
Kābārā, then to ʿZāgā, the inhabitants of which were the first (in these parts) to embrace Islamism.† They are religious, and fond of learning. From this place the Nile descends to ʿTambactū,‡ then to ʿKawkaw,§ of

• This is probably the Zagāwa (زغوا) of Abulfeda, who thus describes it after Ibn Said:

قَالَ أَبُو سُعْدٍ وَكَافِا الزَّغَارِيِّينَ حِيْثَ الْطَّلِبِ نَهْ (يَهْ)؟ وَالْعَرْضُ نَدِيدُ (يَدَى)؟ وَرَدَّ اسْمُهَا وَدَخَلُوا فِي طَائِئَةٍ

الكَاهِنِيِّينَ وَفِي جَذُورُهَا مُدِينَةٌ زَغَارِيَّةٌ وَحُرَّاتُ الزَّغَارِيِّينَ وَالنَّاجِيِّينَ مُمَدَّدَةٌ فِي المَصَافٍ الّتِي عَلَى اعْمَاجٍ

النَّيلِ وَهُمْ جَنْسٌ وَاحِدٌ غَيْرِنَ النَّاجِيِّينَ حَصُوّةٌ صَوْرةٌ وَخَلَقُهَا مِنَ الزَّغَارِيِّينَ نَالَ في الْعَرْضِ وَمِنْ دِينْهَا

الْيَلِيْدُ زَغَارَةٌ وَحَدِّيِّنَالْعَرْضِ عَشْرَينَ مُرَحَّلَةٌ. The principal city of the people of Zagāwa is where the longitude is 55° (15?) and the latitude 54° (14?). They have embraced Islamism, and are subject to those of El Kānām. In the south of this district is the city of Zagāwa. The villages of the people of Zagāwa and Tājū are extended through the space situated upon the windings of the Nile. They are people of the same stock, except that those of Tājū are the handsomest and best behaved. It is said in the Azīzī, that from Dongola to the country of Zagāwa westward is a distance of twenty stages.

† Our MSS. have here ظاهرا قدماً في السلام, &c. Mr. Kosegarten divides one of the words thus: ظاهرا قدماً في إسلام, &c, which he thus translates. "Sagha, cujus incolae sacra islamitica non nimis curant," &c., which, as far as I can see, is erroneous.

‡ Mr. Kosegarten writes this word Tumbaktū, but without any authority mentioned for doing so. Mr. Burckhardt always writes it Timbuctoo, just, I suppose, as he heard it pronounced by the Arabs. Our MSS., however, when they have the vowel points write ئَتُبْكَتْوَا, ئَتُبْكَتْوَا, Tumbaktū, or ئَتُبْكَتْوَا, Tumbaktū, but never Timbuctū. Mr. Kosegarten’s MS. probably had ئَتُبْكَتْوَا. Leo Africanus writes the first syllable with ɡ, and in Bello’s Map we have Tonbactoo. Denham, p. 109.

§ Abulfeda says of this place (i. e. تُوْبکت): كل ايبن سعيد زوكو مقر صاحب ثلاث البلد وهو (كوكو). كافير يقابل من غربي مسلمي غانه ومي شرقي مسلمي الكاهن ووكو نهر مسروب اليا وهي ف

شيئي نهرا ثالث في القنوات ووكو راحة بي خذا الخطاف ويبي أهل القنوات الصلب في البرزى وترش كوكو عشر قارال ومسلمين. It is said by Ibn Said that Kawkaw is the residence of the Sultan of these parts, and that he is an infidel: opposite to him on the west are the Moslems of Ghāna, and on the east, those of El Kānām. This place has a river named after itself: but the place itself is to the eastward of this its river. It is said in the Ḫânūn that Kawkaw is situated between the equinoctial line, and the beginning of the first climate. It is said in the Azīzī, that the latitude of Kawkaw is 10 degrees; and that the inhabitants are Moslems. Of the Ghāna just mentioned he says:

وَمَحْذِرَةٌ غَنَانِ السَّلَاطِينَ بَلدَة غَانَهِ وَيَعْدُى إِنَّهَا مِنْ نَزْلٍ أَعْصَمُ بَلَى عَلَيْهَا إِسْلاَمٌ وَإِلَيْهَا غَانَهِ تَسْخِيرُ الْتَجَارِ العَالِيُّ بِمِنْ مَجِلَاسِهِ فِي بَلَدٍ مُفْتَرِسِ وَمَفْتَرَسٍ عَظِيمٍ لَّحَسَنٍ خَسَمِينٍ يَوْمَا وَيَوْمًا وَيَحْضَرُونَ مِنْهَا خِيرٌ
both which we shall give some account. It then proceeds to the town of *Mâli, which is the extreme district of *Mâli. It then goes on to Yuwi, the greatest district of Südân, and the king of which is the most potent. No white person can enter here; for, if he attempt to do so, they will kill him before he reaches it. The Nile then descends from this place to the countries of *Nubia, the inhabitants of which are Christians; then to *Dongola, which is the largest district they possess; the king of which is named *Ibn Kanz Oddin, who became a Mohammedan in the times of *El Malik El Nasir. The Nile then descends to the cataracts, which terminate the regions of Südân, dividing them from Upper Egypt.†

From *Kârsanjû, I went to the river *Sansara,‡ which is about ten miles from *Mâli. I then went to the city of *Mâli, the residence of the King.

---

الذحب الأحمر وقد حكي ابن سعيد أن فنانة نيا هو شقيق نيل مصر قال ومضته في البحر المحيط عند طول عشرة ونصف وعرض أربع عشرة فيكون بين مسحة وبين غانه نحو أربع درج، غانه على ضفتي نيلها تال ونانه مدينة أحداها يسكنها المسلمين والأخرى الكافرا. In the city of Ghâna is the residence of the King of the districts of Ghâna, who lays claim to being a descendant of Hasan son of Ali. To this place travel the western merchants from Sigilmâs through an immense desert of fifty days, and from it they bring nothing but red gold. Ibn Said has said that it has a Nile, which is a branch of the Nile of Egypt, and that it flows into the ocean in the longitude of 10° and in the latitude of 14°, so that between this place and Ghâna is a distance of about 4 degrees. Ghâna stands on both sides of its river. It is also said that Ghâna contains two cities, one of which is inhabited by Moslems, and the other by infidels. Our MSS. give the former of these places كوكو kauku, not kûkû. Abulfeda is silent on the subject. Mr. K. has كوك which he writes kûkî.

* One of our MSS. give بوي Buwi. Mr. Kosegarten has بوي, but no vowels; he writes however, Joi. This is, most probably, the "Yeou" of Major Denham, which he places on the bank of a river, Narr. p. 147.

† Mr. Kosegarten has a remarkable addition here, which is this: "hoc loco in littore fluminis crocodilum vidi, scopae minori simiлем." Wrote the traveler beside the place where he is near the coast Crocodiles in Südân, pp. 156, 228, and perhaps on the very same river.

‡ See Mr. Kosegarten's note on this river, p. 51.
I there inquired for the residence of the white people, and lodged with them;* they treated me very honourably. The Mohammedan Judge of the blacks, who was a celebrated Hāji, made me his guest, and sent me a present and a cow.† I was sick two months in Mǎli. But God restored me.

It happened that Mansi Soleimān,‡ the Sultan of Mǎli, a most avaricious and worthless man, made a feast by way of kindness. I was present at the entertainment with some of our theologians. When the assembly broke up, I saluted him, having been brought to his knowledge by the theologians. When I had left the place he sent me a ‘meal, which he forwarded to the house of the Judge. Upon this occasion the Judge came walking hastily to me, and said: Up, for the Sultan has sent you a present. I hastened, expecting that a dress of honour, some horses, and other valuables, had been sent; but, behold! they were only three crusts of bread, with a piece of fried fish, and a dish of sour milk. I smiled at their simplicity, and the great value they set on such trifles as these. I stayed here, after this meal, two months; but saw nothing from him, although I had often met him in their friendly meetings. I one day, however, rose up in his presence, and said: I have travelled the world over, and have seen its kings; and now, I have been four months in thy territories, but no present, or even provision from thee, has yet reached me. Now, what shall I say of thee, when I shall be interrogated on the subject hereafter? Upon this, he gave me a house for my accommodation, with suitable provisions. After this, the theologians visited me in the month of Ramadān, and, out of their whole number, they gave me three and thirty methkāls of gold. Of all people, the blacks debase themselves most in presence of their king: for when any one of them is called upon to appear before him, he

* We have some notices of white people in this neighbourhood by Major Denham, which were supposed to be Christians. See his Narrative, p. 178, 145, &c.

† Oxen seem to be plentiful in Sūdān. Denham’s Narr. p. 107, &c.

‡ One of our MSS. reads with Mr. Kosegarten مانسی سلومان pointing however the first مانسی سلومان which he writes in Latin Menassi, which, I suppose, he must have done by conjecture.
will immediately put off his usual clothing, and put on a worn-out dress, with a dirty cap; he will then enter the presence like a beggar, with his clothes lifted up to the middle of his legs; he will then beat the ground with both his elbows, and remain in the attitude of a person performing a prostration. When the Sultan addresses one of them, he will take up the garment off his back, and throw dust upon his head; and, as long as the Sultan speaks, every one present will remain with his turban taken off. One of the best things in these parts is, the regard they pay to justice; for, in this respect, the Sultan regards neither little nor much. The safety, too, is very great; so that a traveller may proceed alone among them, without the least fear of a thief or robber.† Another of their good properties is, that when a merchant happens to die among them, they will make no effort to get possession of his property: but will allow the lawful successors to it to take it. Another is, their constant custom of attending prayers with the congregation; for, unless one makes haste, he will find no place left to say his prayers in. Another is, their insisting on the Koran’s being committed to memory: for if a man finds his son defective in this, he will confine him till he is quite perfect, nor will he allow him his liberty until he is so. As to their bad practices, they will exhibit their little daughters, as well as their male and female slaves, quite naked.‡ In the same manner will the women enter into the presence of the King, which his own daughters will also do. Nor do the free women ever clothe themselves till after marriage. The greatest part of them will eat stinking dead bodies, dogs and asses.§

I travelled, in the next place, from Māli, the Sultan having given me a hundred methkāls of gold, which place I left in the month Moharram, in

---

* These customs were witnessed by Major Denham and his companions. See his Narrative, pp. 118, 168, 287, &c.
† See Mr. Kosegarten’s note, p. 51. Leo Africanus says, speaking of the parts about the Niger: “Longa est admodum via, secura tamen atque tuta.” (P. 11, edit. 1632.)
‡ So Major Denham attests, Narr. pp. 145, 147, 169, &c.
§ See also Denham’s Narrative, p. 145.
the year fifty-four (A. D. February, 1353), and came to a "gulf which branches out of the Nile, and upon the banks of which there were very large beasts. I wondered at them, and thought they were elephants from the great numbers there are in those parts: but when I saw them enter the water I enquired about them, and was told, that they were "sea-horses," which go out to graze, and then return to the water. They are larger than the land horses, and have manes and tails: their heads are like those of horses, and their legs like those of elephants. I was told by some credible black "Hajis, that the infidels of some parts of Sūdān will eat men; but that they will eat none but blacks, because, say they, the white are injurious on account of their not being properly matured; and, that when their Sultan happens to send his ambassadors to one of the Kings of the black Mohammedans, and intends to honour them with a feast, he also sends to them a black slave, whom they kill and eat, and then return their thanks for the honour and favour done them."

After some days I arrived at the city of "Tambactū, the greater part of the inhabitants of which are merchants from "Lathām, which is a district of "Māli. Here is also a black magistrate, on the part of the Sultan of "Māli. I next arrived at the city of "Kawkaw, which is large, and one of the most beautiful in Sūdān. They here transact business with the "cowrie (see p. 178), like the inhabitants of Māli. After this, I arrived at the city of "Bardāmā, the inhabitants of which protect the caravans. Their

---

* Major Denham witnessed large numbers of these animals, p. 187, &c.
† See Mr. Kosegarten's note, p. 51, and Major Denham's Narrative, pp. 154, 162, 177, 231, &c.
‡ There must be some error in the text here.
§ Mr. Kosegarten's work adds

وبينها وبين النيل أربعة أميل ومن تيكتوكينا النيل في قارب منصوب في خشبة واحدة كمانزل كل يوم بالقري ونشيره النازد بالماء والعطر الي ان وصلنا الي مدينة كوكو، &c. which he translates, "a Nilo quatuor milliaribus distat. E Tumbuctu in scapha, que e unius arboris trunco confecta erat, per Nilum invict, singulis diebus in oppida divertimus, commestumque sale et aromatibus coëmissimus, donec ad urbem Kuku appulimus." See his note also, p. 51.
¶ So in the Journal of an excursion from Murmur to Kano, Denham's Narrative, p. 51, &c.
Mr. Kosegarten has بُنَاءٌ Burdāmā.
women are chaste and handsome. I next arrived at the city of 'Nakdā,* which is handsome, and built with red stone. Its water runs over copper mines, which changes its colour and taste. The inhabitants are neither artizans nor merchants. The copper mine is without Nakdā, and in this their slaves are employed, who melt the ore and make it into bars. The merchants then take it into infidel and other parts of Sūdān. The Sultan of Nakdā is a Berber.† I met him, and was treated as his guest, and was also provided by him with necessaries for my journey. I was afterwards visited by the commander of the faithful in Nakdā, who ordered me to wait on him, which I did, and then prepared for my journey. I then left this place‡ in the month 'Shaabān, in the year fifty-four (A.D. 1353), and travelled till I came to the territories of Ḥakār, the inhabitants of

* One MS. reads takaddā and takaddā. Mr. Kosegarten has takaddā, with a considerable addition to the text, the translation of which is: "Tekedda scorpis abundat. Segetes ibi rares. Scorpii morsu repentium infantibus adferunt mortem, cui remedium occurritur nullo; viros tamen raro perimunt. Urbs incolae in sola mercatura versantur; Egyptum aduent, indeque vestes pretiosas afferunt; de servorum et mancepiorum multitudine inter se gloriantur."

† See on these people the note at p. 17, that these are a part of the same people is highly probable with me: and the reason of their being found so far in the interior might have originally been necessity, arising from their inability to cope with the powerful Arab dynasties of the north. Mr. Setteza supposed the Berbers of Libya and Nubia to be of the same race. Mr.
Burchhardt doubts this. See Travels in Nubia, Appendix iii. p. 585, note.

‡ Mr. Kosegarten has: "Dein reeditus ad Sodschelmasse parato, cum viatorum aegmine Tekeddam reliqui, et Tewät petiti. Septuaginta ab illa stationibus distat, quibus in trajectio viatores commensuum secum vehunt, cun ia nihil ejusmodi reperiantur, nisi lac et butyrum, quum vestibus emuntur. Accessimus Kahor (काहर) que e terris Sultani Kerkerici (करकरकी), est, pabuloque abundat. Inde profecti, per dies tres iter fecimus per desertum habitaculis vacuum, aqua carens; dein per dies quindecim iter fecimus per desertum aqua non carens, sed habitaculis vacuum. Inde in locum bivii pervenimus, ubi via quae in Egyptum tendit, descedit a via, que ad Tewät ducit. Ibidem putem, quorum aquae super ferrum decurrit; si quis vestem iis lavat nigra sit. Inde, post iter per dies decem institutum, pervenimus ad Dehkar; (हकार) i. e. our above). Per eorum terras in quibus herbes rare mensem unam iter prosecuti, accessimus Būdā (बुडा) — ex urbibus Tewätī majoribus est. Qua relicta, in urbem Sodschelmasse venimus, frigidam, nivibus abundantem," &c. which are a tribe of the Berbers, but a worthless people. I next came to *Sigilmäsa, and from thence to *Fez, the residence of the commander of the faithful, to whom I presented myself and kissed hands. I now finished my travels, and took up my residence in this country. May God be praised.

THE END.
LONDON:
PRINTED BY J. L. COX, GREAT QUEEN STREET, 1839.